Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, January 11, 1917.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Municipal Court Branch of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 550, August Sessions, 1916, William H. Armstrong, on October 18, 1916, entered plea of guilty on an indictment charging adultery, and on October 30, 1916, was sentenced to pay costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of six months.

On December 5, 1916, an application for the pardon of this defendant was duly filed. This application was heard at our December meeting, and at that time taken under advisement. At a special session of the board, held today, after having given the matters involved full consideration, we decided in favor of the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, William H. Armstrong.

Armstrong is thirty-six years of age. He was engaged in the business of a real estate broker in the City of Philadelphia. He married his present wife in January, 1912, but in March, 1914, he and his wife separated and lived apart, although he contributed to her support. His guilt on the charge mentioned is beyond dispute. The prosecution was instituted by his wife, but after the plea was entered and defendant was called for sentence the wife sought to have the court suspend sentence on the representation of her belief that the defendant had repented of his act, and that the humiliation and disgrace of his conviction were sufficient punishment. Her petition to that effect was denied by the court, and the jail sentence was imposed as stated.

The following are the reasons put forth in the application for clemency now under consideration:

Though the crime for which petitioner was indicted was an offence against the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, when the circumstances of the case and the weakness of human nature are considered, the sentence of the court was excessive.

That the humiliation and disgrace that petitioner has suffered through his arrest and the imprisonment which he has undergone since October 27, 1916, have been sufficient punishment, and the ends of justice have thus been more fully met than could be accomplished by a further term of imprisonment.

That since his confinement in prison petitioner has suffered greatly both in his physical and mental condition.

That in the business in which petitioner was engaged he had under his charge and control the interests of many other persons, whose interests will suffer seriously if he is compelled to serve the remainder of the term to which he was sentenced.

That petitioner's wife is destitute, and though petitioner was separated from her he was contributing to her support, and she is at the present time very much in need of petitioner's financial help.

That a reconciliation having been effected between petitioner and his wife the interests of society and the Commonwealth will be best served by furthering that reconciliation.

From the statements made to us with respect to the circumstances of this case it is apparent to us that no further good will be accomplished by keeping the defendant in jail the remaining three and a half months of his term. The wife is entirely without support and is likely to become a public charge. A reconciliation seems to have taken place between the man and wife. They have learned their lesson, and the moral effect of the sentence is likely to stand. It seems to us therefore advisable to encourage their desire for another trial at proper living, and with this thought in mind we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, William H. Armstrong, the same to be effective, however, not before January seventeenth instant.

Respectfully submitted,

FRANK B. McCLAIN,
Lieutenant Governor.

Harrisburg, January 17, 1917.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 12, February Term, 1915, Riggi Stella, alias Frank Charles, April 19, 1915, was arraigned on an indictment charging, in the first count, murder, and in the second count, manslaughter. He entered a plea of not guilty generally. After the taking of the testimony the Commonwealth, on April 22, 1915, asked permission to enter a nolle prosequi on the first count, which was granted by the Court, and thereupon the defendant withdrew his plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty on the second count, to wit, voluntary manslaughter. On May 3, 1915, the defendant was sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term and period of not less than six years and not more than twelve years.

On January 3, 1917, an application for the pardon of Stella was duly filed, and the case came on for hearing at our meeting today. We have considered the matter carefully, and it is our opinion that the application is meritorious. We therefore recommended that it be accepted and that a pardon be granted the applicant, Reggi Stella, alias Frank Charles.

Stella, whose alias, we are advised, was applied simply as a means of easier identification, is a foreigner, about thirty years old, a married man, and a worker in and about the mines in the neighborhood of Pittston, Luzerne County. He is represented to have been a quiet and peaceable man, of steady habits, and who took good care of his wife and family of five children. The victim of the homicide was another Italian by the name of Louis Carseletti, who for a year or more boarded with the family of applicant. Carseletti did not carry a very good reputation, and became to be a very unwelcome and undesirable inmate of the Stella household. Stella told him frequently to leave his home and to get boarding elsewhere, but Car-solletti refused to make such a change. Not only did he refuse to leave Stella's home, but he forced his attention on Mrs. Stella, who complained to her husband about his indignities. Finally, on November 18, 1914, Stella insisted that Carseletti should leave, but Carseletti as persistently insisted on staying, and even threatened that Stella would be the first to leave and would leave in a box. Carseletti was a larger and more powerful man than Stella, and he presumed on his physical superiority in his attempt to browbeat Stella. A quarrel was brought on in the applicant's house, and in the course of the fight Stella shot and killed Carseletti. Immediately after the shooting Stella went to Pittston, about three miles distant, and gave himself up to the Chief of Police, stating that he had shot and killed Carseletti and detailing the circumstances.

The substantial reason for clemency set out in the application is justification in the protection of his home. This reason it seems to use is well founded, and in confirmation of this belief we quote a letter from the trial judge under date of January sixteenth, which is as follows:

Having received notice that an application is about to be heard by you for a pardon of Riggi Stella, alias Frank Charles, I have concluded that I ought to write to you giving my impressions of the case as after a hasty examination of my trial notes they are refreshed in my mind.

At first it seemed as if Stella had shot the deceased while the latter was unable to defend himself, having at the time no clothing on excepting a pair of trousers and being engaged in the usual washing to which miners subject themselves after returning from their work. There was, however, much reason to believe that the deceased, who was a boarder in the family of the defendant, had presumed, while a boarder, to do pretty much as he pleased about the house, had refused to leave and seek another boarding house, was noisy and disorderly at the table, had probably been guilty of a simple assault and battery on the wife, had threatened her, and had so conducted himself that she complained to her husband and charged that the deceased had improperly approached her, and that defendant believed this to be the fact. A witness to the crime testified that immediately afterwards, and so quickly after the shooting that it must be considered as part of the res gestae, the defendant was excited, and said that the deceased was a traitor, was betraying him, and that he was revenging himself. There is some evidence that deceased threatened the defendant, and may even have had a revolver nearby.

In imposing the sentence of not less than six nor more than twelve years, I was led by the consideration that no man is justified to take the law in his own hands, but I believe that there are circumstances in the case which may be obtained from a reading of the testimony that would justify a Board of Pardons in granting to the defendant liberty after an imprisonment of not more than a year and a half. As the parole laws do not reach the case, and as this man has a large family that ought to be dependent upon him, and for which prior to this offense he seems to have faithfully provided, I think his release, upon such conditions as your Honorable Board may consider, would not be injurious to the general cause of justice.

Very respectfully,

S. J. STRAUSS,
Judge.

Viewing the case in the light of the facts as stated, we are of the opinion that the ends of justice have been met by the punishment already undergone, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Reggi Stella, alias Frank Charles.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Lackawanna, to No. 161, May Term, 1910

George Hawkins, alias George Raffleyea, was, May 16, 1910, convicted on the charge of robbery, and on May 18, 1910, was sentenced to pay a fine of one hundred dollars, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from fifteen months to five years.

On January 3, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case came on for hearing at our meeting today. The details were explained to us, and under the circumstances, which are to a certain extent rather peculiar, we recommend that the prayer of the applicant be favored, and that a pardon be granted said applicant, George Hawkins, alias George Raffleyea.

The applicant is now nearly forty-two years of age. From his statements he has led a checkered life. About the year nineteen hundred and six he came to Scranton, where he worked for the Pennsylvania Coal Company, where he worked as a car repairer. In nineteen ten he married in that city. In nineteen nine, while on a visit to Philadelphia, which in reality was a drunken spree, he became involved in an altercation, and was arrested and sentenced to the County Prison for three months on the charge of larceny. After his release he returned to Scranton and again fell into the habit of drinking. In April, 1910, while on a spree, he took up with a woman of the street, with whom he spent several days carousing, with the result that she charged him with robbing her of $28.50. On the trial of this charge his previous sentence in Philadelphia county was disclosed, and he was sentenced accordingly, and it is from this sentence that he now asks to be released. After serving about twenty-seven months of this term, that is twelve months more than the minimum, he was released on parole. He behaved himself well while on parole for a reasonable time, and the Board of Inspectors of the penitentiary had about decided to recommend his final discharge and pardon, when in September, 1914, he unfortunately made another slip and fell into drinking. He went on a spree to New York and Brooklyn. In the latter city he took up with another woman of the street, and while drunk married her. He was arrested on the charge of bigamy, and sentenced, December 8, 1914, by the New York Court, to an imprisonment of five years in Sing Sing Prison, his previous record of course working against him.

Since he has been in the New York Prison he has gained the good will of the officials of that institution by reason of his strict observance of their rules and his conducting himself properly in every way, and they now stand ready to assist him in redeeming his past by giving him the benefit of parole before the expiration of sentence, but they are confronted with the knowledge that immediately upon his release from their institution the Pennsylvania authorities will apprehend him for violation of his parole from the Pennsylvania Penitentiary; whereas, if he receives a pardon for the offense laid against him in our own State then the New York authorities will be in position to parole him, which we understand they will be disposed to do.

He served twenty-seven months in the Eastern Penitentiary on conviction of stealing $28.50. He has been in Sing Sing Prison for more than twenty-five months on conviction for bigamy. He will be forty-two years old next June. His wife, we are told, has confidence in him and will again live with him, and the prison authorities inform us that they deem this man as worthy of another chance. If the inflexible rules of our parole law are adhered to this applicant will have to stay in Sing Sing Prison for nearly three years more, and then for nearly three years in the Eastern Penitentiary. Under these conditions we think it worth while to give the man the chance he asks, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George Hawkins, alias George Raffleyea.

Harrisburg, January 23, 1917.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 76 November Term, 1915, George Ormsby, November 22, 1915, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging breaking and entering and larceny, and thereupon on the same day was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from two years to three years.

On January 3, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. We heard the case at our regular meeting on the seventeenth instant, and then took the matter under advisement to allow further investigation with reference to the merits of the application. Having now satisfied ourselves that the application has been properly made, and is entitled to allowance, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George Ormsby.

Ormsby is thirty-four years old; unmarried, and was engaged in railroading work. He was of rather good character; about the only thing derogatory to his reputation being his inclination to indulge in periodical sprees. The charge against him in this present instance grew out of his actions during one of these sprees. He was detected in the act of breaking into a railroad car, with the supposed intention of stealing certain goods in transit. As a matter of fact, nothing was stolen, but he made no defence when called for trial, and so happened to be sentenced as above stated. It is now the belief of the officials concerned in his prosecution that the imprisonment of about fourteen months measures up full punishment, and there is a disposition on their part to favor his release.

The trial district attorney in writing about the case says:

"There was nothing inherent in the case itself which, in my judgment, called for such a severe penalty. I think that the Commonwealth will not be at all prejudiced if the pardon requested be granted."

The special officer of the railroad company who made the arrest and pressed the prosecution, says, among other things, in an affidavit which he files with us:

"On investigation of Ormsby's reputation it was found that he was a member of a good family and prior to this time a harmless young man, and in this instance it was a case of being misled by other people; that your deponent's company does not object to any mercy that might be extended by the Board of Pardons toward Ormsby; that personally your deponent believes he has suffered sufficient punishment for breaking into the car."

Such being the view of these officials who have intimate knowledge of the facts, we deem it proper to acquiesce in their suggestion in endorsement of the application for clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, George Ormsby.

Harrisburg, February 21, 1917.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Chester, to No. 22, April Term, 1916, Junius Alston was arraigned on an indictment charging murder, and on trial, April 26, 1916, was returned by the jury as guilty of murder in the first degree. On June 26, 1916, he was sentenced to be electrocuted. The date of execution was fixed by the Executive for the week beginning December 11, 1916.

On November 3, 1916, an application was duly filed with this board praying for a recommendation of commutation of sentence of death to that of imprisonment for life. The matter was heard at our November meeting, and was held under advisement until January 11, 1917, when the application was refused. In the meantime a respite had been issued staying the date of execution until the week beginning February 26, 1917. On February 12, 1917, a petition for a rehearing of the application for commutation was duly filed. This petition came on for hearing at our meeting today. On this hearing, in consideration of the near approach of the day fixed for execution of the sentence, we enlarged the scope of the proceeding to the extent of reviewing the case on its merits at this time. And now, after a most careful examination of all the phases of the case presented to us by the record as it now stands we have arrived at the conclusion that the ends of justice will be served in favoring this application for clemency, and we therefore recommend that the sentence of death now resting on the applicant, Junius Alston, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Alston is a colored man, now about thirty years of age. He was born and raised in the State of North Carolina. He came to Pennsylvania in 1912, and in February of last year obtained employment in Chester County at work in a lime quarry at Cedar Hollow. On the morning of Sunday, March 4, 1916, he went to the house of Charles Winston, a nearby neighbor, where he met, besides Winston, two or three other men, including Edward Brown, the victim of the homicide, with all of whom he was acquainted and on friendly terms, although some days previous, it appears, there had been a wordy dispute between Alston and Brown. Alston had been drinking heavily during the night before the fourth of March. When Alston entered the Winston house Winston was sitting near a window shaving himself. Soon after Alston's appearance some altercation took place between Alston and Brown, and Brown called Alston a vile and filthy name. Winston stopped his operation of shaving long enough to turn to them and to say: "You fellows cut that noise out; I won't have it; it is not necessary," and then resumed his shaving. Almost immediately after he turned to his shaving three or four shots were fired by Alston and Brown fell dead.

The reasons laid in the original application are:

1. This case is on the border line. The killing was not by lying in wait, nor was it accompanied by such atrocious acts or heartless conduct as to make the crime one calling for the punishment of death.
2. There had been an altercation between the defendant and the deceased immediately before the shooting.
3. If there was any fully formed purpose to kill, it was of exceedingly short duration.
4. The petitioner had been drinking heavily the night before and also on the morning of the day when the shooting took place.
5. The petitioner up to the time of his trial had never before been charged with crime.

These reasons were earnestly urged on the argument, and in their further support there have been filed a great many letters from what we are told is the best citizenry of Chester County advocating the granting of clemency.

The district attorney says in his letter to us:

"I prosecuted the case against him in the Courts of Chester County. I felt after the evidence was taken that it was a close case between first degree and second degree murder. Under the evidence I would not have been surprised had the verdict been second degree murder. While the evidence showed that Junius Alston had been drinking on the day of the shooting yet the testimony was not convincing that he was substantially drunk at the time of the shooting.

Previous to this crime Alston seemed to have enjoyed a good reputation so far as we know. He was industrious and a hard working man. If your honorable body should conclude that the death penalty should not be inflicted but that his sentence should be commuted to life imprisonment this action will be entirely satisfactory to me."

The assistant district attorney writes in substantially the same strain.

The trial judge, in answer to our inquiry, says, among other things: "While the evidence was, in my judgment, clearly sufficient to support and warrant the jury's verdict, I would not have been surprised had it returned a verdict of second degree murder."

Judge Hause, Judge Butler's associate on the bench writes:

"While I did not preside at his trial, nevertheless, at the request of Judge Butler, I went over the testimony carefully with him on the argument of the motion for a new trial. The evidence submitted was, technically, sufficient to justify the verdict of murder in the first degree. At the same time, a verdict of murder in the second degree would not have been a surprise. The circumstances present at the time of the killing, and with these you are familiar, were, to say the least, quite peculiar.

Expressing to you an opinion from a purely personal point of view, I feel that imprisonment for life would be a most drastic punishment consistent with the facts in his case—and a deserved one—for Alston. If punishment is to be meted out for evil-doing and likewise as an example to others who might be inclined to commit an offense similar to that committed by Alston, I am and have been most strongly impressed with the conviction that no punishment for this offense can be more severe than an imprisonment for life by separate and solitary confinement. And more than that, an example to others by such punishment is of far more value, in my judgment, as a deterrent than a score of electrocutions.

I am not opposed to capital punishment. My thought, however, is that if it is sought to prevent the commission of crimes of this character by punishment, then inflict a punishment that will indicate to others that a commission of a similar offense will result in living the remainder of the life shut away from contact with the outer world. Based on these views, and speaking not as a member of the court in which Alston was tried, I believe it wise and proper to commute his sentence."

More than thirty members of the bar of the county in active practice, including four former district attorneys, together with all the officers of the county, and practically every one in the county connected with the administration of justice therein, and a large number of residents of the county in almost every occupation, have signed an endorsement of this application.

While this board is not prepared to say that a verdict of second degree murder would have been proper, inasmuch as the jury who tried the case found otherwise, yet the question of the degree of murder is, in the opinion of the officials responsible for the proper administration of justice in Chester county, apparently so near the border line, that, in our view, the Commonwealth may with safety waive the demand for the strict penalty for first degree murder and accept the imposition of a sentence for life in proportion for the homicide committed. It is with this thought that the present recommendation for clemency is made by this board, the board, however, desiring to go on record as favoring the commutation to life imprisonment with the distinct and positive understanding, first, that the righteousness of the verdict is acknowledged and sustained by the board, and, second, that the defendant, Junius Alston be detained in prison for the remaining period of his natural life without any prospect or hope of further clemency in the future based on allegations that this action of the board in the premises at the present time lowered the degree of the guilt of the defendant as found by the jury. With this understanding, and in view of what has been stated with regard to the matters appearing on record, we recommend that an Executive order issue commuting to life imprisonment the sentence of death passed upon Junius Alston by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of the County of Chester.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor:

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of York, to No. 37, October Term, 1915,

H. E. Martin, sometimes called Harvey E. Mitchell, November 29, 1915, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging larceny by bailee, waiving the finding of a bill by the Grand Jury; and on the same day was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from one year to three years. At the expiration of his minimum term, November 29, 1916, he was released on parole.

On February 5, 1917, he duly filed with us his application for a pardon. We heard his statements at our meeting to-day, where he appeared before us in his own behalf. On considering the details in relation to the matter as explained to us, we think the application is a reasonable request, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, H. E. Martin.

Martin is sixty-one years of age. He says he is a salesman by occupation. Prior to his arrest he was engaged in traveling from place to place selling some patented household article. He hired a horse somewhere in York County for use in his business of canvassing or peddling. He was charged with appropriating the animal to his own use, but he states that he made offers to pay the owner for the same in monthly instalments, having made this proposition by registered letter. On the preliminary hearing the prosecutor denied receiving the letter, and the applicant stated to us that it was for the reason that he was not at that time able to produce the receipt that he was induced to enter the plea of guilty. He now, however, exhibits the registered letter return receipt card, thus showing the delivery of the letter spoken of.

Inasmuch as this applicant has served his minimum term, and no objection is entered against his pardon, either by the authorities in York County or by the inspectors of the penitentiary, and as there appears to be some virtue in the argument advanced by the applicant that the restrictions imposed by law on a paroled convict seriously interfere with his endeavors to re-establish himself in his line of business as a salesman, it appears to us that this application may be allowed without jeopardizing the interests of society in general although securing to the applicant himself material benefit. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, H. E. Martin, alias Harvey E. Mitchell.

Respectfully submitted,

Harrisburg, February 21, 1917.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: At our regular meeting held this day there were submitted for our consideration and approval or rejection certain communications from the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern State Penitentiary, each stating that the convict therein named had previously been released on parole, and recommending therein that full pardon and final discharges be now granted to each of the said convicts.

The following are the names of the convicts referred to, with data as to their conviction, etc., respectively:

FRED BARNET. Luzerne County. Murder, second degree. Sentenced June 27, 1903, for twenty years. Paroled October 21, 1913.

SIDNEY PAUP, alias SPONSER. York County. Felonious entry, larceny, etc. Sentenced January 3, 1910, two years and three months to nine years. Paroled September 29, 1913.

HEISTER STINE. Lebanon County. Forgery. Sentenced September 20, 1910, eighteen months to two years. Paroled September 20, 1912.

With respect to each of the convicts above named the inspectors assign the statutory reasons for their recommendations and set forth the grounds on which the said recommendations are based.

Therefore, it appearing that all the rules of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary, and the rules of our own board have been observed in the premises, and in endorsement of the report of the inspectors, we also recommend that an Executive order issue, granting to the said Fred Barnet, Sidney Paup, alias Sponsler, and Heister Stine, each his final discharge and pardon.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Chester, at January Term, 1916, Elisha Cole, was convicted, February 3, 1916, on a charge of larceny, and on the same day was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from two years and eight months to three years.

On January 3, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case was presented to us at our meeting in January, and was then held under advisement. We have since given the application careful consideration, and in the light of all that has been laid before us with reference to the facts we have concluded that the application is well founded, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Elisha Cole.

Cole is a colored man, 22 years old. He was in prison once before, having been convicted on the charge of rape, but later on for sufficient reasons was granted a pardon. The fact of his prior conviction may have had something to do with the length of the sentence imposed in this present case. In the case before us he was charged with the stealing of three iron hog troughs, which he alleges he found abandoned by their owner, and which he regarded as mere junk. They were afterwards sold by Cole for the price of seventy-five cents.

He has been in the penitentiary now for more than a year. The plea is made that he has been sufficiently punished, and there seems to be some force in this position. In answer to our inquiry addressed the district attorney with reference to the seemingly heavy sentence for the apparently trifling theft, that official writes us:

"The reason this defendant received the sentence he did at the hands of the court is, because he was on two previous trials convicted in our court of another offense. He was later pardoned by the honorable Board of Pardons. The contention of the Commonwealth in the case before you now was that this defendant stole the hog troughs and destroyed them by breaking them up into junk. The value of the property stolen was rather small, but the offense was committed after due deliberation.

We feel however that he has been substantially punished for his crime."

Under the conditions thus appearing of record, we feel that this application for clemency may be properly accepted by us, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be issued the applicant, Elisha Cole.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 25, June Term, 1911, Alexander Ciarlini, on arraignment, November 13, 1911, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging murder. The court then proceeded to hear testimony in the case to determine the degree of murder, as provided by law, and thereupon, November 15, 1911, fixed the degree of crime as murder in the second degree, and sentenced the defendant to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from nineteen years and six months to twenty years.

On February 7, 1917, application for the pardon of the defendant was duly filed and the case was heard at our meeting today. Upon consideration of the matters involved we think the application well taken, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the defendant, Alexander Ciarlini.

Ciarlini is about forty years of age, he is a coal miner, and is married. He boarded at the house of a man named Alumi, in Jenkins township, Luzerne County. Alumi's wife was unfaithful to her husband in that she was receiving secret visits from a man named Antio during the absence of her husband at his work. All these parties seem to be Italians. Ciarlini knew of the state of affairs in the Alumi household, and Mrs. Alumi blamed him with informing her husband with respect to her relations with Antio. On the day of the homicide, April 7, 1911, all the persons named had indulged in excessive drinking. Mrs. Alumi, on this evening, in making the accusation against Ciarlini about informing her husband of Antio's visits, threatened to kill him. Ciarlini drew his revolver at this, and then Alumi himself made an attack on him with an ax, whereupon Ciarlini shot and killed Alumi.

The principal reason for pardon laid in the application is in effect that under all the circumstances of the case the prisoner has been sufficiently punished. He has been in jail and the penitentiary since April 7, 1911, almost six years. The district attorney who tried the case approves the application. The trial judge, who is now dead, seems to have had some doubt as to the guilt of the prisoner. He says in his finding:

"We are not at all satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the crime was committed by the prisoner in pursuance of a fully formed and conscious purpose to kill the deceased.

"The effect of all the evidence taken together is to raise a reasonable, and indeed very grave doubt, as to the prisoner's mental capacity to form such a design at the time of the shooting."

"The testimony would justify the conclusion that he had become grossly intoxicated to a degree that clouded his intellect, rendering him easily susceptible to abnormal excitement and impelling him to sudden rashness of conduct."

From all that we have learned from a careful study of the record and attentively listening to the argument of counsel, we are of the opinion that the ends of justice have been reached by the serving of nearly six years imprisonment, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Alexander Ciarlini.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Fayette, to No. 27,211, March Term, 1915, Louis Libereta was, March 10, 1915, returned as guilty on an indictment charging statutory rape, and on March 13, 1915, was sentenced to pay a fine of six cents, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from four years to eight years.

On February 5, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. We heard the case at our meeting to-day. We have considered the same, and it is our opinion that the application should be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Louis Libereta.

Libereta is an Italian, 31 years of age, who came to this country in 1899. He is a coal mine worker, and is not married. This application for his pardon is made by E. N. Liberator, who was the prosecutor in the case against him and on which he is now serving sentence in the penitentiary. The girl in the case was the daughter of Liberator. The history of the case shows that on or about February 1, 1915, the applicant and the prosecutor's daughter, Emantina Liberator, went together from Fredericktown, Washington County, to East Riverside, Fayette County, where they lived together for a while as man and wife, although not married. The girl was then under the age sixteen years. Several weeks later the applicant had some trouble with another Italian named Peter, who was aware of the meretricious relations existing between Libereta and the girl. Peter induced the father of the girl to lay an information against the applicant on the charge of rape, in pursuance of which applicant was arrested and brought up for trial. He stoutly denied any forced attempt, declaring that it was by mutual agreement that he and the girl left her home together. However, it was a technical violation of the act of Assembly, and he was convicted. After the trial and conviction the prosecutor investigated the circumstances of the elopement and thereby satisfied himself that the applicant's story was correct. The girl, it seems, at the time had the appearance of being more than sixteen years old. She has since married, and is now the mother of a child, and is living happily with her husband. The prosecutor, the father of the girl, feels that the applicant was not entirely to blame, and he is now convinced that the applicant has been sufficiently punished inasmuch as the action of the applicant did not, in the estimation of the people of his class, constitute the high grade of crime that the charge would seem to imply. Technically and from an American point of view he was guilty. However, he has been in the penitentiary nearly two years; the girl's life has not been blighted, and both she and her father have overlooked the indiscretion of the applicant, and they now endorse his application for pardon. No objection has been raised by the authorities, and we fail to see that the interests of the Commonwealth will be injuriously touched by releasing the applicant from further confinement. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Louis Libereta.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Berks, to No. 107, June Term, 1915, Stanley Powaskie was indicted, jointly with Sylvester, on the charge (1) of breaking and entering a freight car, (2) of larceny, and (3) of receiving stolen goods. On trial, June 15, 1915, the defendants were returned as guilty, and on June 16, 1915, were sentenced by the court each to pay a fine of $10, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than two years and not more than ten years.

On February 6, 1917, an application for the pardon of Powaskie was duly filed which was heard at our meeting on the 21st instant, and then held under advisement to enable counsel to file confirmatory evidence in support of an averment made at that time that immediate and suitable, as well as profitable employment awaited the applicant on his release in the event that we took favorable action on the application. And now, having been furnished with such evidence, we think the application may in fairness be allowed, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Stanley Powaskie.

Powaskie is now about nineteen years old. When he was arrested he was a school boy of seventeen, and lived with his parents in the City of Reading. There seems to be no doubt but that he was guilty of the charge preferred against him. He has been in the penitentiary for nearly two years, within about three months and a half of the minimum term.

The grounds for clemency laid in the application itself are: (1) the ill health of the applicant, who is afflicted with heart disease; (2) the severity of the sentence. In addition, it was stated to us on the hearing that if he was released there was an opportunity of placing in healthful employment where he would also be free from his old associations. We were furnished with medical evidence with regard to the state of his health, and now we have received through counsel a letter from a responsible builder in the City of Reading who undertakes to give the young man employment at out door work until the completion of contemplated arrangements on foot looking to the placing him at work in the Ford establishment at Detroit where two of his brothers are now employed at lucrative wages.

On a fair consideration of all the matters put before us with reference to this application we think it a reasonably meritorious case, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Stanley Powaskie.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Elk, to No. 1, October Term, 1913, Louie Bonavita was arraigned on an indictment charging (1) rape, (2) statutory rape, and (3) assault and battery; and on trial was convicted on October 8, 1913, on the first two counts, and on the next day was sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from five years to fifteen years.

On March 6, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The matter was taken up at our meeting to-day, and we were advised as to the details of the case. On a consideration of all the features of the case as shown by the record, and as explained to us on the hearing, we are satisfied that the application has merit. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Louie Bonavita.

Bonavita is about thirty-seven years old. He is married, and his wife and two children are living. He is an Italian, but is a naturalized citizen. He worked for the Shamut Mining Company in Elk County for about sixteen years as an engineer. His general reputation was good, and he never was in any trouble of a criminal character. During 1913, in the absence of his wife in Italy, he boarded with a family named Gazzo. For some time prior to his arrest he was on night work and slept in the day time. In the Gazzo family there was a daughter aged about thirteen years. She alleged that the applicant called her into his room at various times and had sexual intercourse with her. This was kept up, she says, weekly for about eight months, and the defendant always accomplished his purpose by force, and the display of a knife and a revolver. When called for trial the defendant was without counsel. He denied all the statements of the girl, but was convicted and sentenced. He has been in the penitentiary for three years and a half.

In support of his application for clemency there is a great array of letters and requests of the most pronounced character. The Trial Judge and his two associates, the District Attorney, the private prosecuting attorney, ten of the jurors, the County officials, and many others, write us to the effect that, even if properly convicted, it is their belief that the man has been sufficiently punished; while in the minds of many there is a grave doubt as to the justness of the verdict. Many members of the community regard the affair as a case of conspiracy, and they think this defendant has been made a victim. It is a significant fact that the Gazzo family left the neighborhood immediately after the trial. The officials of the Shamut Mining Company believe in the integrity of the applicant, and state in their letter that they will give him employment immediately upon release if pardoned. From the tone of these letters there is no doubt in our mind but that the ends of justice have been subserved and that the prisoner is entitled to the relief asked for. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Louie Bonavita.

Sir: At our regular meeting held this day the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary submitted recommendations for the final discharge and pardon of certain convicts previously released on parole.

The following are the names of the convicts referred to, with data as to their conviction, etc., respectively:

HARRY KOEHLER. Berks County. Forgery. Sentenced January 17, 1910, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled July 17, 1913.

JOHN VICTOR. Northumberland County. Larceny and burglary. Sentenced May 25, 1912, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled December 31, 1914.

WILLIAM BIJESKI. Northumberland County. Larceny and burglary. Sentenced May 25, 1912, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled February 20, 1915.

ARTHUR STONE. Philadelphia County. Robbery. Sentenced May 3, 1907, for ten years. Paroled September 20, 1913.

The Inspectors assign the statutory reasons for their recommendations and set forth the grounds on which the recommendations are based. Therefore, it appearing that all the rules of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary, and the rules of our own Board have been observed in the premises, and in endorsement of the Report of the Inspectors, we also recommend that an Executive Order issue granting to the said Harry Koehler, John Victor, William Bijeski, and Arthur Stone each his final discharge and pardon.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 173. May Term, 1916, David Sabara was indicted on the charge of burglary, and on trial was convicted May 18, 1916. On the same day he was sentenced to pay the costs and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of not less than five years and not more than six years.

On March 10, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which was regularly heard at our meeting today. Upon consideration of the facts involved we are of the opinion that the application has merit, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, David Sabara.

Sabara is forty years old. He is married, and has five children. By trade he is an expressman. At the time of the commission of the alleged burglary he was in the employ of a carrier of goods for hire, whose name does not appear on our file. In apparently the regular course of business, on the third day of May, 1916, this employer entered the house of the prosecutrix, directing the defendant to remain on the outside. Certain articles were brought out of the house by the employer and handed to the defendant to carry away. While following the instructions of the employer the defendant was placed under arrest within a short distance from the house, charged with burglary. The employer at once fled the jurisdiction and has not been found up to this time.

The applicant has no criminal records. In this present trouble he seems to have been the victim of circumstances. He has been in the Penitentiary for nearly a year. It is the impression of the Assistant District Attorney who tried the case that a probable mistake was made in his conviction. There is no opposition made to the application for pardon. Under all the facts as shown to us we think it well to give the prisoner the benefit of the doubt that arises from the peculiar condition of affairs explained to us. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, David Sabara.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to Nos. 594 and 595, November Term, 1913, James E. Foye, December 22, 1913, entered pleas of guilty on indictments charging forgery and false pretences, respectively, and thereupon, December 30, 1913, was sentenced, in the aggregate, to pay costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of not less than five years nor more than ten years.

On February 5, 1915, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which, upon hearing, February 17, 1915, was refused. On March 18, 1915, a petition for rehearing was allowed, and on this second hearing pardon was again refused. In October, 1915, a second petition for rehearing was filed, and this petition was denied. On May 15, 1916, a third petition for rehearing was filed, which was in like manner denied. On November 24, 1916, a fourth petition for rehearing was filed, which, on December 20, 1916, was denied; but on reconsideration, February 21, 1917, was allowed. The application for pardon therefore came regularly before us at our meeting today for final hearing on its merits. We have considered the case in all its phases as presented to us from time to time, and now are prepared to sanction the application. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James E. Foye.

Foye is about thirty-eight or thirty-nine years of age. The statement is made in his original application that he is married, and that by occupation he is a clerk. It appears that while employed by the Brokers Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York in 1913, he forged certificates of stock of the General Electric Company to a large amount, brought them over to Philadelphia, and negotiated loans on their security aggregating about two hundred thousand dollars. The forgeries were soon afterwards discovered, and Foye was arrested in New York and brought to Philadelphia for trial. Nearly all the money raised by Foye on these fraudulent securities was recovered. However, a considerable sum remains to be accounted for, and it is stated that civil actions are pending for its recovery.

Foye has been in the penitentiary since December 30, 1913, a period of some three years and three months. The grounds for clemency laid in his latest application are:

That since petitioner has already undergone imprisonment for a period of three years and three months he feels that he has already undergone sufficient punishment.

That the private prosecutors of petitioner, Chandler Brothers and Company, have by letter indicated their desire to join in petitioner's application in asking that a pardon be granted him, and that the Trial Judge who sentenced petitioner, the Honorable John M. Patterson, has by letter suggested and requested the granting of petitioner's pardon by stating in said letter that he feels that petitioner has been sufficiently punished and has satisfied the ends of justice by the time he has already spent in the Eastern Penitentiary.

That petitioner's mother is in poor and destitute circumstances and without adequate means to support herself, and being so ill in health that she is unable to maintain herself, and by reason of petitioner's incarceration is undergoing great hardship and much privation. That your petitioner's mother is totally dependent upon petitioner's support, and if petitioner were given an opportunity to rehabilitate himself he would be enabled to earn sufficient money to maintain his aged mother and himself.

In support of these reasons there has been filed with our Record a letter from counsel of Chandler Brothers and Company, the private prosecutors, and the parties who were defrauded, stating that they approve of the application for pardon. Also a letter from the Trial Judge in which he says:

In reference to the application of James E. Foye for a pardon I desire to say that I believe the ends of justice would best be served in this case if a pardon were granted. I have had the applicant's history investigated since imposing sentence upon him. I find that he comes of a most respectable family, and that a lot of very good people are interested* in him.

I believe that if he were given an opportunity to prove his repentance and reformation he would make good.

In view of the attitude of the prosecutors and of the Trial Judge in relation to the matter in hand the Board is of opinion that, in the exercise of the pardoning power which is vested in the Executive of the Commonwealth as his prerogative, the suggested clemency may in his discretion be extended to this prisoner. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James E. Foye.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Indiana, to No. 5, September Term, 1916, one, Mayme Hilty was indicted under the name of Mrs. Edwin Hilty, on the charge of larceny and receiving stolen goods. On September 7, 1916, she entered a plea of guilty, waiving the finding of a bill by the Grand Jury, and on September 11, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a period of one year and one day.

On March 15, 1917, an application for her pardon was duly filed, which application came regularly before us for hearing today. Having examined the Record, and having given full consideration to the facts brought to our attention, we found no difficulty in reaching the conclusion that this is a case wherein to intervene in alleviation of the rigorous sentence of the law, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant.

Mrs. Hilty is a young married woman, about thirty years of age, the wife of Edwin Hilty. She and her husband became acquainted while the latter was in attendance at a medical school in Cincinnati. They were married in 1912. She came with him to his home in the Borough of Indiana, this State, and in that place took a position as book-keeper and cashier in a department store. While in the occupancy of this position she committed the acts complained of in the indictment, purloining the goods of her employer.

She has been in the Penitentiary more than six months. Restitution has been made of the property stolen. On February 10, last, the Court of Quarter Sessions, on petition filed suggesting that the prisoner was in a pregnant condition, directed a local physician in company with the prison physician to make a professional examination and investigation as to the truth of the alleged pregnancy and to report to the Court; the execution of such order being made preliminary to the action of the Court upon a proposed application to the Board of Pardons for her release. Within a few days report was made to the Court by the physicians that such examination had been made on February 12, and that it was found that the prisoner was pregnant, said pregnancy being advanced between five and six months. Proceedings were then begun to secure the aid of this Board for the release of the prisoner.

The substantial reason urged for our favorable action is the pregnancy of the woman with the time of her delivery falling within the period of her imprisonment, thereby placing upon her child the stigma of a prison birth. The Trial Judge, the District Attorney, and the private prosecutor earnestly join in the application for pardon. We do not deem it necessary to quote their letters. It seems to us that feelings of humanity and a sense of decency force all good citizens to recognize the righteousness of our decision in the case. In our judgment a simple statement of the facts, without any argument, carries sufficient weight to justify favorable action in the premises. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Mayme Hilty, who was indicted as Mrs. Edwin Hilty.

Sir: At our regular meeting held this day there were submitted for our consideration and approval or rejection certain communications from the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern State Penitentiary, each stating that the convicts named therein had previously been released on parole, said Inspectors recommending that full pardon and final discharge be now granted to each of said convicts.

The following are the names of the convicts referred to, with data as to their conviction, etc., respectively:

HARRY COLEMAN, alias HAFFA, Chester County. Larceny. Sentenced February 3, 1910, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled August 4, 1913.

JOHN POTTS, Franklin County. Entering building with intent, etc. Sentenced February 6, 1911, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled August 6, 1913.

HELEN THOMAS, Philadelphia County. Murder, second degree. Sentenced March 8, 1909, for ten years. Paroled November 26, 1913.

DAVID ALTMAN, alias ROTHMAN, alias RATHMAN, York County. Sodomy and buggery. Sentenced August 24, 1910, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled October 26, 1914.

With respect to each of the convicts above named the Inspectors assign the statutory reasons for their recommendations and set forth the grounds on which the said recommendations are based.

Therefore, it appearing that all the rules of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary, and the rules of our own Board, have been observed in the premises, and in endorsement of the Report of the Inspectors, we also recommend than an Executive Order issue, granting to the said Harry Coleman, John Potts, Helen Thomas, and David Altman each his final discharge and pardon.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Northampton, to No. 18, December Term, 1912, Willis E. Schug and James A. Heil, on arraignment, February 10, 1913, entered plea of guilty on an indictment charging robbery, and on that day were sentenced to pay a fine of $50, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for nine years.

On November 29, 1915, an application for their pardon was duly filed. On hearing of the application in due course the same was refused. At our recent March meeting a Petition for re-hearing was allowed, which brought the application before us again for consideration at our meeting today. We have carefully reviewed the record before us and the statements presented on the argument, and we are now convinced that the appeal for clemency has been sustained. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicants, Willis E. Schug and James A. Heil.

Schug is now about twenty-two years of age, having been just past eighteen when the offense complained of was committed. Heil is now about twenty years old; he was under seventeen at the time of the commission of the offense. They have been in prison more than four years. The crime with which they were charged was perpetrated in the early morning of January 2, 1913. There is no doubt about their guilt nor about the gravity of the offense. However, it seems to be the only time the boys were in trouble. They had been drinking more or less during the whole of the New Year's night, and the attack upon the prosecutor was likely the result of a sudden impulse and was made without realization on their part of the very serious consequences liable to follow.

The principal reason advanced for our favorable action is the severity of the sentence and the adequacy of the punishment in the more than four years served in jail. There is on our file a most remarkable endorsement of this application, remarkable both as to the number and the character of the signers. The District Attorney who prosecuted the case writes:

"At the time of their sentence it was my opinion, and it still is my opinion, that the sentence in this case was excessive. These men had never been involved in any criminal matters before; had always borne a good reputation; and were of youthful age. And yet, even though the facts show that the offense was a grievous one, the sentence was such as would probably be imposed upon a hardened criminal who had served many terms before."

In view of all the circumstances in the case as I know them it would seem to the writer that these men are entitled to a pardon, and I therefore beg leave to recommend their application to the favorable consideration of your Honorable Board."

The present District Attorney also writes:

"At the time they were sentenced I was Assistant District Attorney, and am cognizant with all the facts connected with the case. Personally, I feel that these young men have had sufficient punishment, and believe that if your Honorable Board would pardon them it would give them an opportunity to make men out of themselves."

I have known the father of Willis E. Schug for many years, and know that he will use his every effort to see that his boy does not get into trouble again. From personal knowledge and information received I am sure that upon release these young men have good homes to return to.

I ask your Honorable Board to receive this letter as coming from me voluntarily and without any request from any person whatsoever."

We do not deem it necessary to quote any other letters, although we have many on file, and some of them phrased in very strong commendatory terms. The prosecutor himself joins in endorsing the application. It appears to be the universal sentiment in that community that no further good will be secured by insisting on prolonged imprisonment. Therefore, having regard to the state of public opinion, as well as to the inherent merit of the application, we deem it proper to accept the validity of the reasons urged, and we do now recommend that pardons be granted the applicants, Willis E. Schug and James A. Heil.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Mercer, to No. 23, October Term, 1913, Dave Ralston was, October 31, 1913, convicted on an indictment charging the crime of rape, and on June 24, 1914, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo an imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a period of not less than seven years nor more than fifteen years.

On April 4, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The hearing of this application came on regularly at our meeting today. We have given careful attention to the matters involved, and find the application entitled to our favorable action. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Dave Ralston.

Ralston is about forty-two years old. He is married. In 1913 he was gang foreman of construction work on the Bessemer railroad at Grove City. He boarded with his sister in that place. There was at the time in the employ of his sister's family a young girl, between whom and Ralston an intimacy grew up, which in the course of time led to their having sexual intercourse. The particular act complained of in the indictment took place under circumstances which, it is argued, removed it from the category of felony and reduced it to the grade of misdemeanor. This opinion seems to prevail to a very general extent in the community of Grove City, as is evidenced by the numerous letters on file with the application, including one from the District Attorney, who states, among other things, that he believes "That a pardon would not be a miscarriage of justice." The defendant has been in prison for all but three years, which, under all the conditions shown to us to exist, manifestly has been a substantial punishment. Under the belief that the ends of justice have been accomplished in the case in hand, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Dave Ralston.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 392, March Term, 1916, Walter N. Copeland, March 28, 1916, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging larceny; and thereupon was sentenced to pay the costs and to undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than twenty-one months and not more than two years.

On April 4, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, and the matter came on for hearing at our meeting today. Upon due consideration we report in favor of the application, and recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Walter N. Copeland.

Copeland is an engineer by occupation. He is married, and his wife and six children are living, and are dependent on him for support. He was charged at the same term of Court with other offenses in addition to that of larceny, namely, false pretenses, adultery and bigamy, but sentence was imposed only on the one charge, these other charges not being pressed.

The reasons advanced in support of the application are substantially the necessity for the proper care of his children who are now being looked after by the Children's Aid Society. The District Attorney, in writing to us with reference to the case, says:

"In view of the needy circumstances of the prisoner's family, and the desire that he be pardoned as expressed by the woman whom he wronged in this City, the District Attorney is of opinion that the advisability of granting or not granting the pardon asked for should be left entirely with the Board of Pardons, with the statement that he does not oppose the application in any particular."

The article stolen was a builder's transit and level, valued at about $130. The prisoner has been in the Penitentiary for more than one year, which is in excess of one-half of the maximum sentence. On a review of all the details of the case as given to us, and having due regard for the position of the District Attorney's office with reference to the propriety of showing clemency, we think it well to favor the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Walter N. Copeland.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 33, September Term, 1915, Anthony Chirella, was, September 30, 1915, returned by a jury as guilty on the charge of pandering, the jury submitting a request for the clemency of the Court on behalf of the defendant. On October 4, 1915, the defendant was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than five years and not more than eight years.

On March 17, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed which in regular course came before us to-day for determination. We have given the matter full and fair attention, and are of the belief that the application should be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Anthony Chirella.

Chirella is about twenty-nine years old. He is a hod carrier by occupation. He is married. His wife, whose whereabouts is now not known, was the prosecutrix in the case. Although there was a verdict of the jury against him the defendant has all along maintained his innocence. On the trial the wife was permitted to testify against her husband, and it was to a great extent, if not altogether on her testimony that the verdict was secured. Since the trial, facts tending to establish the mental defectiveness of the woman have come to the knowledge of the prosecuting Attorney. Her moral delinquency is also now recognized and admitted. The woman's condition along these lines was not known, much less appreciated, when her testimony was accepted. This newly acquired information has led the trial District Attorney to write to the attorney for the applicant the following letter:

"I beg to return notice of application for pardon with acceptance of service endorsed thereon. I have read the letter of Mrs. Falconer, Superintendent of the Girls' Department of the Glen Mills School. At the time of trial we had no reason to believe that Josephine Yuma (Chirella) was mentally defective or morally unsound. Had this fact been disclosed it would have resulted either in rendering her incompetent or in vitally impairing the effect of her testimony. In either event a conviction would not have been obtained, in my judgment."

The Trial Judge, in his letter, among other things, says:

"The statutory crime of pandering was created by the Act of June 7, 1911, and no doubt the charge in the indictment was fully established if the jury believed the Commonwealth's testimony. That they did is shown by the verdict, but an essential element of the crime is the use of force or intimidation by the husband, and on this point I have always had doubt founded on the appearance of the parties at the trial, and I think it proper to express this doubt to your Board in connection with the letter of the District Attorney."

It thus appearing there is some doubt as to the validity and legal effect of the testimony on which the jury based its finding, and inasmuch as the defendant has been in the Penitentiary for more than eighteen months, it seems to us that it is within reason to agree to the clemency asked. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Anthony Chirella.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 1, December Term, 1914, Andrew Bobanic, was, January 23, 1915, returned as guilty on an indictment charging perjury; and on June 8, 1915, was sentenced to pay a fine of $5, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than one year and six months and not more than four years. On appeal to the Superior Court the judgment was affirmed. Defendant began his sentence on the 29th of April, 1916.

On June 7, 1916, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which, on hearing, was refused. At our recent February meeting a re-hearing was allowed, and the case came before us again for consideration on its merits at our March meeting. We then reached the conclusion that we could consistently recommend clemency, but that the result of our recommendation should not be effective until the defendant had served at least one year's imprisonment. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Andrew Bobanic, the same to become effective April 29, 1917.

Bobanic is about thirty-six years old. He was a salesman in the employ of a wholesale liquor establishment. He is married, and has two children. His present trouble arose out of certain testimony he gave on proceedings in the Court of Common Pleas of Allegheny County looking to the opening of a judgment entered on a warrant of attorney in a lease, wherein a Mrs. Boliver was lessor and Fedoe Tode was lessee. The applicant really had no personal interest in the matter.

The grounds on which the application for clemency is based are in effect that the sentence was more severe than the circumstances called for; that his imprisonment has resulted in the loss of his position and has caused other financial losses; the illness of his wife, and the necessities of his children. The Trial Judge, in communicating with us regarding the application, says among other things, "I believe that the ends of justice and the proper administration of the criminal law will be satisfied by reducing the term of the sentence to one year. I would therefore respectfully recommend to the Board of Pardons that this be done."

On the whole showing before us, and considering the imprisonment of one year in the Penitentiary as a substantial punishment, we are moved to favor the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Andrew Bobanic.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Lebanon, to No. 4, June Term, 1904, Harry Jacobs, June 11, 1904, was convicted on the charge of burglary, and thereupon was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for five years. On the same day in the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace of that County, to No. 18, June Term, 1904, on conviction for carrying concealed deadly weapons, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of one year to be computed from the expiration of sentence in No. 4, June Term, 1904, aggregating an imprisonment of six years. After serving four years and one month of this term he was, on August 11, 1909, released under the operation of the commutation law.

On April 12, 1910, this same defendant was convicted in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Perry County on the charge of larceny and receiving stolen goods, and thereupon was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of ten years. This last named conviction and sentence took place prior to the date of the expiration of the full term imposed by the Lebanon County Court, and, through the working of the law, automatically added to the ten year sentence the one year and eleven months not served on the Lebanon County sentence—without any prospect of relief through the operation of the commutation act or the parole acts.

In 1914 an effort was made to have the defendant pardoned in the Perry County case, but the application was refused by the Board, as well as a Petition for a re-hearing subsequently made, so that as the record now stands against him he will be compelled to remain in prison until March 12, 1922. However, on April 12, 1917, an application for a pardon in the Lebanon County case was filed, and the matter was fully explained to us at our meeting to-day, and we were asked to intervene for the relief of the defendant. The object of this present application is to clear the defendant's record in relation to the said Lebanon County convictions, whereupon by virtue of the parole law as now in force there will rest with the Inspectors of the Penitentiary discretionary authority to parole the defendant on the Perry County sentence of ten years. We are advised that there is a disposition on the part of said Inspectors to favor the applicant in this regard, and if such action is taken the defendant will remain under their supervision and oversight for the rest of the ten year term, or until April 12, 1920. On consideration of all the features of the case we have arrived at the conclusion that the ends of justice will be served by an allowance of this present application. We therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Harry Jacobs, with respect to the crimes for which he was sentenced in Lebanon County as above stated.

Jacobs is now within a few days of being fifty years old. It is a fact that he has spent a large portion of his lifetime in prison. It is thought, however, that from a humanitarian standpoint it is worth while giving him another chance. When he was sentenced to the ten year term in 1910 from Perry County his brother, George Jacobs, was sentenced to a twenty year term on similar convictions. The Inspectors, however, thought it proper to parole George after he had served one-third of his time. He was not handicapped with an unexpired part of a previous sentence, and his record permitted the Inspectors to take such action in his case. It is represented to us that since his release on parole George has been working faithfully, and thus far has complied with the rules of the Inspectors. It is the purpose of this present applicant, Harry Jacobs, if similarly released on parole, to endeavor to secure work in the same locality, which is away from their old home and old associations in Perry County; and in this connection we think it wise to state that it is the sense of the Board of Pardons that the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary, through their property constituted officials, so control the movements of this applicant during the time of his parole that he does not return to Perry County, or to any other localities where he had at any time previously committed depredations. Neither George nor Harry Jacobs are men of normal mentality, Harry being of a lower type than George. It seems to be the view of those who have studied this case that continued imprisonment of Harry will not work out a complete reformation of the man, and it is therefore suggested to us that better results may follow a parole. With this thought in mind, therefore, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Harry Jacobs, covering the offenses for which he was sentenced in Lebanon County in 1904.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 465, March Term, 1910, Jon Ling, alias Harry Key, April 25, 1910, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging (1) assault and battery, (2) aggravated assault and battery, (3) assault and battery to ravish, and (4) rape; and thereupon was sentenced the same day to pay the costs and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than three years and nine months and not more than fifteen years.

On April 3, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case came on for hearing at our meeting today. Upon consideration of all the facts brought to our attention by an examination of the record and by statements of counsel and the district attorney, we are of the opinion that the case merits favorable action, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Jon Ling, alias Harry Key.

This applicant is a Chinaman, about forty-seven years old. He carried on a laundry in the lower section of the City of Philadelphia. He was charged with assaulting a minor child, and there is no doubt of his guilt. It is urged as an extenuating circumstance in his behalf that the girl in the case was a willing victim and purposely encouraged the man's advances, and that she was not a person of good repute; and further, that he has served seven years in the penitentiary, nearly double the minimum term imposed. This last reason is self-evident and carries considerable force. The other reasons are admitted by the assistant district attorney to be substantially correct.

On a review of the matter before us it is our judgment that the applicant for clemency has been properly supported, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Jon Ling, alias Harry Key.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 168, July Term, 1913, Mike Metro, on July 8, 1913, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging robbery, and on July 13, 1913, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo an imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of not less than seven years and six months and not more than ten years. On the same day Stanley Rook, who was jointly indicted with Metro, was sentenced to a term of not less than six years and not more than seven years.

On June 3, 1915, an application for Metro's pardon was duly filed which, on hearing, was refused. A petition for rehearing was allowed at our last month's meeting, and the matter was again presented to our attention at our meeting today. And now, having given careful consideration to the case, we submit our approval of the application and recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Mike Metro.

Metro is now a little more than twenty-three years old; he is a laborer by occupation, and is not married. He lived at home with his mother, whom he helped to support. On January 20, 1913, in company with friends in the borough of Luzerne, he was celebrating pay day. Carousing was kept up most of the night. In the early morning Metro and Rook went into a shanty of the Plymouth Coal Company to sleep off the effects of their intoxication. Later on, as they were leaving the shanty, Rook asked Metro to help carry away some clothes which were there and which Rook claimed the ownership of. About five months subsequently both men were charged with the felonious entry of the shanty and the stealing of the clothes. On the trial the prosecutor persuaded the defendants to enter plea of guilty, representing that a parole would be ordered. To their surprise, however, the severe sentence stated above was pronounced against them.

If the statement of facts detailed by the applicant is to be believed, then it appears to us there was a miscarriage of justice in the imposition of the long sentence. The applicant had never been in any trouble of the kind before. Letters on file show that he had always borne a good reputation. He was without counsel in court, and it may easily be understood that the plea of guilty was put in under a misapprehension of his rights. He has been in confinement for nearly four years. The district attorney writes us as follows:

"The sentence imposed was, as I recall, intended to have an exemplary effect at the time when other offenses of the like kind were being committed. However, I feel that the ends of justice have been answered in this case, and therefore disposed to recommend leniency."

On the showing made by the record before us we feel ready to endorse the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Mike Metro.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Armstrong, to No. 21, December Term, 1916, Mike Bednar was, December 22, 1916, returned as guilty on an indictment charging larceny as bailee, and on January 1, 1917, was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than one year and ten months and not more than two years and six months.

On April 2, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, and the same came on for hearing at our April meeting. After hearing we held the case under advisement pending further investigation; and now, having been satisfied with reference to the matters involved, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Mike Bednar.

Bednar is thirty-four years old. He is married, and his wife and four children are living, one child having been born since his imprisonment. He lived with his family at the mining village of Numine, Armstrong County, and worked there in the mines. He was an industrious worker, and supported his family to the best of his ability and in keeping with his position. His reputation for integrity and honesty was good.

His wife's brother, Paul Trulinsky, boarded with him for about three years prior to September, 1916. During this period Trulinsky gave to Mrs. Bednar, his sister, his earnings for safe keeping. Up to September he had thus given her about five hundred dollars. This money, together with her husband's savings, she kept, as stated on the record, "wrapped in a rag in the cupboard in their house at Numine composed of two rooms on the first floor and two rooms on the second floor, the said cupboard being on the first floor." On the seventh of September, 1916, all this money, aggregating about eight hundred dollars, disappeared. The wife alleges that her husband had gone to Uniontown for medical treatment for rheumatism on September 4, and did not return until September 9. After Trulinsky had been informed of the disappearance of the money he remained at the house until about October 12, when he left and went to another boarding house. It is not known who stole the money, but it is the supposition that an entry was made from the street by some one who found easy access to the treasure. When Trulinsky left his sister's house he owed the Bednars some thirty-eight dollars back board, and on being pressed for payment became offended, and finally, on October 24, laid information against Bednar and his wife on the charge of larceny as baillee based on the disappearance of the money, as explained before. The Bednars were arrested, and on the trial, December 21, 1916, the woman was acquitted, but the husband was convicted, and was sentenced accordingly.

The gist of the reasons advanced for clemency is the destitute condition of the wife, and the uncertainty of the guilt of the husband. With regard to the wife's destitute and deplorable condition there is no doubt. As to the other ground we have received from the judge and the district attorney advices of a confirmatory nature.

The judge, in his letter received since the hearing, states, among other things:

"I might say that at the close of the evidence upon the trial I was in doubt as to the guilt of the defendant, and would not have been at all surprised if the verdict had been 'Not guilty.' However, the evidence was all for the jury, and I cannot say that the verdict was not warranted thereby.

"In view of the probability of the defendant's innocence, and the very trying circumstances of his wife and family, I would be glad should you see your way clear to grant him a pardon."

The district attorney writes us substantially to the same effect. For the reasons stated, therefore, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Mike Bednar.

Harrisburg, May 1, 1917.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 248, July Term, 1914, James Baker was, September 14, 1914, convicted on an indictment laying (1) assault and battery, (2) aggravated assault and battery, (3) assault and battery to ravish, and (4) rape; and on the same day, to No. 251 July Term, 1914, he was convicted on the charges of (1) assault and battery, (2) aggravated assault and battery, and (3) assault and battery to kill. On January 21, 1915, after the dismissal of a motion for a new trial, he was sentenced on the first named conviction to pay the costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of not less than two years and not more than five years, and on the second named conviction to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than three years and not more than seven years to commence from and after the expiration of the first mentioned sentence, thus aggregating a minimum term of five years and a maximum term of twelve years.

On March 4, 1916, an application for his pardon was duly filed. Upon hearing, April 19, 1916, this application was refused. In December of last year a petition for rehearing was filed, and at our recent March meeting a rehearing was allowed. The case was then in due course heard again on its merits at our April meeting, when it was taken under advisement. Since that meeting we have made a careful examination into the various phases of the case as brought to our attention, and we have concluded to give our approval to the application. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James Baker.

Baker is about twenty-four years old. He is unmarried, and has been living at home with his widowed mother, whom he helped to support. He is a plumber by trade, and is represented to be an efficient workman. He had never been arrested before, and had never been charged with any crime, but bore a good reputation in the neighborhood where he lived. In the early part of the year 1914

there were perpetrated in West Philadelphia a number of alarming and shocking depredations. Houses were entered in the day time, property stolen, and female inmates grossly insulted and in some instances assaulted. The reports of the crimes were that some one representing himself to be a plumber would gain admission to the premises on the pretext of having been sent to attend to some repair work. In a number of instances he found women alone in the houses. He would sometimes demand money from them, and on some occasions he locked the woman in a room and then ransacked the house. On other occasions he would compel the woman to disrobe and then take her clothing from her, and thus prevent pursuit when he left the house. His threats were usually accompanied with the display of a revolver. On several occasions he bound and gagged the woman and otherwise assaulted her, and in one case at least attempted to ravish the woman. In the course of time, and resulting from certain descriptions of the culprit, Baker came to be suspected as the guilty party. He was arrested, and when brought into the presence of some of the women who had suffered the indignities spoken of he was identified as the assailant. Fourteen bills of indictment were found against him covering charges of assault and battery in its various forms, including intent to ravish, and intent to kill, and also charges of carrying concealed deadly weapons. So far as our record shows he was tried and sentenced only on the two indictments first mentioned herein. The defendant at all times has denied his guilt. However, his protestations of innocence and his proof of good character did not avail at the trial, and the jury returned him as guilty.

The ground laid in the application for clemency is that of mistaken identity, and it is on the doubt raised along this line that we are induced to take favorable action. It has been shown that there had been living in the same neighborhood, and sometimes at Baker's mother's house, another young man, a cousin of this applicant by the name of James Spear, whose general reputation was not good, and who had been in trouble of various kinds. It is said there was a striking resemblance in the personal appearance of these two young men, although Spear was a year or two younger than Baker. They were about the same size and general make up, and often Spear wore Baker's clothes. Shortly after Baker's sentence his friends learned that Spear was in jail at Lexington, North Carolina, and had there made a statement in the nature of a confession that he, Spear, had committed the offense with which Baker had been charged. This confession was brought about by Spear's seeing a newspaper account of Baker's trial and sentence. Afterwards Spear repudiated this confession, and then later on reaffirmed his first statement. He is now a fugitive from justice, having been paroled from the Eastern penitentiary, and having violated his parole. His whereabouts is at present unknown.

On the hearing at our recent meeting there were presented many letters from former employers, and other friends and acquaintances, of Baker, all speaking of him in the highest terms as a decent, quiet, respectable young man. Several of his former employers express their willingness to take him in their employ again.

It seems that Baker was a member of the Fourth Presbyterian Church and an attendant at the Sunday School. The pastor of the church appeared at our meeting in his behalf and stated that it was his belief, as well as that of all the officers of the church and of the members of the congregation, that a mistake had been made in the identification of Baker, and that their belief was so strong that the church had been carrying him on their church roll as a member up to the present time.

It happened that Warden McKenty, of the Eastern Penitentiary, was in Harrisburg on the day of our meeting. He voluntarily appeared before the board and stated that from his acquaintance with Baker and with Spear by reason of their both being inmates of his institution, and from his knowledge of the character of the men as derived from his observation of and experience with them while prisoners, he was of the absolute conviction that a mistake had been made in the identification of Baker as the guilty man on the trial.

The support of the applicant's cause from these three angles, in our judgment, very much strengthens the theory of mistaken identity. Baker has been in the penitentiary for more than twenty-seven months, which imprisonment, considering the uncertainty hovering over the conviction, is no insignificant punishment. On a review of all the elements of the case as laid before us we feel satisfied to give the prisoner the benefit of the doubt, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James Baker.

Sir: At our regular meeting, held this day, there were submitted for our consideration, and approval or rejection, certain communications from the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern State Penitentiary, each stating that the convicts named therein had previously been released on parole, and that said inspectors recommended that full pardon and final discharge be now granted to each of said convicts.

The following are the names of the convicts referred to, with data as to their conviction, etc., respectively:

JAMES D. RYDER. Bucks County. Burglary, aggravated assault and battery, etc. Sentenced May 22, 1908, for fifteen years. Paroled November 8, 1913.

H. G. BARRATT. Columbia County. Forgery. Sentenced May 7, 1912, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled November 7, 1914.

PEARL JONES, alias BEATRICE HALLINAN. Dauphin County. Pandering. Sentenced September 24, 1912, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled March 24, 1915.

CATALINO LA MARCO. Lackawanna County. Murder, second degree. Sentenced April 6, 1910, three years to twelve years. Paroled October 23, 1914.

WALTER KREBS. Union County. Assault and battery. Sentenced May 18, 1911, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled September 18, 1913.

CHARLES WHIPPLER, alias WIPPLER. Philadelphia County. Rape. Sentenced June 19, 1912, three years to five years. Paroled June 19, 1915.

With respect to each of the convicts named above, the inspectors assign the statutory reasons for their recommendations, and set forth the grounds on which the said recommendations are based.

Therefore, it appearing that all the rules of the Board of Inspectors, and the rules of our own board have been observed in the premises, and in endorsement of the report of the inspectors, we also recommend that an Executive order issue, granting to the said James D. Ryder, H. G. Barratt, Pearl Jones, Catalino LaMarco, Walter Krebs, and Charles Whippler, each his final discharge and pardon.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 515, February

Term, 1915, John McWilliams was, March 2, 1915, convicted on an indictment laying the charge of larceny, and on April 1, 1915, was sentenced to pay the costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than thirty months and not more than thirty-six months.

On April 4, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The matters involved were fully heard at our April meeting, and the case then taken under advisement. Now, after mature consideration of the questions before us, we have reached the conclusion that the clemency asked for should be extended, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted to the applicant, John McWilliams.

McWilliams is twenty-nine years old, and is not married. His occupation is stated to be that of marine engineer. The subject of the larceny complained of in the proceedings was a gold filled watch, the property of Nicholas Bentasch. The theory of the Commonwealth in pressing the prosecution was that the watch had been stolen from Bentasch by a certain woman with whom he was carousing, and that when the woman herself became very much intoxicated McWilliams, who met the parties in a saloon and knew them, took the opportunity of opening the woman's hand bag and taking the watch from her; and that he then with another man took the article to a man named Bloomberg and sold it for two dollars. In some way the police traced the watch to Bloomberg, who told them from whom he had received it. McWilliams denied the whole story as advanced by the Commonwealth, and, although Bloomberg's identification of him was not very positive, the jury evidently were satisfied with it and accepted the Commonwealth's version of the affair, and convicted the defendant.

The reasons put forth in support of the application now before us are in substance that the sentence was excessive, and that in the serving of now about twenty-six months' imprisonment full atonement has been made and the ends of justice have been met.

The record as now made up shows the attitude of the judge who imposed the sentence and of the district attorney's office to lean toward a recognition of the validity of these reasons, and, from all we can learn in relation to the matter in hand it seems to us that a reasonably good case has been made out. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John McWilliams.

Sir: At our regular meeting, held this day, there were submitted for our consideration and approval or rejection, under the provisions of the Act of Assembly certain communications from the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern State Penitentiary, each stating that the convicts therein, named had previously been released on parole, and that said inspectors now recommend that full pardon and final discharge be granted to each of said convicts.

The following are the names of the convicts referred to, with data as to their conviction, etc., respectively:

JOHN DeNORFIO, alias DeNORFO. Montgomery County. Voluntary manslaughter. Sentenced October 8, 1910, three years to twelve years. Paroled December 21, 1911.

JACOB THORNTON. Philadelphia County. Murder, second degree. Sentenced July 3, 1908, for twenty years. Paroled March 3, 1915.

LOUIS MILGRAM, alias LEONARD. Philadelphia County. Burglary. Sentenced July 12, 1911, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled January 12, 1914.

HOWARD W. KEASEY. York County. Forgery. Sentenced March 6, 1911, two years to eight years. Paroled March 6, 1913.

With respect to each of the convicts named above, the inspectors assign the statutory reasons for their recommendations; and set forth the grounds on which the said recommendations are based.

Therefore, it appearing that all the rules of the Board of Inspectors and the rules of our own board have been observed in the premises, and in endorsement of the Board of Inspectors, we also recommend that an Executive order issue, granting to the said John DeNorfo, alias DeNorfo, Jacob Thornton, Louis Milgram, alias Leonard, and Howard W. Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Montgomery, to No. 10, March Term, 1916, George S. Och, waiving the submission of a bill of indictment to the Grand Jury, and also waiving a trial by a petit jury, entered a plea of guilty, February 23, 1916, on an indictment charging larceny; similar pleas were entered the same day to No. 25, March Term, 1916, and to No. 25—1 March Term, 1916, each charging felonious entry and larceny. Sentence was suspended on the two indictments last named, and on indictment No. 10 the defendant was sentenced, March 3, 1916, to pay a fine of ten dollars, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for a period of two years and nine months.

On June 8, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. We gave the case a hearing at our meeting today, and have come to the decision that it is entitled to our favorable action. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George S. Och.

Och is twenty-five years old. He lived at home with his parents, and is not married. He is a skilled mechanic in the line of automobile repair work. He has never been charged with the commission of crime other than as herein mentioned. The criminal act now engaging our attention was the stealing of an automobile of the value of $1,400 and selling it for $400. The automobile was recovered, and the four hundred dollars were repaid, both through the efforts of the young man's parents. There was a similar recovery and restitution with respect to the articles embraced in the charges in the other two cases.

The substance of the reasons for clemency put forward is: The severity of the sentence in view of the confession of the defendant and the restitution of the stolen property; the serving of one year and six months of the two years and nine months imposed, which has worked out the remedial purposes of the sentence; the previous good reputation of the prisoner; the humiliation and distress of his aged parents. In addition to this, counsel representing the application, being a personal friend and neighbor of the prisoner's family, has agreed to stand sponsor for the future good behavior of the young man if released under these proceedings, and while there is no enforceable legal obligation attached to this agreement we have confidence in the good intentions shown, and are hopeful that satisfactory results will follow. It may be remarked in this connection that the prosecution was pushed by the insurance company whose policy against theft had been issued to the owner of the automobile. No opposition to the present application at all has developed. Whatever sentiment exists in the community, so far as expressed, is favorable to the application. Therefore, for the reasons stated above, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George S. Och.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 653, December Term, 1906, Charles Showiah, on entering plea of guilty on an indictment charging burglary, was, January 2, 1907, sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of seven years. Under the working of the Commutation Law of 1901 he was discharged from prison September 2, 1911—the commutation earned by good behavior being two years and four months. Prior to the expiration of the full term of seven years, however, he was, September 23, 1912, again committed to the penitentiary by the criminal court of Delaware County on conviction of larceny, receiving stolen goods, breaking and entering. This second sentence was for the indeterminate term of from three years to seven years. By operation of law this Delaware County sentence would not begin to run until the prisoner had served the two years and four months forfeited time on the original Philadelphia County sentence, that is from January 23, 1915. Having served that time he has now also served about two years and five months of the Delaware County sentence.

On June 6, 1917, an application for his pardon on the Philadelphia County charge was duly filed through the agency of the Board of Inspectors of the Penitentiary, on the theory that if relieved by pardon from the effect of the original Philadelphia County sentence he would be eligible for parole on the Delaware County sentence. Granting this explanation to be correct we are ready to accede to the additional view of the inspectors that it will be wise, under the conditions mentioned by them in their application, to give the prisoner the benefit of the parole system, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Charles Showiah, on the conviction and sentence in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Philadelphia County in January, 1907.

The record shows that the applicant is forty-one years old. He is not married, and has no other trade than that of laborer. He has a criminal record. In spite of this fact the inspectors are of the belief that his imprisonment has had a curative effect, and that he gives promise of an ability and willingness to lead a law abiding life if released on parole. Further, they tell us that a position is awaiting him on his proposed release. He has served an imprisonment of about four years and nine months since his recommitment, which added to the four years and eight months on the original sentence makes a total imprisonment of about nine years and five months.

Relying on the judgment of the inspectors of the penitentiary that it is a prudent move to pardon the applicant on the original charge in order to give him the benefit of the present parole law, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Charles Showiah, for the offense laid in indictment No. 653, December Term, 1906, Quarter Sessions of the County of Philadelphia.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 546, March Term, 1916, Joseph McDonald, March 30, 1916, on arraignment, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging larceny, and thereupon on the same day was sentenced to pay the costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from twenty-one months to two years.

On June 6, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, and in due course the matter came before us today for hearing. Upon review of the situation, as exhibited on the record and explained at our meeting, we are inclined to accept the plea for clemency; and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joseph McDonald.

Applicant is a youth past nineteen years of age. He states that his employment was that of stenographer and typewriter. He lived at home with his father in Philadelphia. He was charged with stealing a quantity of tools from an automobile standing on the street. He had been previously arrested on similar charges. Apparently he was a wild boy, although he seems to be well connected, and of a highly respectable family. He has been in the penitentiary for nearly fifteen months under this sentence, and as we are assured that he has a good home to return to, and as counsel, in whom we have confidence, has undertaken to be responsible for his future good conduct, we feel that the ends of justice may be regarded as having been met by the imprisonment now served, and that the interests of society will not be endangered by foregoing the balance of his term under the conditions mentioned which we regard as tantamount to a parole.

We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joseph McDonald.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Montgomery, to No. 46, March Term, 1914, Peter DuPont, alias John Donnelly, March 5, 1914, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging felonious entry, larceny, etc., and on that day was sentenced to pay a fine of $10, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of from four years to five years.

On June 5, 1915, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which, on hearing, June 22, 1915, was refused. In September, 1916, a petition for rehearing was filed. Rehearing was denied. In May of this year a second petition for rehearing was filed, which was allowed at our recent May meeting. The case came on for hearing on its merits in due course today. In view of the conditions now shown us we are of the opinion that the application can be properly favored, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Peter Dupont, alias John Donnelly.

The applicant, whose real name appears to be Louis Paul Ducasse, is thirty-three years old. He is a native of France, and came to this country in 1908. His wife, whom he married here, is dead. By occupation he is a butler and valet. On his arrest he assumed the name or names under which he is indicted with the impression and intention that his friends might not know of his disgrace. On the death of his wife, sometime prior to 1913, he took to drinking to excess. By reason of this habit he lost his position in December, 1913. In the course of a short time thereafter he had squandered all his savings, about twelve hundred dollars, so that in March, 1914, he was without work and without money. It was while in these straits that the offense charged against him was committed. This offense consisted in the taking of an overcoat and an automobile tire from a garage which he found unlocked when, as he says, he went there to see a man that he knew. The articles stolen were recovered within an hour after the larceny.

This was the first criminal offense ever charged against this man. He has served three years and nearly four months for this theft. He has no ties, through relationship or otherwise in this country, and expresses a desire and intention to return to France to enlist in the army, where he had previously served a term of enlistment. We are assured by counsel that proper arrangements will be made through the French consul at Philadelphia for the enlistment, and transportation to France, of the applicant, if pardoned. With this understanding, and in consideration of the imprisonment served, we think it wise to favor the application for clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Peter Dupont, alias John Donnelly.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 24, October Term, 1916, Frank Calvert, was indicted on the charge of larceny and receiving stolen goods. H. S. Edelstein, Harry Zamsky, Harry Ruben and Charles Bistel were jointly indicted with him. On the call of the case for trial, October 12, 1916, Zamsky and Bistel entered plea of Nolo Contendere. Edelstein and Ruben pleaded guilty, and Calvert pleaded not guilty, but on the trial of the issue he was convicted. On October 13, 1916, Calvert was sentenced to pay a fine of six and one-fourth cents, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from one year to fifteen months. The other defendants received sentences of somewhat similar terms, except Bistel, who was paroled.

On December 6, 1916, an application for the pardon of Calvert was duly filed, which, on hearing, December 20, 1916, was refused. On petition, a rehearing was allowed at our May meeting, so that the case came regularly before us at our meeting today. We have given the matter thorough consideration, and now find that it has features which appeal to us with force. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Frank Calvert.

Calvert is twenty-three years old. He is not married; by employment he is a chauffeur. The history of the case shows that Zamsky, Ruben and Edelstein were employees of the Adams Express Company in the City of Pittsburgh, engaged in the different capacities of handling goods entrusted to the company. They made use of a scheme whereby they would purloin automobile tires passing through their hands, and with some outside aid dispose of the stolen property. Calvert's connection with the operation, it is claimed on his behalf, was only incidental to his having been hired by the purchaser of some of the stolen property to transport the tires to the purchaser's garage.

The burden of the reasons assigned in the first application was: The innocence of the applicant, his previous good reputation, and his impaired health. The district attorney then earnestly took issue with all the statements of the applicant along these lines. On this rehearing the district attorney maintains the same attitude so far as relates to the material facts connected with the transaction. However, as the principal reason now urged for pardon is the condition of the defendant's health, that official now writes to the board as follows:

"From my information I am lead to believe that the applicant is seriously ill with tuberculosis. If the Board of Pardons, upon investigation, find this to be true, I take the position that I would not under such circumstances oppose such clemency as the board would see fair to exercise in this man's behalf."

Dr. Rinehardt, a prominent physician of Pittsburgh, has examined Calvert during the pendency of this rehearing proceeding, and reports, under date of April 23, 1917, as follows:

"This man is affected with pulmonary tuberculosis involving the upper lobe of the right lung. The disease is in the incipient stage. I believe that under proper living conditions a complete recovery could be effected. On the other hand, prison confinement may be expected to promote the progress of the disease and cause it to develop to the incurable stage."

An additional element now brought to our attention is the sworn statement made by Ruben, one of the other defendants, to the effect that Calvert did not have knowledge of the theft of the tires, and had nothing whatever to do with the larceny.

The applicant has been in the penitentiary for more than eight months. There is at least some doubt as to his guilt. Evidently his health is not of the best, and conditions are not favorable for its improvement. On the whole, taking a humanitarian view of the application, we feel disposed to favor clemency, and we therefore recommend that pardon be now granted the applicant, Frank Calvert.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 267 and No. 268. February Term, 1916, Allen D. Robbins entered pleas of guilty on indictments charging, respectively, larceny, and carrying concealed deadly weapons; and upon the same days, February 12, 1916, was sentenced to pay a fine of twenty-five dollars, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from eighteen months to three years. In the indictment for larceny Ward Murry was jointly indicted, but we are informed that he was paroled by the court.

On May 4, 1917, an application for the pardon of Robbins was duly filed. The matter was heard at our May meeting, and the case then taken under advisement pending the supplying some further information to aid in the proper disposition of the application. On the strength of the record now made up we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Allen D. Robbins.

Robbins is a young man whose age is not stated in the application, but evidently he has passed his minority. Neither is it stated what trade he followed, if any. He is a single man. He has led a checkered life, and has been a source of trouble to his mother by reason of his various escapades. He belongs in the City of Baltimore. The history of the case on file states that in company with Ward Murry he came to the City of Hazleton on or about the tenth of February, 1916. Murry persuaded Robbins to go there for the purpose of having a boxing match. While in Hazleton they entered the saloon of William Murphy, where, after having several drinks, Murry stole an overcoat. After they had left the saloon, Murphy, the proprietor, discovered the loss of the coat, and notified the police. The two men were found at the railroad station about to depart. The overcoat was found in the possession of Murry, and upon searching Robbins an unloaded pistol, 22 caliber, not in working order was found in his possession. No ammunition of any kind was found on his person. Both men were arrested, and their trial and conviction followed.

It is claimed in extenuation for Robbins that he took no part in the larceny; likewise that the possession of the "unworkable" revolver was not a very grave offense. However, we have before us the fact that Robbins is in the penitentiary under sentence of the court, while Murry was turned over to his friends under some parole arrangement.

At the hearing it came to the notice of the board that Robbins evidently needed some restraining influence in the event of our recommending a pardon. It was suggested to counsel that inasmuch as his people lived in Baltimore, and that Robbins, while younger, had at one time been under the control of some reformatory institution in that city, it would be the part of wisdom to have the proper authorities there take charge of his case and exercise a supervisory attention to his movements and conduct. Correspondence was begun with Judge Stump, of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City, with the result that the Judge recommends that Robbins be given into the control and supervision of Mr. Charles T. Reed, executive secretary of the Prisoners' Aid Association of Maryland, supplemented with a promise on the part of the judge that he himself would keep in touch with the matter and would be glad to assist in promoting the welfare of the ward. We have carefully read all the correspondence on the subject submitted to us, and it is our judgment that in view of the near approach of the minimum term of the sentence, and of all the circumstances of the case, it will be reasonably fair to release the applicant from the penitentiary. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Allen D. Robbins, with the understanding that Mr. Reed, or some one representing the Prisoners' Aid Association of Maryland, receive Robbins from the warden of the penitentiary and take him to Baltimore, and otherwise act as his "best friend," in furtherance of the arrangement suggested by Judge Stump and Mr. Reed in their letter now on our file.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Montgomery, to No. 33, October Term, 1916, Sylvester B. Drake, September 15, 1916, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging embezzlement, waiving the finding of a bill by the Grand Jury. On the 20th day of September, 1916, the said defendant was sentenced to pay a fine of $51.63, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the county prison for a period of one year and six months.

On June 1, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, and the case came before us for hearing at our regular meeting today. We have given careful attention to the record made up for our consideration, and to the details of the matters involved as stated to us, and we are of the opinion that the application for clemency should be accepted with favor. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Sylvester B. Drake.

Drake is now about fifty-four years old. He is married, and his wife and two daughters are living. His business, prior to his election as prothonotary of the County of Montgomery, as hereinafter stated, was that of a tinsmith, which business he had successfully carried on for a number of years. In November, 1909, he was elected prothonotary of his county, and assumed the duties of the office in January, 1910. The compensation for the work of the office was then under the fee system, and so continued during the incumbency of his first term, which was lengthened from three years to four years through a change in the election laws. In November, 1913, he was elected for a second term. By this time the increase in the population of the county worked a change in the method of compensation from that of the fee system to the basis of a specified salary of six thousand dollars. In May, 1916, it was discovered that Drake had not paid into the county treasury the entire amount of money which he legally was required to turn over as the income of his office, and he was notified of the shortage. He immediately made up the deficiency and paid it over, but soon afterwards, on request of the county authorities he tendered to the Governor his resignation, which was accepted, and another person was appointed to the office in his stead. Drake advised the county commissioners that he stood ready to refund to the proper authorities any shortage which might on subsequent investigation be properly charged against him. The matter rested in this shape for several months, when in July, 1916, he was arrested on the charges of embezzlement, failure to pay over monies, failure to make entries, and false swearing to accounts. Four bills of indictment were accordingly framed, to each of which he entered the plea of guilty as previously stated. Sentence was imposed upon but one bill; on the other three sentence was suspended. It is for relief from this sentence and from the effects of these pleas that this proceeding before us has been instituted. The entire shortage found against Drake, as shown by the letter of the district attorney on file with our record, amounted to upwards of sixty-nine hundred dollars, all of which has been made good to the county by the defendant; and, so far as divulged, no loss has been sustained by the county or otherwise.

The reasons laid in the application for relief are:

1. That applicant is at present in severe ill health which threatens serious and continued illness, with grave responsibilities of death.
2. That he has made restitution when demanded, of monies with which he was charged with embezzling.
3. That he has served at the time of the filing of this petition eight months and ten days of the sentence imposed, and that he has been a model prisoner, and if now liberated would make a useful citizen.
4. Petitioner further alleges that at the time of the commission of the offense for which he is now undergoing imprisonment, that he was unacquainted with the system and method required by law for the compensation for the office of prothonotary of Montgomery county, the system had been changed from a fee system to a salary system, and that the details were intricate, and your petitioner having no previous experience in public office, having been a tinsmith before his election to the said office, became confused in his accounting as prothonotary, and consequently technically violated the law.

In support of the first reason there have been filed the sworn statements of four reputable physicians who have examined the applicant within the past few weeks. The second reason is borne out by the letter of the district attorney on file. The third reason, as to the length of time served, is self-sustaining; and the numerous letters on file testify to the previous good character of the applicant and the probability of his continuing to be a good citizen if liberated. The fourth reason, it was shown to our satisfaction, is founded on a state of facts that arose in the way mentioned therein, whereby the errors that were disclosed apparently were made without fraudulent intention and were mistakes brought about by an imperfect knowledge of accounting and bookkeeping.

Therefore, it appearing to us that the reasons assigned are valid, and there being no opposition to the application advanced through any source at all—but on the contrary there being shown the prevalence of a favorable public sentiment in the community with regard to the application—and a substantial portion of the sentence having been served, we recommend that the Executive prerogative be exercised touching this application and that a pardon be granted the applicant, Sylvester B. Drake.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Carbon, to No. 28, October Term, 1915, Thomas McPhillips, September 8, 1915, waiving the finding of a bill by the Grand Jury, tendered a plea of guilty on an indictment laying in the first-count breaking and entering, and in the second count larceny. On the same day he was sentenced to pay a fine of one hundred dollars, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from five years to ten years.

On June 5, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, and the case came regularly for hearing at our meeting today. We have considered the matter fully, and its peculiar aspects lead us to concur in the appeal for clemency. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Thomas McPhillips.

McPhillips is about forty years of age. He has no family connection, so far as known. When an infant he was left an orphan, and was taken by a charitably disposed family and reared by them. They still look upon him as one of themselves. He worked in and about the mines, and, when at work, was a steady and efficient workman. He is not strong mentally, but has no vicious habits save a weakness for intoxicating stimulants; and, while ordinarily well behaved, quiet, peaceable and law abiding, when under the influence of liquor his nature seems to undergo a complete change, and a tendency to steal breaks out to an uncontrollable extent. Indulgence in this mania for theft and house-breaking appears to give him delight and furnishes a source of boasting and pride while the sway of the malady lasts during his drunkenness. It was while he was on a periodical spree that the breaking into the railroad ticket office and the stealing of several mileage books and other articles took place, and although there was no evidence connecting this defendant with the act, but on the contrary it being shown that at the time he was so grossly drunk as to have no control at all over his movements, he voluntarily admitted the commission of the act, with the usual boastful expressions. Inasmuch as he had been before the court on previous occasions it is supposed that this present severe sentence was imposed as a corrective measure.

The formal reasons laid in the application are: "Chiefly the mental irresponsibility of the prisoner, the severity of the sentence, the uselessness of further imprisonment, the doubts about the prisoner's guilt, and the circumstances under which he pleaded guilty."

From what transpired at our hearing there is no doubt, in our judgment, that this man is not a criminal, and that if he can be properly watched and kept away from bad companions and removed from temptation, he will lead a law-abiding life. We are assured by responsible citizens of Carbon County that if McPhillips is pardoned they will extend to him a proper guardianship and act in the nature of parole officers, and thus, to the best of their ability, keep him out of trouble. Under these conditions we think it well to show the clemency asked, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Thomas McPhillips.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 6, June Term, 1915, Albert Moore, June 25, 1915, was convicted on an indictment laying the charge of larceny, and on July 3, 1915, was sentenced to pay a fine of six and one-fourth cents, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary of from two years and six months to five years.

On June 7, 1916, an application for his pardon was duly filed, but on hearing in due course was refused on June 21, 1916. A petition for rehearing was filed at our January, 1917 meeting and allowed, but on the second hearing, March 21, 1917, pardon was again refused. The matter was brought to our attention again at our meeting today, and, although informally presented, we have thought it expedient to waive the irregularity, and have given the case consideration. Our ultimate conclusion is in favor of the application for clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Albert Moore.

Moore is twenty-eight years old. He has no trade or profession. He is a cripple, and lived with his mother, whom he helped to support. The charge against him is based on a hold-up of a young man and a young woman in one of the parks of Pittsburgh late on a Saturday night as these persons were on their way home from a store, where the young lady was engaged. Certain articles of jewelry were taken from the man. The assaulting party consisted of some five or six men or boys. Some of them were positively identified, and others only partially identified. The assault took place on the night of May 23, but Moore was not arrested until June 3. He has all along protested his innocence. His identification, it is alleged, was not clearly shown. There is a great diversity in the testimony of the police officers as to his previous record and as to his connection with the present case. On the first hearing the assistant district attorney opposed the pardon. Recently another assistant district attorney, in the absence of the trial attorney who is now sick, made an investigation, and at first reached the same conclusion as his associate. Further examination, however, led him to change his views, owing to the conflicting stories given him. He now writes us fully in regard to the matter, closing his letter with the following statement:

"In view of these facts that the police themselves are at variance, and it must have been their testimony that made this conviction possible, and there being no stenographic notes of the testimony, I feel that it is my duty not only to withdraw the opposition formerly filed, but to go further and join in the request for pardon. I do this because of the conflicting testimony at this time appearing which would indicate to me that there is something in this case not entirely in line with justice."

As Moore has been in the penitentiary for two years, save a few days, out of a minimum term of two years and six months, and as there seems to be some doubt with reference to the participation in this assault, we have deemed it proper to give heed to the appeal for clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Albert Moore.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Montgomery, to No. 11, March Term, 1915, John Murphy, alias Christ Kelly, March 5, 1915, was convicted on an indictment charging burglary, and on that day was sentenced to pay a fine of ten dollars, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of from four years to five years.

On June 6, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. We heard the case at our meeting today. Upon due consideration we are of the opinion that the application is well grounded, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John Murphy, alias Christ Kelly.

The applicant is thirty-three years old. He is not married. His occupation is not stated in the application. The accusation against him is that he entered the cellar of a house in Glenside with felonious intent. No larceny is alleged. Defendant was without counsel at the trial. He denied his guilt, but was convicted. It is urged that under the circumstances his sentence was too severe, and that he has already been sufficiently punished. No previous criminal record is cited against the defendant. He belongs to a highly respectable family, and the report that we have received by letters from those who know him and his family is to the effect that if pardoned there is no probability of his being a menace to society. No opposition at all is entered against this application for clemency.

In view of what has been shown to us, and remembering that the defendant has been in prison for more than two years and three months, we think the ends of justice have been met in his case, even if guilty, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John Murphy, alias Christ Kelly.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 101, September Term, 1915, William Kearns, on February 10, 1916, was convicted on an indictment charging breaking and larceny. On February 12, 1916, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $50, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of from two years to three years.

On June 14, 1917, an application for his pardon was filed, to which we gave consideration at our meeting today. After a review of the record and the statements of counsel in the premises we think it well to endorse the application for clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, William Kearns.

Kearns is thirty-one years old; not married, and by calling is a mine worker. He lived with his widowed mother, whose support he was. He had never before been charged with any criminal offense. The act which is now the subject of examination was the stealing of some copper wire. This defendant, together with two other men by the name of O'Malley and Carter, and a stranger, whose name is not known, were on a drinking spree, when Carter proposed that they go to the colliery of the Pennsylvania Coal Company and get some copper wire. They went to the colliery, broke open a box, and took about one hundred pounds of wire which they sold to an Italian junk dealer.

On trial of the charge of receiving stolen goods the junk dealer was acquitted. O'Malley and Carter entered pleas of guilty on the charge of breaking and entering. The stranger was not found. Kearns stood trial, and was convicted. He was sentenced to imprisonment, O'Malley and Carter were paroled; so that it appears that Kearns has borne the brunt of the whole affair.

The reasons for clemency appearing in the application are: (a) That the applicant has been sufficiently punished. (b) That he was convicted on the testimony of an accomplice. (c) That the crime was committed while applicant was under the influence of liquor. (d) That he is needed at his home to assist in the support of his mother who is a widow and in very poor circumstances.

Kearns has been in the penitentiary for more than sixteen months. From the tone of the letters on file in his behalf there seems to be merit in the reasons laid. The district attorney himself, as well as the assistant district attorney who was in charge of the trial, endorse the application. The trial judge also writes us and states his approval of the application. A number of additional commendatory letters are on file.

On a review of the record we are persuaded that a proper case has been made out, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, William Kearns.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 66, October Term, 1915, J. Milton Reed, December 9, 1915, entered plea of guilty on an indictment charging embezzlement by employe of corporation, and on the same day was sentenced to pay the costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for a term of three years.

On June 6, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The matter was given a hearing at our meeting today, and upon consideration of the facts connected with the case we are of the opinion that the application deserves our approval. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, J. Milton Reed.

Reed is about forty-four years old. He is married, and his wife and one daughter are living. By occupation he is an accountant, and is an expert in that line. His general reputation was of the highest grade, but in some way, unexplainable by his friends, he came under the influence of certain schemers who prevailed on him to enter into an alleged quick money making enterprise. The usual result happened. After exhausting his own personal resources, which vanished without bringing any return, he yielded to the temptation of using his employers' funds under the hope of recouping his losses. Of course, things went from bad to worse, and in the end he was hopelessly involved. He finally confessed to his employers his speculations. He made every possible attempt at restitution by surrendering all his remaining property and holdings, including his life insurance policies. In the course of time, however, although Reed was making every effort in his power to rehabilitate himself, an information was laid against him and he was arrested. His statement is that he was induced to enter the plea of guilty under the impression gained from the promise of the prosecutors that they would not press for sentence.

Applicant has been in jail under the sentence for more than eighteen months, something in excess of one-half of his term. His wife and family are without means of livelihood except their own exertions. It is the belief of his friends that substantial justice has been done by his imprisonment, and that he has been sufficiently punished. No opposition to his plea for clemency has been raised. The district attorney, in writing to us with reference to the case, quotes a letter from the private counsel for the prosecution, as follows:

"The astounding fact is that Reed had never seen a horse race or a race horse, but blindly turned over large sums of money to a stranger without any knowledge that the money was even wagered or whether there was such a horse as the horse on which the money was placed. Judge Finletter, at the time of the trial, said that this was a case more of mental incompetency than of moral obliquity.

Personally, I believe that Reed was more of a fool than a knave, as I feel confident that in the past he had been entirely faithful to the interests of his employers."

Mr. Henry W. Hoch, a prominent builder and contractor of Philadelphia, in writing to the board, says, among other things:

"I have a position of trust awaiting his release, where hundreds of thousands of dollars will pass through his hands yearly, and he will take this without any bonds or restrictions whatsoever, and I know that I shall not be disappointed in him."

In the light of all that was told us with reference to this man, both as to his previous life and to his unfortunate slip, we think it is for the best interest of all concerned, and not prejudicial to the interests of the Commonwealth, that we accede to his prayer for clemency. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, J. Milton Reed.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Somerset, to No. 17, February Term, 1916, Charles E. Miller, February 23, 1916, submitted a plea of Nolo Contendere to certain indictments charging forgery and false pretences. On the charge of false pretences sentence was suspended, and on the charge of forgery the court imposed, May 22, 1916, sentence of a fine of two hundred dollars, costs, and imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than four years and not more than six years.

On June 7, 1917, an application for the pardon of Miller was duly filed. The case was heard and considered at our meeting today. Upon review of the record as supplemented by statements of counsel we have reached the conclusion that, under the circumstances, the relief asked for comes within the scope of the prerogative of Executive clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Charles H. Miller.

Miller is fifty-eight years old. He has a wife and three children, all depending on him for support. He is a farmer by occupation, but for a considerable period of time prior to his arrest in the latter part of 1915 he filled the office of justice of the peace. It was in his capacity as justice that he overstepped the line of honesty and faithfulness to duty. He was clearly guilty of the charges preferred. These charges were based on his fraudulent manipulating the collection of bounties under the Acts of Assembly providing for the destruction of noxious animals, popularly called the "Scalp Act." The amount of money collected from the county through his illegal practices totaled about seven hundred and sixty-three dollars.

It is apparent from an examination of the record that if at the time of the trial the county had been reimbursed, sentence would have been suspended. Efforts were made along that line, but were not successful. Subsequent attempts, however, have brought about the proposed result. The defendant has been in the penitentiary for thirteen months. Arrangements satisfactory to the county commissioners have been perfected by which three-fourths of the loss will be recovered, and the commissioners so certify to us and join in the request of Miller's friends that a pardon be allowed. Attached to the application for pardon is a letter from the trial judge, which we quote in full, as it clearly explains the situation, and furnishes justification for our action in the premises. This letter is:

"The defendant, Charles H. Miller, was not sentenced immediately after his plea of nolo contendere had been entered. The entire matter was held over because the county authorities expressed a wish that if he would reimburse the county for the monies lost through his forgery, the court should then enter a parole on payment of the costs by the defendant. But the defendant failed to carry out this arrangement with the commissioners, and therefore sentence was imposed. I understand now that friends of the defendant have secured to the county three-fourths of the amount of money thus lost through the criminal conduct of the defendant and are anxious to have the defendant pardoned; this money to be paid to the county only in the event of the defendant's securing a pardon. Taking this fact into consideration in connection with the fact that the defendant has served over one year of his time, I think the wise thing to do would be to grant the pardon at this time, and I therefore join with the county commissioners and others in recommending that the pardon be granted."

The District Attorney appends to this letter the following:

"I hereby join in this recommendation for pardon."

The county commissioners also file a formal letter of endorsement which is supplemented by the affidavit of the president of the board that Miller "has secured to the County of Somerset payment of the costs of prosecution and the restitution of three-fourths of the money misappropriated by him by means of false pretences practiced by him and the forgeries committed."

On the showing thus made we deem it proper to comply with the prayer of the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Charles H. Miller.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Somerset, to Nos. 2 and 3, May Term, 1915, James Vetroma, with three other defendants, was indicted on the charge of (1) breaking and entering in the night time with intent, etc., and (2) entering in the night time without breaking with intent, etc., and (3) receiving stolen goods, and (4) larceny. On trial all the defendants were, May 21, 1915, returned as guilty. On May 27, 1915, the several defendants were sentenced to different terms. Vetroma received sentence of fine of $10, costs, and imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from four years to six years in the one case, and in the other case, fine of $10, costs, and imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from two to three years, cumulative, making a minimum term of six years and a maximum term of nine years.

On September 8, 1917, an application for the pardon of Vetroma was duly filed, and the case was heard at our meeting today. On a full consideration of all that has been brought to our attention in relation to the matter we think the application should be favored. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James Vetroma.

Vetroma is now 21 years old. He is a coal miner by occupation. An Italian by birth. He has never been in any criminal trouble before. It seems that prior to and about the time this applicant came into Somerset County there had been a series of burglaries. The applicant was not acquainted with the other men convicted with him, but in some way was embraced in the round up. It is now conceded by the authorities that a mistake was made in his conviction and sentence. The trial judge and the district attorney have written to us to this effect. The only relative the applicant has in this country is an uncle living in Springfield, Mass., who writes us of his entire faith in the innocence of his nephew, and pledges himself to receive the applicant at his home and see that he is regularly employed, if he should be granted a pardon.

From all we have learned with regard to the doubt of the guilt of this applicant, and having in mind the fact that he has been in the penitentiary about twenty-eight months, it seems to us reasonable that the appeal for clemency is not without merit. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James Vetroma.

Sir: In the Municipal Court in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 83, September Term, 1915, Murtaugh McGrath, September 15, 1915, entered plea of guilty on an indictment charging larceny, and on the same day was sentenced to pay the costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than two years and eleven months and not more than three years.

On September 5, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The matter came before us in due course at our meeting today. We have considered all the points involved in the application for clemency, and are of the opinion that the prayer of the applicant should be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Murtaugh McGrath.

McGrath is thirty-four years old. By occupation he is a watchmaker, jeweler and engraver. He is a widower. He belongs to a respectable family of Johnstown. He has been living in Philadelphia for the past seven years or more working at his trade. While in the employ of a jewelry firm, in July of 1915, he was charged with the larceny of a diamond ring of the value of $125, and other articles. The theft of the ring is the charge laid in the indictment in question. Sentence was not imposed on the other charges.

The formal reasons put forth in the application are:

The ends of justice have been adequately served.

The law has been fully vindicated in the punishment McGrath has already endured.

The father of Murtaugh McGrath is about 74 years of age, and has not been in good health for years. Since the confinement of his son, Murtaugh, in prison, his health has been still further impaired and he lives in constant fear that he may die before his son's release from prison.

McGrath's conduct during his imprisonment is reported by his overseers to have been excellent. He has been in the hospital since his imprisonment, and at the present time is under the care of the prison physician, by whom he is reported to suffer from a nervous condition characterized by the trembling of the hands. He is also reported to show evidence of having suffered at some time in the past a fractured skull.

It is the intention of McGrath to ask employment in Philadelphia should he be released, but if he should be unable to find employment on account of ill health, or for any other cause, his family have sufficient means to support him, so that he would not become a public charge.

These reasons seem to be substantiated by the record before us. The district attorney writes:

"Inasmuch as this was defendant's first offense, and he pleaded guilty, and has served over two years of his sentence, we think the ends of justice have been fully met, and that the defendant can be pardoned with justice to the community at large.

The judge who imposed the sentence also sends a letter favoring the application.

Considering these favorable endorsements of the court officials, we are persuaded to adopt the belief that the ends of justice have been met in the more than two years' imprisonment, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Murtaugh McGrath.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Northampton, to No. 39, December Term, 1914, Frank Stone, alias Frank Heath, was, February 8, 1915, returned as guilty on the trial of an indictment charging statutory burglary; and on April 14, 1915, was sentenced to pay a fine of $25, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from three years to five years.

On September 8, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, and the motives prompting the filing of the application were explained to us at our meeting today. We are of the opinion that the application should be allowed, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Frank Stone, alias Frank Heath.

Stone is 35 years of age. He is a widower. By trade he is a machinist and electrician. He has been in prison before. This application for pardon, however, has been started by the authorities at the penitentiary mainly on the ground that the prisoner is in an advanced stage of tuberculosis, and it is thought advisable to have him removed from the penal institution and placed in the Rush Hospital for treatment for his complaint. Arrangements have been made to effect this change of location in the event this pardon is allowed.

Under the circumstances we deem it wise to yield to the decision of the prison inspectors, and therefore to the end that he may be removed to the Rush Hospital for treatment we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Frank Stone, alias Frank Heath.

Sir: At our regular meeting held this day there were submitted for our consideration, and approval or rejection, under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, certain communications from the boards of inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary and of the Western Penitentiary, each stating that the convicts therein named had perviously been released on parole, and that the said inspectors now recommend that full pardon and final discharge be granted to each of said convicts.

The following are the names of the convicts referred to, with data as to their convictions, etc., respectively:

EASTERN PENITENTIARY.

MAX TAUB. Montgomery County. Burglary. Sentenced December 9, 1911, two years and six months to 10 years. Paroled June 9, 1914.

WESTERN PENITENTIARY.

PELINO ANTELINO. Beaver County. Murder, second degree. Sentenced June 18, 1907, for 12 years. Paroled December 29, 1913.

ANTON SOSTERIC. Fayette County. Murder, second degree. Sentenced December 20, 1907, for 14 years. Paroled January 26, 1916.

With respect to each of the convicts above named, the inspectors assign the statutory reasons for their recommendations, and set forth the grounds on which the said recommendations are based.

Therefore, it appearing that all the rules of the Boards of Inspectors, and the rules of our own board, have been observed in the premises, and in endorsement of the Board of Inspectors' reports, we also recommend that an Executive order issue, granting to the said Max Taub, Pelino Antelino and Anton Sosteric, each, his final discharge and pardon.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 17, April Term, 1912, Samuel Basto, April 15, 1912, entered plea of guilty on an indictment charging statutory rape, and on April 20, 1912, was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from eight years to fifteen years.

In November, 1914, an application for his pardon was duly filed. Continuances were had until the following April meeting, when the application was refused—April 21, 1915. In June, 1917, petition for rehearing was filed, and at our meeting of that month rehearing was allowed. So that the case came regularly before us at our meeting today. We have considered the matter in the light of the record and of the statements made to us, and now are of the belief that the application for clemency is opportune. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Samuel Basto.

Basto is now about 24 years of age. He is a young Italian, and is unmarried, he was a worker in the mines. His parents still live in Italy. He was nineteen years old at the time of his sentence. The girl in the case was about fifteen years old, and, as is the custom of these people, was a willing victim, the act not appearing, according to their standards, a very serious offense. No pregnancy resulted from the intercourse. When the prosecution was started the applicant expressed a desire to marry the girl, but for some reason this consummation was not reached. The girl has since married.

The applicant has been in the penitentiary for more than five years and five months. It is now urged that his punishment has been sufficient, and the prosecuting agencies agree in this claim. The trial judge writes in regard to the application:

"In the matter of the application for the pardon of Samuel Basto, while I do not say that this should be granted, nevertheless less, taking into consideration his youth, his good record in the penitentiary as reported to me by the warden, his long imprisonment of five years and other circumstances of nationality and environment, I am willing to express the opinion that clemency would not be misplaced by his pardon."

The trial district attorney appends to the judge's letter the following:

"In the above case I heartily concur in the opinion that clemency would not be misplaced. In fact, I believe that the ends of justice have now been fully served."

Under these conditions it seems proper that the application be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Samuel Basto.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Montgomery, to Nos. 83 and 84, June Term, 1915, Joseph Collozzi, with two other defendants, John King and William Jones, June 8, 1915, entered pleas of guilty to receiving stolen goods, and on June 9, 1915, was sentenced in the aggregate to pay a fine of $20, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than four years and six months and not more than five years and three months.

On September 4, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case was heard at our meeting today. From our examination into the circumstances of the case we think it not improper to favor the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joseph Collozzi.

Collozzi is 26 years old. He is married, and his wife and three small children are living. His business was that of junk dealer. The charges in question grew out of the nature of his business. It is alleged, the two co-defendants, colored men, had burglarized certain premises in Montgomery County which were vacated for the season, and disposed of some of their plunder through Collozzi. On account of some dispute between Collozzi and these two men the latter implicated Collozzi in the burglaries. The two co-defendants entered pleas of guilty to the charges of felonious entry, while Collozzi's plea was only to receiving stolen goods. The heavy sentence was given this applicant, it is supposed, as a warning to other junk dealers, and it seems to have accomplished its purpose in that regard. The applicant has been in the penitentiary for more than two years. His family is in destitute circumstances; restitution has been made in full. There is on file an offer of employment for Collozzi, if released, at work of a different character from the junk business, thus relieving the situation of possible future temptation to fall into error again. No opposition has been interposed to the plea for leniency. On a review of the whole case, it seems to us that the ends of the prosecution have been accomplished, and that it will not be a mistake to relieve this man from prison. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joseph Collozzi.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of York, to Nos. 52, 53, 54, 55, 56 and 57, January Term, 1916, Herbert R. Coombs, January 17, 1916, entered pleas of guilty to indictments laying in each case the charge of felonious entry, larceny, and receiving stolen goods. On the same day he was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of from one year to ten years in each case, such sentences being cumulative as to three cases, aggregating an imprisonment of from three years to thirty years.

On September 1, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which was heard at our meeting to-day. Upon consideration of the facts explained to us and appearing from an examination of the record, we have reached the conclusion that the application should be favored, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Herbert R. Coombs.

The applicant is 17 years old. He has no trade. His parents are dead. His real name is said to be Hubert R. Coombs. The offenses charged against him were committed in the Borough of Hanover. There was no violence in connection with their commission. There is now no disposition on the part of any one to exact the full measure of the sentence, which on first appearance was a pretty severe one, as the defendant was only a boy of sixteen.

He has been in prison more than twenty months. He seems to have gained the good will of all who have come into contact with him in prison, and it is represented to us that he has in him the making of a good citizen under proper influences. We have the assurance of certain well-disposed persons that they will keep an oversight on him if he is released, and will guide him along right lines of living. There is before us a letter from a responsible business man in Hanover offering him immediate employment.

Under all the circumstances of the case it is our view that it will be more to the interest of this lad to liberate him from his present unfortunate position than to keep him in confinement longer. From what has been stated to us we are of the belief that the interests of society will not be jeopardized by showing leniency in the case. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Herbert R. Coombs.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Venango, to Nos. 22 and 23 and 24, January Term, 1915, Harry Bowser was, January 29, 1915, returned by a jury as guilty on the second count of three indictments charging in similar terms (1) Taking a female child under sixteen years of age, and (2) Enticing female child under sixteen years of age; and on February 1, 1915, was sentenced in No. 22 to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than one year and not more than one year and six months; and in Nos. 23 and 24, to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo similar imprisonment for not less than one year and not more than one year and three months in each case, cumulative, aggregating a minimum sentence of three years and a maximum sentence of four years.

On September 5, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. We gave the matters involved a hearing at our meeting today, and, after consideration, we are of the opinion that the application may be properly granted. We therefore recommend that a pardon issue to the applicant, Harry Bowser.

Bowser is 53 years old. He is an unmarried man. He is a cooper by trade. This is the first criminal trouble he has had. His previous reputation was good. The separate charges were framed on alleged acts of fornication with three separate girls, each under the age of sixteen. The record in the proceedings before the board established the fact that the girls were wayward, and of bad repute.

The reason laid in the application for pardon is that the sentence imposed was too severe under the circumstances, and particularly in view of the fact that the character and reputation of the girls in question for chastity was bad at and prior to the time when the crimes were alleged to have been committed.

A careful reading of the letters on file, coupled with the explanations made at the hearing, leads us to endorse the reason assigned. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Harry Bowser.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 472, February Term, 1917, Nicholas Madgey, in connection with three other defendants, Wetzel, Paul and Aiken by name, was, March 8, 1917, convicted on a charge of larceny from the person and receiving stolen goods; and on March 23, 1917, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than one year and not more than three years.

On September 5, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which, in regular course, came before us for disposal at our meeting today. The details of the crime charged were explained to us, and upon looking into the facts as shown on the record we are of the belief that the application for clemency has been properly brought, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Nicholas Madgey.

Madgey is 27 years old. He is a single man, and was living with a brother and sister in Philadelphia. By occupation he is a teamster, and worked regularly. The larceny complained of was committed by four men on one, Redfield, at premises No. 471 North Seventh street, Philadelphia, on the afternoon of February 12, 1917, between the hours of 2.30 and 3 o'clock. Redfield had come to the premises in company with a woman for an immoral purpose. He was there set upon by four young men and robbed of $55. On description given to the police the four defendants were arrested the next day. Madgey happened to be in the company of the other three this morning, and was supposed to be the fourth member of the assaulting party. On the trial the prosecutor admitted to having had several drinks on the afternoon of the assault, and was not clear in his identification of Madgey as one of his assailants. It seems to be admitted that the other three were properly convicted. This applicant, however, was not represented by counsel in court, and the verdict was a general one against all four defendants. It is now made to appear, by affidavits filed with our record, that on the afternoon of the assault Madgey was in another part of the city, some distance away, at the time fixed for the assault, and his presence with the other defendants the next day was a mere coincidence. Aiken, who seems to be the principal offender, submits his affidavit that Madgey was not the fourth member of the party on the afternoon of February 12, and that the fourth man was never arrested in connection with the affair. He further states positively that Nicholas Madgey is not guilty of the crime charged, was not present at the commission of the same, and was not connected with it in any way, and had no knowledge of the affair at all.

The claim of mistaken identity, the ground on which this application rests, has therefore been reasonably well established, and it is our belief that by reason of the doubt created the defendants is entitled to the relief asked. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Nicholas Madgey.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to Nos. 71 and 72, August Term, 1915, Walton P. Nickerson, August 12, 1915, entered pleas of guilty to charges of larceny by clerk, servant or employe, and embezzlement as employe of a corporation, and on August 18, 1918, was sentenced in each case to pay the costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than 18 months nor more than two years, cumulative, aggregating a minimum sentence of three years, and a maximum of four years.

On September 1, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case was explained to us at our meeting today, and by reason of the information imparted to us on its presentation and gained from an examination of the record, we feel disposed to favor the application. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Walton P. Nickerson.

Nickerson is 29 years of age. He is married, and his wife and infant child are living. By occupation he is a diamond appraiser and jeweler. He was employed in the office of the Equitable Loan Society of Philadelphia. In the discharge of his duties he yielded to temptation and committed the acts complained of. The amount stolen was not large, in fact, is not exactly known, as the records of the company were in such shape that the amount could not be determined. However, the applicant has adjusted the claim of the company to their entire satisfaction.

This man has served more than two years of his term. He was never before charged with any offense. Letters from former employers and from many acquaintances testify to his previous good reputation. His family connections are good; his friends will do everything in their power to help him along in the world if he is given his freedom. His wife and child have no other means of support except such as may be looked for from him.

Remembering these things, and also that no opposition at all has been raised by the prosecuting authorities, but rather an expression of willingness for our favorable action, and that full restitution has been made, it does seem that the demands of justice have been met, the law vindicated, and all corrective ends reached. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted to the applicant, Walton P. Nickerson.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Clearfield, to Nos. 30 and 33, September Term, 1915, a certain person indicted as Harry Kline, alias Joseph Hampton, alias Harry Cline, alias J. P. Helmiack, June 28, 1915, entered pleas of guilty to indictments charging forgery. On the same day the defendant was sentenced in No. 30 to pay a fine of $1. costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from three years to five years. In the other case sentence was suspended.

On September 4, 1917, an application for the pardon of the defendant was duly filed. We heard the case at our meeting today, and are of the opinion that the application should be granted. We therefore recommend that a pardon issue to the applicant indicted as Harry Kline, alias Joseph Hampton, alias Harry Cline, alias J. P. Helmiack.

This applicant, whose real name is stated to be Joe Helmick, is between 21 and 22 years of age. He has no trade or occupation. He belongs to West Virginia, where his father is one of the most respected citizens of the county in which the family lives. This boy, through some external influence, it is alleged, left his home while quite a youth, and formed bad associations. He drifted into Clearfield county, this State, where he committed the forgeries spoken of. These forgeries were the fraudulent making and endorsing two checks of the amount of $12 each. It is by reason of the use of the fictitious names on these checks that he was indicted under the various aliases.

He has been in the penitentiary for about twenty-seven months. He is ready and willing, if released, to go back to the home of his father, with whom a reconciliation has been effected; and from the numerous letters on file from responsible people of that vicinity we are assured he will be assisted in right living.

The trial judge writes:

"The defendant was a young man, and the policy of this court in all criminal cases is that the offender is not sent to the penitentiary except in unusual cases. Here the evidence disclosed that the young man was of good family, but had for perhaps three years severed his home relations and was without any of the restraints attendant upon such relation with his family and home. It seemed to the court that he was at that time determined to continue to pursue his criminal course, and the sentence to the penitentiary was imposed, though had he shown a different demeanor he would at most have been committed to the reformatory.

I am informed that his record since sentence has been excellent, and that he has been reconciled to his parents, and if clemency is extended will return to their home and their influence. From what I can learn this would be a proper case for the exercise of the pardoning power, and in view of all the circumstances I recommend that his petition be granted."

The district attorney writes:

"This young man forced and passed several checks in Clearfield county, and upon being arrested entered a plea of guilty, and the court took into consideration his nomadic habits, indifference to the consequences of his crime and showing no spirit of repentance.

From the information I have at hand I believe this to be a proper case. In view of the record for good conduct he has maintained since, his appreciation of the seriousness of his former misconduct, and the fact that he has now persons interested in his future welfare, to justify the board in exercising the pardoning power. I believe that his pardon at this time would have greater weight in influencing him in pursuing the path of rectitude than to have him serve his full minimum sentence, and would recommend this disposition of the case."

This being the state of our record, we feel justified in accepting the views of the judge and the district attorney. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joe Helmick, who was indicted as Harry Kline, alias Joseph Hampton, alias Harry Cline, alias J. P. Helmiack.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Dauphin, No. 158, January Term, 1917, James Frazer was, February 15, 1917, returned by a jury as guilty of murder in the first degree; and on March 6, 1917, was sentenced to be electrocuted.

On August 29, 1917, an application for the commutation of the death penalty to that of life imprisonment was duly filed, which brought the case before us for hearing at our meeting today. We have given careful attention to all that was advanced at the hearing and that appears on the record, and, upon full consideration, have reached the conclusion that the application is one that should be allowed. We therefore recommend that the sentence of death imposed on the applicant, James Frazer, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Frazer is a South Carolina born colored man, and is now about 37 years old. Since his arrival at age he has roamed about, and has lived and worked in several States. He finally came to this State in 1916, and found employment at the Bethlehem Steel plant at Steelton, this county. He was married in 1913, and his wife now lives at Charlottesville, Va. His parents are reported to be very respectable people in their station in life. The applicant himself has never been in any criminal trouble before, so far as known. He was convicted of the killing of Charles Smith, another colored man, on the afternoon of October 18th, last, in the City of Harrisburg. The homicide was effected by stabbing with a pocket knife. The affair took place about four o'clock. Earlier in the afternoon the two men met somewhere in the neighborhood of Brougher's Hotel, Walnut and Cowden streets. They went into this hotel together. They were comparative strangers, it is stated. They were both more or less drunk when they entered the hotel, and when they there called for more liquor the barkeeper refused to serve them on account of their drunken condition. The Commonwealth alleges that Smith asked Frazer for the loan of a dollar, promising to give it back when they got to Steelton. Frazer then had a five-dollar bill changed by the barkeeper, and about the time the money was passed over the counter the two men got into a dispute, and hard names were called. Smith had a knife in his hands and threatened to cut Frazer. The barkeeper took hold of Smith, and ordered Frazer out of the room. As Frazer went out he said to Smith, according to the Commonwealth, "I will see you on the outside—I will get you on the outside," or something to that effect. After Frazer had left the room the barkeeper loosened his hold on Smith, and almost instantly Smith started to go out the door. As he, Smith, was about to step out on the pavement, Frazer, who was right there, stepped up to him and struck him in the chest with a knife. It is alleged on the part of the defendant that as Smith stepped out the door, he, Smith, had in his hand his knife which he raised as if to strike Frazer. Frazer got in the first blow, however. Neither man spoke a word at the time of the stabbing. After the cutting Frazer left the scene, and Smith on trying to walk towards a doctor's office fell to the ground through weakness. He was soon afterwards taken to the hospital where he died within a short time. Frazer was not arrested until about six o'clock that afternoon. He was found walking the streets in an unconcerned manner. When taken to the Mayor's office and accused of the crime he stated that he knew nothing whatever of it, that he had not been at the hotel at all, and that he did not know Smith. He has persisted in this attitude ever since, and was unwilling to allow his counsel to allege self-defense on the trial.

It was argued before us that this homicide was not a case of first degree murder, in that Smith was the aggressor; and further, that, as it was shown that when the two men met at the door of the hotel Smith had his hand in an uplifted position grasping his knife in the apparent act of striking and thus was about to make a murderous attack on Frazer, the latter was justified, or at least excusable, in getting in the first blow in his defense; and further, that the mental condition of the applicant touching the events of the afternoon shows an irresponsible frame of mind. At all events, upon a careful review of the entire state of affairs connected with this unfortunate happening, the case impresses us as not having, beyond a reasonable doubt, all the features of a first degree murder, and we are persuaded that it is more than possible that it would be a mistake to exact the penalty for the highest degree of crime. We therefore recommend that the sentence of death passed upon the applicant, James Frazer, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life; but in making this recommendation we think it well to add that, in our judgment, and in view of the verdict of the jury, such recommendation shall not at any time in the future be referred to as a ground for the absolute pardon, or any further clemency in his behalf, on the assumption that this board intended to reduce the degree of the crime to a lower grade than murder in the first degree which might carry an imprisonment for a term of years.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 88, July Term, 1914, Joseph Forenza was convicted, July 8, 1914, on the charge of assault with intent to ravish. July 10, 1914, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of from four years and eleven months to five years.

On August 30, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case was heard at our September meeting, and then taken under advisement. We have given full consideration to all the matters brought to our notice in connection with the affair, and we now are of the opinion that the application should be favored. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joseph Forenza.

Forenza is an Italian 27 years old; not married, a worker in the mines. His account of the matter that brought on the trouble is that it started in a street flirtation on one of the main streets of Pittston about ten o'clock in the evening. He does not deny that he attempted to place his arms around the waist of the girl, but maintains that is as far as he went. The girl and her companion resisted his advances then, and tried to strike him with their umbrellas. He did not follow up his advances. The authorities of Pittston about that time had considerable trouble with assaults of this kind, and it is submitted by counsel for our consideration that the heavy sentence was given as a warning. The district attorney writes us in regard to the application as follows:

"I have read the reasons filed asking for clemency, and beg to advise that at or about the time of the conviction there had been a number of complaints about young Italians who had approached young women in the vicinity of Pittston and had in some instances threatened violence. This was one of the cases. There was considerable popular indignation at the time of the occurrence and later at the trial, which accounts for the severe sentence imposed.

I believe that the court imposed practically the maximum so as to have an exemplary and disciplinary effect.

If the applicant has properly demeaned himself since his imprisonment, it seems to me the ends of justice have been fully subserved."

The man has been in the penitentiary for more than three years and three months. Taking into account his previous good reputation, and the fact that employment awaits him if released, we think it well to endorse this application.

We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joseph Forenza.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 101, March Term, 1914, C. C. Meredith, April 27, 1914, entered plea of guilty on an indictment laying the charge of abortion, and on the same day was sentenced to pay a fine of six and one-fourth cents, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than five years and not more than six years.

On December 2, 1914, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which, on hearing, December 24, 1914, was refused. On May 26, 1915, a petition for rehearing was allowed. The second hearing took place at our September meeting, 1915, when the matter was held under advisement, with the result that on December 15, 1915, pardon was again refused. On December 20, 1916, a second rehearing was allowed, which was heard on January 17, 1917, and on February 21, 1917, pardon was again refused. On September 25, 1917, a third petition for rehearing was allowed. This brought the matter before us again at our meeting today.

We have given this case careful consideration at each stage of its progress with a view of striking a proper balance between the interests of the Commonwealth and those of the defendant, and have reached the conclusion that the application for clemency may now be passed on with favor. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, C. C. Meredith.

The applicant is now nearly fifty-one years old. He is married, and his wife is living. He had been a practicing physician in the City of Pittsburgh for about twenty years. His standing in the profession and his general reputation were good. However, the abortion laid in the indictment was performed by some one. The applicant now denies his guilty connection with the affair, averring that he was led into submitting the plea of guilty under the assurance on the part of his then counsel that his sentence would not likely be more than one year, and certainly not more than two years, coupled with the desire of saving his wife and friends the mortification of a public trial of the case. It is further advanced in support of the application that the sentence was made severe for the reason that there had been about that time in the criminal annals of Allegheny county numerous instances of the commission of crimes of a similar character wherein the real offenders could not be apprehended and brought to justice, and a warning was necessary as a deterrent. At all events the applicant has been in the penitentiary for three years and a half. The shame and disgrace he and his family have endured have added to his punishment. Both his aged parents, who are said to be among the best people in the State of West Virginia, have broken down in health under the stress. The applicant has lodged with the board a written declaration of his intention not to again undertake the practice of medicine, and to relinquish all rights and privileges he may have along that line.

As the case now presents itself to us we feel disposed to adopt the argument put forward in the application: "That the applicant has, in view of all the circumstances surrounding his offense and his position, already been sufficiently punished, and that no punishment additional to the disgrace and mortification already suffered by him can serve any great purpose, either reformatory or deterrent." We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, C. C. Meredith.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Bucks, to Nos. 19 and 21, March Term, 1917, charging selling liquor to minors, and to No. 23, same term, charging the keeping of a bawdy house, Robert Gaul was, March 15, 1917, returned by the trial jury as guilty; on March 23, 1917, he was sentenced, in the aggregate, to pay fines of $1,100, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the county prison for one year and six months.

On October 3, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which we heard at our meeting today. We have reached the conclusion, after considering all that was laid before us, to favor the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Robert Gaul.

Applicant is 43 years old; he is a widower, with no children. He was the proprietor of the California House, a licensed hotel in the township of Richland, County of Bucks. On a Saturday night in January, last, two young couple came by automobile to the hotel. They were all strangers to the proprietor. The young men, it seems, were students from a nearby institution, who had picked up the girls in the City of Allentown. They reached the hotel about nine o'clock, and spent the evening in the parlor, where they were served with beer. The girls were under age. They stayed at the place all night. The men were assigned one room, and the girls another, but during the course of the night they shifted their quarters to suit their purposes, pairing off and one couple taking one room and the other couple the other room. They remained at the hotel over Sunday. It is averred that, although the bar was closed, they were served with beer during the day. They remained over Sunday night, under the same arrangements they had adopted the night before. The father of one of the girls who, it is stated, was a wayward girl and was then under probation, learned of the escapade, and caused these prosecutions to be started. Nine bills of indictment were found, six charging the sale of liquor to minors, two charging the sale of liquor on Sunday, and one charging the keeping of a bawdy house. Verdicts of not guilty were returned on the Sunday indictments, and verdicts of guilty on the other indictments. Sentence was suspended on four of the convictions, the aggregate sentence first mentioned being imposed on the three convictions—two for selling to minors, and one for keeping bawdy house.

The reasons filed with the application for clemency are:

1. The sentence was heavier than under the circumstances should have been imposed.
2. The applicant has already been in jail nearly nine months for the offenses charged, the costs and fines have been paid, and the ends of justice have been met.
3. Members of the jury who sat on the trial jury, and responsible persons acquainted with the facts, recommend the pardon.
4. The applicant has heretofore borne a good character and reputation. This was the first offense with which he was charged, and he has thoroughly reformed.
5. The applicant is anxious to enlist in the service of his country and "do his bit." If not accepted, he has a good position offered him outside of the State of Pennsylvania.

From what was stated to us on the hearing we are inclined to accept the plea of the applicant, and, for the reasons stated, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Robert Gaul.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Dauphin, to No. 131, September Term, 1916, John Cain was convicted, December 5, 1916, of larceny, larceny as bailee, and receiving stolen good, and on January 29, 1917, was sentenced to pay a fine of $5, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of from fifteen months to thirty-six months.

On October 6, 1916, an application for his pardon was duly filed. We heard the case at our meeting today, and, in view of the matters shown to us, we think the application should be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John Cain.

The applicant is a colored man, 28 years old, unmarried, and a chauffeur by occupation. His previous reputation seems to have been good. He had worked at a number of automobile establishments in Philadelphia. Some time in the latter part of 1916, while at work on repairs to a certain machine at his place of employment, a man, a stranger to him, came to the place and sought to hire a man to drive a car to Harrisburg. The defendant was engaged for the job. This man drove one car, and Cain was instructed to follow him in another. When they arrived at Harrisburg they became separated. Later on in the day he met his employer, however, and they started off on the drive to Sunbury. They again became separated on the way, and when Cain reached Sunbury he was arrested, charged with stealing the machine he was driving, which, it appears, had some time previously been stolen in Harrisburg. He was brought back to Dauphin county, and was tried and convicted.

From all we can gather from the record and from statements made at the hearing Cain was not concerned in the original stealing of the machine, and when he engaged to drive it to Harrisburg he did not know that it was stolen property. Having acted without guilty knowledge, the charge of receiving stolen goods is only technical, and as the defendant has served nine months in the penitentiary we think the ends of justice have been met under the conditions mentioned, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John Cain.

Sir: At our regular meeting held this day there were submitted for our consideration, and approval or rejection, under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, certain communications from the Boards of Inspectors of the Eastern State Penitentiary and of the Western State Penitentiary, each stating that the convicts therein named had previously been released on parole, and that the said inspectors now recommend that full pardon and final discharge be granted to each of said convicts.

The following are the names of the convicts referred to, with data as to their conviction, etc., respectively:

EASTERN PENITENTIARY.

CARL FREDERICK HIRSCH. Philadelphia County. Abortion. Sentenced June 22, 1910, twenty-one months to seven years. Released on parole September 11, 1915.

CLARENCE RUMSEY. Tioga County. Murder, second degree. Sentenced October 2, 1907, for nineteen years and six months. Released on parole April 2, 1914.

WESTERN PENITENTIARY.

THOMAS GALLO. Allegheny County. Robbery and receiving stolen goods. Sentenced November 19, 1910, two years and six months to ten years. Released on parole May 19, 1913.

ANTONIO PURRETTA. Allegheny County. Robbery and receiving stolen goods. Sentenced November 19, 1910, two years and six months to ten years. Released on parole May 27, 1917.

C. W. CUPPERS. Allegheny County. Forgery. Sentenced March 18, 1910, two years to ten years. Released on parole March 18, 1912.

WILLIAM CONWAY. Blair County. Murder. Sentenced June 29, 1908, twelve years. Released on parole November 28, 1913.

MIKE MANGIA. Butler County. Rape. Sentenced September 11, 1913, two years to fifteen years. Released on parole September 11, 1915.

DANIEL MARTIN. Greene County. Entering with intent to commit a felony. Sentenced March 12, 1910, two years and six months to ten years. Released on parole October 12, 1912.

WILLIAM CLARK. Huntingdon County. Breaking and entering. Sentenced February 13, 1909, nine years. Released on parole November 29, 1913.

TONY GIGURLIO. Indiana County. Voluntary manslaughter. Sentenced July 1, 1909, ten years. Released on parole November 28, 1913.

GENNARO MEZZANOTTE. Jefferson County. Murder, second degree. Sentenced April 23, 1906, resented May 21, 1907, for twenty-six years and six months. Released on parole December 22, 1913.

AGUSTINO MACRI. McKean County. Felonious assault. Sentenced April 22, 1911, one year and six months to seven years. Released on parole October 22, 1912.

DOMINIC BEVACQUA. Mifflin County. Shooting to kill, robbery. Sentenced September 2, 1908, twelve years. Released on parole November 28, 1913.

SANDOR FARKAS. Somerset County. Murder, second degree. Sentenced February 25, 1909, ten years. Released on parole November 28, 1913.

FRANK KRUPIC. Westmoreland County. Murder, second degree. Sentenced February 24, 1908, twelve years. Released on parole November 28, 1913.

MICHAEL LANCELOT. Westmoreland County. Assault and battery. Sentenced November 12, 1913, one year to four years. Released on parole November 1, 1915.

With respect to each of the convicts above named the inspectors assign the statutory reasons for their recommendations, and set forth the grounds on which the said recommendations are based.

Therefore, it appearing that all the rules of the Boards of Inspectors, and the rules of our own board, have been observed in the premises, and in endorsement of the Boards of Inspectors' Reports, we also recommend that an Executive order issue granting to the above named convicts each his final discharge and pardon.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 460, November Term, 1914, Harry Campbell was, November 30, 1914, convicted on an indictment charging robbery, and on the same day was sentenced to pay the costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than eight years, and not more than ten years.

On March 7, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, but during the progress of our hearing at the March meeting the application was withdrawn, on suggestion of having been prematurely started, with leave to renew at the expiration of six months. The matter again came before us at our recent September meeting, when, upon hearing, we held the case under advisement pending certain investigations which the board directed to be made. Having now satisfied ourselves with respect to the propriety of favoring clemency for the applicant we recommend that the application be allowed and that a pardon be granted the applicant, Harry Campbell.

Campbell is a young colored man just past the age of twenty-one years, unmarried, and without regular occupation. Owing to unfortunate conditions attending the days of his childhood he drifted into a criminal career. His parents are of the class known as octoroons. The father is an expert cigar maker, and appears to be a man of character and standing. The mother unfortunately, through a desire to associate with persons of entirely white blood, it is stated, acquired habits of intemperance and fast living which led to a separation from her husband when the applicant was about a year old. The boy remained in the mother's custody. He grew up on the street, free from all parental control and restraint, and early in life was thrown into evil associations, formed bad habits, and gained a criminal record. In November, 1914, he assaulted a lady on the street and took her purse. He was arrested and charged with assault and battery, and with robbery. Convictions were had in both cases, but sentence was imposed only on the robbery indictment. The mother died about the time of the boy's arrest. The father has at all times maintained a good home for the other members of his family. He is the owner of a good business. He is deeply interested in his son, who, he avers, has given evidence of reformation, and whom he believes he can now influence into a right method of living. He offers to take the boy into his home, and to give him employment in his business, where he will be under the watchful supervision of his father. The investigation we caused to be made through reliable agencies convinces us that the home surroundings will be all that can be desired and that the environment will be helpful to the greatest degree along the line of the boy's reformation.

Believing that it may not be too late to have this young man weaned from his unsavory past, and considering that he has been in the penitentiary for almost three years, we are constrained to endorse this application for clemency.

We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Harry Campbell.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Carbon, to No. 1, October Term, 1903, Martin Leshauski was arraigned on an indictment laying the charge of murder, and upon trial, January 16, 1904, was found by the jury to be guilty of murder in the first degree. Before the imposition of sentence, and pending the motion for a new trial, the prisoner escaped from the jail. He was captured afterwards in the State of Montana, and returned to the county jail in February, 1909. On March 27, 1909, he was called for sentence, and then sentenced to be hanged. Pending an appeal to the Supreme Court, the prisoner again escaped from the jail in the summer of 1909. He was captured in Arizona in February, 1917, and brought back to the Carbon county jail.

On September 5, 1917, after the date for his execution had been fixed, an application for his commutation was duly filed. On the hearing of this application at our September meeting we held the case under advisement. And now, having fully considered all that was laid before us in relation to the case, our opinion is that the application for clemency deserves allowance, and we therefore recommend that the sentence of death imposed on Martin Leshauski be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

The applicant is 42 years old. He is married, and his wife and four grown up children are living. His occupation was that of miner. The homicide with which he is charged took place on the 20th day of July, 1903, in the borough of Lansford. The victim was Mrs. Mary Yananchick, in whose family Leshauski and a number of others boarded. On the evening of the day named Leshauski made preparation for leaving Lansford. He bade goodbye to Mr. Yananchick and his other friends in the house, and went out through the rear of the premises and passed down an alley. Some time after he left the house, Mrs. Yananchick, while returning from a neighbor's house and passing through this same alley, was met by some one and was shot when near the gate to her own yard. She was taken to a hospital, and died the following night, having first made a declaration that Leshauski had shot her.

While the verdict of the jury apparently established the fact of the guilt of the prisoner, it may be here remarked that no motive was shown for the murder, and no witnesses to the shooting were produced except a boy, thirteen years of age, who gave conflicting testimony, and who stated that while sitting in the bedroom of his own house untying his shoes he looked out in the dark and saw Leshauski fire the shot at the woman. After leaving the Yananchick premises that evening Leshauski spent an hour or more in the public park at Lansford watching the dancing and other amusements. He then went by trolley to Tamaqua, where he visited a saloon and pawned a pistol. The following morning he was found asleep in the yard of the railroad company near Tamaqua, brought back to Lansford and charged with the murder. The trial took place under a peculiar condition of affairs which was explained to us, and resulted in the conviction of the defendant.

The reasons set forth in the application for clemency are:

(a). The grave doubt concerning the guilt of the applicant.
(b). The unfavorable and hostile atmosphere surrounding the case at the time of the trial.

(c). The fact that the applicant was the victim of a miserably conducted defense.

(d). The suffering and anguish already suffered by the applicant.

(e). The fact that at this time no good public policy would be served by the execution of the prisoner.

(f). The fact that the prisoner, if executed, must be executed by the obsolete and barbarous method of death by hanging.

(g). The conduct and behavior of the prisoner since the commission of the offense.

(e). The almost unanimous sentiment in Carbon county for at least a reduction of sentence.

That these reasons are substantial and carry merit appears from the reading of letters from a number of responsible people in Carbon county which are on file with our record. Among others, the judge who presided at the trial, the district attorney, and the private prosecuting counsel, write in endorsement of this application.

Judge Horace Heydt's letter is as follows:

"Martin Leshauski was tried during my term of office, and I presided at his trial.

In view of all the facts and circumstances connected with the case and the lapse of time since the trial, I feel that the ends of justice would be satisfied if his sentence of death be commuted to life imprisonment."

The letter of Trial District Attorney Frank P. Sharkey is as follows:

"I was district attorney of Carbon County, Pa., at the time of the trial and conviction of Martin Leshauski, and, as such district attorney, had charge of and conducted all proceedings. E. M. Mulhearn, Esq., was also associated with me in the trial in Oyer and Terminer of Carbon County.

The proof of actual malice and intent to kill was so meagre that I remarked at the end of the trial and still believe that, if defendant had admitted the shooting and claimed it was accidental (instead of denying it) the jury would probably not have convicted him of murder in the first degree.

Under the circumstances, and at this late day, the ends of justice would probably be met by a commutation of his sentence to that of imprisonment for life."

E. M. Mulhearn, Esq., who, it appears, as private prosecuting counsel, assumed the burden of the prosecution, writes at the bottom of Mr. Sharkey's letter: "I concur in the above."

In view of the endorsements of the application as stated, and on consideration of other matters brought to our attention tending to sustain the reasons laid, we recommend that, as an act of mercy, but with no suggestion of reducing the grade of guilt as returned by the jury, an Executive order issue commuting the sentence of death imposed upon Martin Leshauski to that of imprisonment for life.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Chester, at October Term, 1916, Harry Taggart was indicted on the charge of statutory rape, and, on trial, October 6, 1916, was returned as guilty. On the same day he was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from five years to fifteen years.

On June 6, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. His case was heard at our September meeting, and was then held under advisement. At our meeting today we decided to take favorable action on the application. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Harry Taggart.

Taggart is a colored man, 28 years old; a laborer by occupation. He is a married man, and lived with his wife in the lower end of Chester County, where he was known as a quiet, inoffensive, decent fellow. He was arrested on this charge September 29th, and on the 6th of October following the case was called for trial. It is stated that, being unable to secure counsel in this short interval of time, his defense was not properly presented to the court. Facts have since come to the knowledge of the prosecuting officer that lead him to write to the board as follows:

"It is a fact that Harry Taggart had little time to prepare his defense after he was arrested and placed in jail. An investigation shows that he had a good reputation for chastity, and was a sober and industrious man. Had this been shown at the time of his trial, the result might have been different. Since all parties concerned have recommended this man's pardon, I have concluded to do likewise. One year in prison is probably enough under the circumstances."

The girl herself, and her father, as well as the magistrate and the constable join in the application for clemency. It appears to be well established that the reputation of the defendant was good, and that he had never been in any criminal trouble before.

In view of all that has been shown us by the record and on the hearing, we think it proper to favor this application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Harry Taggart.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Indiana, to No. 1, June Term, 1916, Frank Borgio was arraigned on the charge of murder, and on trial of the indictment, June 21, 1916, was returned by the jury as guilty of murder in the first degree. On January 8, 1917, the said defendant was sentenced to be electrocuted.

On September 12, 1917 (the date of execution having previously been fixed by the Executive) an application for the commutation of the death penalty to that of imprisonment for life was duly filed. This application for clemency came on regularly for hearing at our meeting today. We have considered the case in its various aspects, and our conclusion is that the application ought to be allowed. We therefore recommend that there be granted the said Frank Borgio a commutation of sentence from that of death as fixed by law to imprisonment for life.

Borgio is an Italian, now about 30 years old. He is married, and his wife and two children are living. He worked in the mines of Indiana County. In July, 1916, he was living at Nowrytown, a mining village in that county. His brother and his father lived with him, and also a boarder by the name of Sam Russo. In July of that year, during the temporary absence from their home of Borgio, his father and brother, for several days, and with no other persons in the house except the two infant children, Russo solicited improper relations with Mrs. Borgio, which she resisted. Russo forced his attention on the woman, and, it is alleged, at the point of a pistol, and with threats, accomplished his purpose. After the assault, according to the story of Mrs. Borgio, he told her that if she mentioned the matter to any one he would kill her. Mrs. Borgio, through fear, as she says, did not tell her husband of the outrage until some nine months later, when, certain whisperings having come to the attention of Borgio, he questioned his wife and elicited the story as above detailed. This disclosure by the wife was made, as the defense alleges, on the Friday preceding the day of the homicide, although the Commonwealth avers a much earlier date. Borgio immediately declared that his wife's honor must be avenged, and the two of them planned their course of action with that end in view. They had in the meantime moved from Nowrytown to Iselin, another mining village not far away. Russo still lived at Nowrytown. On the Tuesday following the Friday mentioned, being Tuesday, May 2, 1916, Borgio and his wife went from Nowrytown to Iselin about 9 o'clock in the morning, and remained there during the whole day, ostensibly visiting friends at the house where Russo boarded. They knew that Russo would return from his work in the mines about five or six o'clock in the evening. They had provided themselves each with a pistol. Russo did return about the time expected. Borgio and his wife were in the yard of the house, and as Russo passed them he greeted them in the usual way. As he was about to enter the house, Mrs. Borgio approached and fired two shots at him from the rear, both taking effect in Russo's body. Russo ran into the house and started up the stairs. Borgio followed him and fired at him three times, striking him in the legs and lower part of the body. The shots Borgio fired were not the fatal shots. Russo reached a landing on the stairway, when he sank down, weakened from the shock and through the loss of blood. Mrs. Borgio then came up and fired two more shots in his face. Russo died several hours afterwards. It seems to be admitted that the shots fired by Mrs. Borgio were the fatal shots. Borgio and his wife then left the premises without being apprehended. They were met by an automobile and driven to their home, where they immediately began the completion of their arrangements for flight. They were intercepted that night on the train they had boarded, and were then lodged in jail. The indictment was drawn charging them jointly with murder. They were tried together. At the time of the trial Mrs. Borgio was about seven months in pregnancy. The jury returned a verdict of first degree murder against Borgio, and of second degree against Mrs. Borgio. On the same day that Borgio was sentenced to be electrocuted Mrs. Borgio was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of from ten years to fifteen years.

In our judgment, an examination of this record and a consideration of the facts proven in the case, lead, without doubt, to the conclusion that the verdict of first degree murder against Borgio was a just and righteous verdict under the law. The motives that actuated the jury in their finding against Mrs. Borgio can only be surmised. In our opinion, the facts warranted the same verdict as against her husband. The Commonwealth is now confronted with a condition wherein the administration of the law sends Borgio to the death chair, and imposes upon Mrs. Borgio an imprisonment of possibly only ten years. It seems to us that for the purpose of rectifying this inconsistency, and the removing of what would appear to be a blur on the administration of justice, the Executive prerogative of granting clemency should be exercised to the extent of commuting the death sentence imposed on Frank Borgio and substituting that of imprisonment for life. We therefore recommend that an Executive order issue accordingly. But in making this recommendation we deem it proper to say that it is our firm conviction that this recommendation of the board and corresponding action on the part of the Executive shall not be made the basis of an appeal for further clemency at any time in the future, and that under no circumstances shall the commutation of this sentence be construed to mean any doubt on our part as to the guilt of the applicant as found by the jury.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Cumberland, to No. 52, September Term, 1909, Robert Alexander, September 2, 1909, entered plea of guilty to an indictment charging burglary, felonious entry, etc., and on September 23, 1909, was sentenced to pay a fine of $25, costs and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from two years and six months to ten years, having first been sentenced to an imprisonment of eight years, which was changed to the indeterminate sentence mentioned. He was paroled March 23, 1914, having served four years, six months and twenty-one days of his term. While on parole he was arrested in Baltimore, Md., for the larceny of some clothing. He served two years on his conviction on this charge, and on May 18, 1916, was returned to the Eastern Penitentiary, by reason of breach of parole, to serve the remainder of the ten-year imprisonment. He now asks to be relieved from this imprisonment.

This applicant is thirty-three years old. He is a fireman by trade, and is not married. He had previously served a short term in the County prison on conviction for assault and battery.

The reasons given in the application are:

That defendant has served a total imprisonment of six years and twenty-four days in the Eastern Penitentiary for his first offense of this character.

That a sentence of not more than eight years, less time for good behavior, was contemplated by the trial judge to be sufficient punishment for the crime to which defendant pleaded guilty, and this sentence the defendant has more than served, he being entitled to thirty-three months' commutation on an eight-years' sentence, which would reduce his actual imprisonment under the Act of May 11, 1901, to five years and three months.

That the applicant, Robert Alexander, has been a model prisoner, has determined to live a law-abiding life in the future, and will forever relinquish his career of crime.

That one, Charles S. Proferes, of Iowa City, Iowa, a brother-in-law of the applicant, will take him to live with him and employ him, and assist him to live a law-abiding life in the future.

These reasons appeal to us as being valid. The letter of Mr. Proferes was submitted to us and is now on our file. It is true that the provisions of the Parole Act call for the full term of ten years, but there being no aggravating features about this case, and the imprisonment of more than six years appearing to be a pretty substantial punishment, and with the bona fide assurance of immediate employment when released, we are constrained to approve the application for clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Robert Alexander.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Montgomery, to No. 18, December Term, 1914, Joseph Marzer, alias Joseph Mazur, was jointly tried with George Karimar, alias Dziroc Kaczmasz, on the charge of murder. On December 12, 1914, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty as to Kaczmasz, and as to Joseph Mazur, guilty of voluntary manslaughter. On December 12, 1914, Mazur was sentenced to pay a fine of $10, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for seven years.

On September 1, 1917, an application for the pardon of Mazur was duly filed. The case was heard at our September meeting, and has since that time been held under advisement. We have now concluded, after due consideration, that the application should be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joseph Marzer, alias Joseph Mazur.

The applicant was nineteen years old at the time of the commission of the homicide; he is not married, and by occupation is a mill hand. He is an Austrian Pole, and was unable to speak or understand the English language. He had no criminal record. On Saturday, October 31, 1914, he worked until twelve o'clock, the quitting time. He went to his home and remained there until about four o'clock, and then went to Norristown, and returned home about seven-thirty o'clock. He then went out to meet one of his friends, George Kaczmasz, the co-defendant. These two then went to the house of Frank Koras, where they had some intoxicants. A quarrel arose between Koras and Kaczmasz. Mazur persuaded Kaczmasz to go to Bridgeport to swear out a warrant against Koras. When they arrived at Bridgeport they learned they were too late to find the magistrate at his office, and they then started for home. Before leaving Bridgeport they loaded themselves up with whiskey, and carried several bottles of the liquor with them which they drank on the way. Along about midnight they passed the house of Walter Cicosky. Cicosky was standing on his porch. Kaczmasz said "Good evening." Mazur then said "Come on, don't bother with him, let the devil take him." They did not stop but continued on their way towards home. Their remarks seem to have angered Cicosky who followed them and engaged them in a scuffle. The applicant alleges that Cicosky struck Kaczmasz and knocked him down and then struck the applicant; and that while all three were on the ground Cicosky pulled a knife which Mazur took from him and with which he stabbed Cicosky to prevent, as he said, his doing further harm. Cicosky died a short time after the stabbing.

The following are the reasons attached to the application for clemency:

That he committed the offense while under the influence of liquor.

That at the time of the commission of the offense for which he is now undergoing punishment he was of youthful age.

That the offense was committed when the petitioner, as was testified by the witnesses in behalf of the Commonwealth, was pursued by Walter Cicosky, the decedent, who came out of his house and followed petitioner up the roadway where a scuffle or fight took place between petitioner, who was of short stature, and weighed about 115 pounds, while the deceased was a powerful man, about twenty-five years of age, weighing about 160 pounds.

That said offense would never had been committed if said Walter Cicosky had not followed petitioner.

That petitioner has already served about two years and seven months of the sentence imposed and that during that period he has been a model prisoner.

That at the time of the commission of the offense for which he is now undergoing imprisonment he was an illiterate youth of Polish parentage, unable to read or write; and that since his confinement he has acquired knowledge and education, so that if liberated he would make a useful citizen.

Our inquiries addressed to the prosecuting authorities of Montgomery County have failed to bring any response. We therefore assume there is no serious objection on their part to the allowance of this application. Under all the circumstances of the case, so far as we can reach the facts, it appears that the remedial effect of the punishment has been accomplished, and it is thought that no public interests will be injured by acceding to this application but that release from prison may be of great profit to the defendant and indirectly a benefit to society if he leads a proper life, as indications appear to warrant. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joseph Marzer, alias Joseph Mazur.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Bradford, to No. 1, September Term, 1915, Alice Wheeler was jointly with John Wheeler, Fred Wheeler and Edward Wheeler tried on the charge of arson; and in the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace to No. 33, September Term, 1915, the same parties were tried on the charge of conspiracy. The two cases were tried together. Verdicts of guilty were rendered against each defendant except Edward Wheeler. On September 13, 1915, Alice Wheeler was sentenced on the arson conviction to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than three years and not more than four years. The other convicted defendants received lighter sentences. On the conspiracy conviction sentence was suspended as to all the defendants.

On November 8, 1917, an application for the pardon of Alice Wheeler was duly filed. The case was heard at our meeting today. After considering the matters involved in the light of the record and of the statements made to us we are of the opinion that the application should be favored. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Alice Wheeler.

Mrs. Wheeler is about fifty-two years old. She has been living with her co-defendant, John Wheeler, for many years as his wife, although they were never formally married. Some three years prior to this conviction the Wheelers purchased a small farm in Bradford County, where they had lived all their lives. The purchase price was $1,000. A payment of $100 was made. An insurance policy of $500 on the buildings was assigned to the vendor. Mrs. Wheeler had also a policy on her personal property of $300. In the early morning of June 25, 1913, fire consumed the dwelling house and most of its contents. Suspicious were aroused, and the defendants were charged with the crime above stated. The evidence against them on the trial was largely circumstantial, supported, however, by certain admissions of some of the defendants, and the question of an improper conviction has not been raised.

The reasons for clemency, as stated in the application, are:

That the said Alice Wheeler has always been a peaceable, law-abiding, industrious woman, and until her conviction in this case free from any charge of improper conduct or wrong doing.

That she was jointly indicted with her husband and two sons for said offense; that the testimony in the case was largely, if not wholly, circumstantial, consisting in part of alleged declarations, some of which were made by the other defendants not in her presence and by which she was prejudiced; that she has up to the present time persistently asserted her innocence of the charge.

That about a year and a half before her conviction she was afflicted by an attack of rheumatism of great severity, extending over a period of nearly six months, and from which she has never fully recovered, and is still suffering from the same.

That for several years she has been greatly troubled with a serious condition of her breast, which at times presents a terribly swollen and angry appearance, and which is said to be incurable and of a tubercular nature.

That longer confinement will probably result in a serious impairment of her health, and perhaps loss of life.

That she has already been in prison two years and twenty-seven days, has suffered and been sufficiently punished; that neither the public good nor the reformation of Mrs. Wheeler require her further imprisonment.

The letters from the agent of the insurance company, who was the prosecutor in the case, from the chief of police, the county commissioners, the county detective and others, including the medical inspector of the county, all of whom know the facts and surroundings of the case are a unit in representing that in the opinion of the writers the ends of justice have been served, and they join in the recommendation that the application be granted.

The district attorney writes, saying among other things:

"If her condition be as alleged, and of this I have no personal knowledge, considering the time she has now served in prison I have no objection to interpose in the application she now makes."

It appears to us that in view of these indorsements, and remembering the fact that the other defendants have been released, and that this applicant has served more than two years of her time, we may well say that she has suffered sufficient punishment, and that neither the public good nor her own reformation require her further imprisonment. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Alice Wheeler.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 6, February Term, 1917, Levi Kearns was convicted on an indictment charging felonious assault and battery, and on February 27, 1917, was sentenced to pay a fine of 61-4 cents, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than two years and not more than three years.

On November 5, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, and the matter came before us at our meeting today. We have considered the case in the light of the record, and of the statements made to us, and we are of the opinion that the application deserves allowance. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Levi Kearns.

Kearns is 39 years old; he is not married; by trade he is a skilled machinist. He had been paying attention to a young woman in whose family he boarded, and about the middle of the year 1916 these two young people became engaged to be married. On Christmas Day of that year, on entering the house to call on the young woman, Kearns found her in the company of another man and in a compromising attitude. This discovery that the girl to whom he was betrothed was false to him created in his mind great and unusual excitement. He remonstrated with the girl, and his remonstrance was met by the man with the threat that he would shoot his head off. The man then forcibly ejected Kearns from the house. It was then, while lying on the pavement outside the house as the result of the violent ejection, and in the belief that the man, in whose possession he had seen a pistol, was about to assault him further along the line of his previous threat, that, as is alleged, Kearns shot through the doorway at the man. No material damage was done.

The reasons put forward for clemency are substantially that the provocation was great; that the defendant believed he would be further murderously assaulted; that he has been sufficiently punished; that his former employers, the Westinghouse people, for whom he worked for many years, have offered him his old position if he is released under these proceedings.

The trial judge, in writing to us about the case, says, among other things:

"I beg to say I have no objection to the granting of said pardon. In view of the facts and circumstances I am inclined to the view that further punishment is unnecessary, and will accomplish no useful purpose. I am advised that Kearns will be given employment by his former employer immediately upon his release, and that, as he is a skilled mechanic, his services at this time will be of special advantage to his employer."

The trial assistant district attorney also writes us that their office will have no objection to the granting of this application.

A number of other highly commendatory letters are on file with the record, attesting to the previous good character of the applicant, as well as to his efficiency as an expert mechanic, and to the belief of the writers that his release, will not be prejudicial to the interest of society.

Taking into consideration all that has been shown to us with regard to this application, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Levi Kearns.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Armstrong, to No. 1, March Term, 1913, Emanuel Jackson was arraigned on the charge of murder, and upon trial, March 23, 1913, was returned as guilty of murder in the second degree. On March 26, 1913, the defendant was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than fifteen years and not more than twenty years.

On October 7, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case was heard at our meeting today. On consideration of the matters appearing on the record, and explained to us at the hearing, we believe that the application should be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Emanuel Jackson.

Jackson is 34 years old; a laborer by occupation, and not married. He boarded with his mother and stepfather, Lydia and William James. The stepfather was the victim of the homicide. These people lived in the town of Apollo, Armstrong County. On the evening of the 13th of February, 1913, Jackson came home after having spent some time with a party of friends. At this gathering he drank some wine. The stepfather, James, was in the house when Jackson entered. He had been drinking heavily during the day, and, it is said, was in a bad temper. The defendant passed through the room where James and his wife were sitting. For some reason, the loud closing of a door, it is stated, James began a quarrel with Jackson, which resulted in his ordering Jackson from the house. Jackson went to his apartment, got his clothes, and was about leaving the house, when James resumed his quarrelsome attitude, and, according to the testimony, attempted to strike Jackson with a chair as he was passing through the narrow hallway. Jackson then fired at him at close range, from the effects of which shot James died. Jackson at once gave himself up to the authorities, and his subsequent trial resulted in the conviction stated.

The formal reasons for clemency advanced in the application are:

Because he has now served nearly five years, which is more than sufficient punishment for any crime committed.

Because the jury should not have found him guilty of any offense at all.

Because the court who tried the case and the surviving assistant district attorney both request by letter that the defendant be pardoned.

The trial judge writes:

"It developed in the testimony of the case that Emanuel Jackson had been rather a decent citizen prior to the trouble which terminated in him shooting his stepfather. There was also some evidence looking toward an attack on the part of the stepfather, which Jackson and his mother seemed to think indicated an outbreak of violence on the part of the stepfather, and Jackson claimed that his actions were governed by his desire to protect himself from bodily harm.

Jackson has now been confined in the penitentiary for over four years, a period of time which certainly would give him ample time to think over his trouble, and possibly instill in his mind an effort to find himself, and become a better man.

Personally, I feel that he should be given an opportunity to develop along this line, and would be glad to enroll myself among those who ask for mercy at your hands for this man, as I believe that further confinement would possibly tend to harden him, so that no good result could be had from his longer confinement."

To this letter of the judge the present district attorney attaches his written approval.

C. A. Reed, Esq., writes:

"In the above case I was private counsel and assistant district attorney appointed by the court. Jefferson L. Leason, Esq., district attorney at the time, has been dead for several years, so that I am the only person surviving that represented the Commonwealth. I have reviewed the testimony, and remember the trial quite well. I thought at the time that the sentence was very severe, and I now think that the defendant has been punished fully for his offense. I would therefore join most fully in the application for the pardon of Emanuel Jackson."

In view of these endorsements of the prosecuting authorities it seems proper that this board should adopt the opinions therein stated and likewise give its sanction to the application. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Emanuel Jackson.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Butler, to No. 9, March Term, 1912, Tony Murro was, March 14, 1912, convicted on an indictment charging (1) assault with intent to kill, (2) assault and battery, (3) pointing fire arms, and on March 22, 1912, was sentenced to pay a fine of $250, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than one year and nine months and not more than seven years. On June 30, 1914, he was released on parole, having then served two years, three months and eight days, being more than six months in excess of the minimum term. While on parole he was arrested and charged with assault with intent to kill, and aggravated assault and battery, the offenses laid in the indictment as having been committed September 7, 1914. On trial of the indictment framed on these charges, No. 31, September Term, 1914, Quarter Sessions of Butler County, he entered a plea of nolle contendere, and on March 16, 1915, was sentenced to pay a fine of $50, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Allegheny County workhouse for two years. He served this last named sentence, less commutation allowed by law, and was released from the workhouse October 21, 1916. This sentence to No. 31, September Term, 1913, automatically revived the sentence imposed to No. 9, March Term, 1912, and the prisoner was remanded to the authorities of the Western Penitentiary to serve out the balance of the unexpired term of seven years. It is from the effect of this first sentence that he now asks to be relieved through the grant of a pardon.

This applicant is twenty-eight years old. He is a plumber by trade. He is not married but it is averred his father, aged eighty, and three unmarried sisters are dependent on him for support. The history of the case, as filed, presents a lengthy statement of facts, partly tending to show that the prosecutions of the applicant were in reality persecutions by the police authorities of Butler County on the theory that the applicant was a member of the Black Hand Society, whose depredations about that time in the counties of Butler and Lawrence had wrought up excitement in the public mind and established a clamor against all Italians charged with or suspected of the commission of any crime. So far as was shown to us, however, this charge of Black Hand activity against Murro was without foundation. Briefly stated, the material facts in the matter before us are these: The prosecution in the case grew out of a dispute between Murro and a man by the name of Cherry. Murro and Cherry had from early life been the best of friends. On the evening of September 23, 1911, three young Italians, friends of Murro, went to Cherry's place of business, where for some reason not material to our inquiry they became involved in an altercation with Cherry who beat them up and put them out of his place. The next day Murro went to Cherry's house and complained to him about the treatment he had given his, Murro's, friends the night before. Murro had been drinking some. One word brought on another, and finally Murro slapped Cherry in the face with his open hand. The men then grappled. Cherry made an attempt to draw his pistol from his pocket. He did not succeed in this. Some one in the crowd that had gathered stated on the trial they saw a pistol in the hand of Murro. However no pistol was discharged, and apparently no other assault was made than the slapping in the face. The affair was proclaimed to be another Black Hand outrage, and Murro, on account of threats made against him, left the locality. He returned several months later, and he and Cherry appeared to be on friendly terms. However, on January 8, 1912, Cherry, at the instigation, it is alleged, of certain parties desirous of inflicting punishment upon Murro, and indirectly overawing other Italians in the locality, made an information against Murro for the assault committed on the previous September 24. On this basis the conviction was had and sentence imposed, and it is from this sentence Murro now asks to be relieved by pardon.

The reasons laid in the application for clemency are substantially that the first sentence was too severe under the circumstances, and that the time already spent in prison has been more than an expiration for the offense charged. The prisoner originally spent more than two years and three months in the penitentiary; on his recommitment he has been there more than thirteen months. Cherry, the prosecutor, submits to the board a lengthy statement under oath in support of this application for pardon, stating among other things that he himself, of his own volition, is bearing all the expenses of this proceeding, and averring that he would not have brought the prosecution except for the influence and pressure of other people, and that he and Murro have always been friends, and that he believes the defendant has been more than sufficiently punished.

The trial district attorney, W. B. Purvis, Esq., writes to us as follows:

"I was district attorney of Butler County at the time of the trial of the case of Commonwealth vs. Tony Murro at Q. S. No. 9, March Term, 1912, on the charge of assault with intent to kill.

I have a distinct recollection of the important phases of the case, and from this recollection, together with the record, I feel that the defendant by serving the minimum sentence has fully satisfied the demands of justice for the offense committed, and will interpose no objection to the granting of the pardon asked."

The trial judge, Hon. James M. Galbreath, appends to this letter:

"I hereby join in and endorse what is said by Mr. Purvis in the foregoing letter."

Technically, and in strict enforcement of the provisions of the Parole Act, Murro should serve the full seven years' maximum. However, irrespective of this, the case before us presents aspects which induce us to favor the application on its merits. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Tony Murro.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 608, January Term, 1912, Rosario Battaglio was arraigned on the charge of murder, and on trial, May 2, 1912, was returned by the jury as guilty of murder in the second degree. On June 25, 1912, he was sentenced to pay the costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than eighteen years nor more than twenty years.

On September 5, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which, after several continuances, was heard at our meeting today. On consideration of the facts with reference to the commission of the crime and the present conditions, we are inclined, on due consideration, to heed this plea for mercy. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Rosario Battaglio.

The applicant is 37 years old, and is by occupation a tailor. He is married, and his wife and six children, aged from six to thirteen years, are living. He was never before accused of the commission of crime. He is said to have been a steady and industrious workman, of exceptional ability. He provided well for his family.

The facts bearing on the present inquiry are substantially as follows: On his way home from work on the evening of December 26, 1911, he stopped in a saloon in the neighborhood of his home, and while there was assaulted by a man whose name he did not know, and, apparently, without reasonable cause. He attempted to lay an information against his assailant, but as he did not know his name the magistrate declined to issue the warrant. The next day Battaglio sent his daughter to the saloon to get, if possible, the name of the assailant. Word was sent him to come around himself. He went to the saloon then himself, and there saw the bartender, with whom some argument arose. As applicant was about to leave the place he says he detected a motion on the part of the bartender to reach for his pistol. Under the belief that he was about to be assaulted again Battaglio opened fire on the man and shot him, from the effects of which shot the man died. This bartender was not the man who had assaulted Battaglio the evening before.

The reasons laid before us for extending clemency in this case are:

Because the sentence imposed upon him was severe in every aspect, and the testimony showed that he fired the shots that he did in self-defense, having been assaulted in the same place on the day previous to the killing.

Because his children, six in number, have been without his support ever since his incarceration, and they are all of an age when they need the money he can make in order to properly educate and support them, his wife being compelled by her own labor to support the children, none of whom are of an age to bring in any money for the support of the family.

That this defendant deserved some punishment is not denied, but the deplorable condition of his wife and children is made the basis of the plea for relief. The wife has struggled to the extent of her ability to keep the family together; up to the present time she has succeeded, but in the effort her health has broken down, and she is now in an advanced stage of tuberculosis and cannot longer keep up the fight. The only alternative is to scatter the children around in separate charitable institutions and place the mother under proper medical treatment. If the husband is released, we are told, being an excellent workman he has a place of employment ready for him, and will thus be able to take care of his family. Having been in prison nearly six years, we think that under the circumstances as detailed to us it will be consistent with all notions of justice to favor this applicant out of humanitarian reasons, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Rosario Battaglio.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Columbia, to No. 6, February Term, 1914, Cosimo Di Nicolini was tried on the charge of felonious rape, and on February 3, 1914, was convicted. On the same day the court pronounced sentence of fine of $1,000, costs, and imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than four years and not more than seven years.

On November 7, 1917, an application for the pardon of the defendant was duly filed, and the case came on regularly for hearing at our meeting today. On full consideration of the matters shown by the record and explained to us on the argument, we are inclined to favor the application. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Cosimo Di Nicolini.

The applicant is 38 years old. His occupation is given as agent; he is not married. The crime charged is laid to have been committed on the 10th day of November, 1913, at the home of the girl's father, in whose family the defendant lived. Defendant and the girl were sweethearts, and were engaged to be married; the marriage would have been consummated except for the objection of the girl's father. There is no doubt of the technical guilt of the defendant.

The reasons given for clemency are:

That although he was convicted of the statutory crime of rape, yet there was no viciousness or moral degeneracy on the part of the defendant in the perpetration of the said crime.

That the defendant and the girl whom he ravished were sweethearts, and were engaged to be married at the time of the commission of the offense.

Under the peculiar state of facts as alleged in the above reasons, and putting aside the legislative enactment regulating said crime of statutory rape, at most, its other constituent element, would be mere fornication.

Under the circumstances he has been sufficiently punished.

From all that we can glean on an examination of the record and the history of the case, we are of the belief that these reasons are adequate for the interposition of the pardoning power. The trial district attorney writes us in endorsement of the application, saying:

"I have always thought the sentence imposed too severe, and believing the interest of justice would be served if the time of imprisonment were shortened, I therefore join in recommending the pardon to be granted."

Thinking that a proper case has been made out for favorable action, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Cosimo Di Nicolini.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Jefferson, to No. 3, April Term 1916, Henry Ward Mottern, August 23, 1916, was found guilty of the crime of murder of the first degree, and on September 4, 1916, was sentenced to suffer death in the manner provided by the act, approved June 19, 1913, P. L. 528.

On October 3, 1916, an application was made to the board for the commutation of this sentence. The reasons given in the application were:

"Section 1. Your petitioner is the father of Henry Ward Mottern, who, on August 23, 1916, was found guilty of the murder of one William Haines on March 22, 1916, at Oliver Township, Jefferson County, Pennsylvania, and convicted of the crime of murder of the first degree, and, on September 4, 1916, sentenced by the Honorable Charles Corbet, judge of the Court of Oyer and Terminer of said county, as follows: 'You, Henry Ward Mottern, having, upon a fair and impartial trial in this case, been convicted of the crime of murder of the first degree, the sentence of the court, in accordance with the statute in such case made and provided, is that you, Henry Ward Mottern, suffer death in the manner provided by the Act of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth, approved June 19, 1913, P. L. 528, entitled: 'An act fixing the penalty for murder of the first degree; regulating the procedure incident to the infliction thereof; prescribing and providing for a place and manner of inflicting said penalty, on the grounds of the new Western Penitentiary of this Commonwealth, in Centre County; making an appropriation therefor; repealing inconsistent legislation; and providing that neither this act nor said repeal shall apply to any case in which it shall appear that said crime was committed prior to the date of the approval of this act,' this sentence to be carried out as provided in said act. And you shall stand committed until this sentence is carried into execution. By the court. Charles Corbet, president judge."

Section 2. That the said Henry Ward Mottern was seventeen (17) years of age on July 2, 1916, and is one of five children of your petitioner and his wife, and that he has no trade or profession, and, prior to his arrest and imprisonment in the County Jail, at Brookville, Pennsylvania, on March 23, 1916, resided with your petitioner, as a member of his family, on a farm in Oliver Township, Jefferson County, Pennsylvania.

Section 3. That the said Henry Ward Mottern has never heretofore been convicted of any crime.

Section 4. That the said Henry Ward Mottern has never before applied for any relief from the sentence in question.

Section 5. That your petitioner respectfully submits the following grounds or reasons for clemency, to-wit:

a. That at the time of the commission of said crime, to-wit, the murder of William Haines, on March 22, 1916, the said Henry Ward Mottern was sixteen years, eight months and twenty days old.

b. That by reason of his immature age and temperment he was easily led and influenced by evil companions and associates.

c. That at the time of the commission of said crime, he did not, and does not now comprehend the magnitude thereof.

d. That at the time of his arrest, he voluntarily and freely confessed his commission of the crime to State Constables, the District Attorney and others, and, at no time subsequent thereto, by deceit or otherwise, attempted to avoid responsibility or escape punishment for his crime.

e. That, without promises of regard or clemency, he assisted the Commonwealth and the District Attorney in the trial and subsequent conviction of one Ernest Haines, his accomplice in said murder.

f. That at the trial of the said Ernest Haines for murder, he, the said Henry Ward Mottern, voluntarily offered himself as a witness for the Commonwealth, and, although incriminating himself, testified fully and clearly regarding the commission of said crime by himself and the said Haines, which testimony, fully corroborated by facts and circumstances, resulted in the conviction of the said Haines of the crime of murder of the first degree.

g. That, on account of the immature age of the said Henry Ward Mottern, his confession of guilt and the assistance rendered by him to the Commonwealth as aforesaid, the full penalty of the law should not be inflicted upon him.

This application was refused October 18, 1916. On November 15, 1916, a motion for a rehearing was denied, and, on January 11, 1917, a second petition for a rehearing was refused. On August 31, 1917, a third petition for a rehearing was presented which is still before the Board.

The applicant is seventeen years old. He has no trade and is unmarried. The reasons given in the third petition for a rehearing are:

"1. That, on August 23, 1916, he was found guilty of the murder of one William Haines in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Jefferson County, Pennsylvania, and, thereafter, to-wit, on September 4, 1916, was sentenced to death by the Honorable Charles Corbet, the Judge of said Court.

2. That at the date of the commission of said crime, your petitioner was sixteen years, eight months and twenty days old.

3. That, at the same term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer of said County at which he was convicted as aforesaid, one Ernest Haines, who was jointly indicted with him but tried separately was convicted of the crime of murder of the first degree, and, thereafter, was sentenced to death by the Judge of said Court.

4. That the said Ernest Haines, like your petitioner, was indicted, tried, convicted and sentenced for the murder of the said William Haines, the former's father.

5. That both your petitioner and the said Ernest Haines have heretofore appealed to your Honorable Board praying for a commutation of their said sentences.

6. That after the refusal and failure of your Honorable Board to act favorably upon their said appeals for clemency, the said Ernest Haines, by his counsel, appealed his case to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, which said Court reversed and set aside the proceedings in the said lower Court, and remanded said case for retrial.

7. That, during the week beginning August 20, 1917, the said Ernest Haines was retried for the crime of murder in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of said County, and acquitted, and, on August 24, 1917, was discharged and given his liberty.

8. That your petitioner was a witness against the said Haines at both his first and second trials and testified that he, the said Haines, was the instigator of said crime and planned the same.

9. That your petitioner, in spite of said acquittal, insists that the said Ernest Haines planned said crime and induced him to assist in the commission thereof.

10. That your petitioner submits that it is not fair or just that he should be made to suffer the full penalty of the law for the commission of said crime, and that the said Ernest Haines, who suggested, planned and assisted in the commission thereof, should be given his freedom.

11. That your petitioner has never denied and now admits that he shot and killed William Haines on March 22, 1916.

12. That, although he voluntarily confessed to his participation in the commission of said crime, and, without offers or expectation of reward, and at his own suggestion, assisted the Commonwealth in the two trials of the said Haines, your petitioner believes that, under all the circumstances, he is entitled to some clemency, and that the commutation of his said sentence will not defeat the ends of justice.

The reasons set forth in this last petition appeal to us as being valid. We believe the case of the applicant is not to be determined altogether by the fact that he was indicted, tried, and convicted for the crime. His case is inextricably connected with that of Ernest Haines, who was indicted with him for the same crime and who has been acquitted on a second trial upon evidence similar to that upon which the applicant was convicted and which was deemed sufficient by the jury in the first trial of Haines to justify his conviction.

We do not believe justice will be done by compelling one of these boys to suffer the full penalty of death while the other is permitted to enjoy complete freedom; nor on the other hand are we disposed to recommend the applicant for pardon as there exists no question as to his guilt. Constrained by the acquittal of Ernest Haines, we, therefore, recommend that the sentence of the applicant, Henry Ward Mottern, be commuted from death to imprisonment for life.

This recommendation is made without the rehearing petitioned for, as all the facts are before us and no further argument of counsel would be of use.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to Nos. 419 and 420, March Term, 1913, Samuel Balonsoff, March 19, 1913, was convicted on two indictments charging burglary; and on that day was sentenced in each case to pay the costs and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from three years to four years, cumulative, aggregating an imprisonment of not less than six years and not more than eight years.

On November 16, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. His plea for clemency was given a hearing at our meeting today. We are of the opinion that the application has been properly brought, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Samuel Balonsoff.

Balonsoff in his application is spoken of as a salesman. His age is not stated, but presumably he is a young man in the early twenties. Neither is it stated whether or not he is married. His life has not been free from the commission of crime. The Record before us shows that in the year 1910, when he was fifteen years old, he was sentenced to the House of Refuge for pocket picking. However, with reference to the cases now in hand it is contended that he was not guilty of the offenses charged in the present indictment, although the jury found against him on the issue raised. The point raised in favor of this application for pardon is that the sentence was unduly harsh, and it seems to us that this point has been well taken. He has been in the Penitentiary more than four years and nine months. The Reformatory purpose of his sentence evidently has been accomplished by this time, or it likely never will be brought about.

Under the circumstances it seems to us that the demands of justice have been satisfied with reference to the charges made by the nearly five years imprisonment, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Samuel Balonsoff.

Respectfully submitted,

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Clearfield, to No. 16, September Term, 1916, D. O. Downing, November 27, 1916, entered a plea of nolle contendere on an indictment charging assault and battery with intent to kill, and on the same day was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from two years to five years. On November 6, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case was before us at our meeting in November and has been held under advisement since that time. We have given the matter thorough consideration, and in the light of all that has been made to appear we are of the opinion that the application should be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, D. O. Downing.

Downing is forty-four years old. He is a farmer and lumberman by occupation. He is married and his wife and six children are living. He belongs to a family of good standing in the community and had heretofore until the commission of the act charged in the indictment conducted himself as a good citizen. For some unexplained reason this man on the ninth day of June, 1916, between twelve and one o'clock in the daytime entered the Clearfield National Bank, in the Borough of Curwensville, having a revolver in each hand, one of which he pointed toward the Teller and the other toward the Cashier. Not a word was spoken by him. The officials named seized him by the arms, and in the scuffle that took place in their attempt to disarm him one of the pistols was discharged. The bullet struck the Teller on the lip and inflicted a slight wound. Both men desisted from their resistance, and Downing was left in the room alone for several minutes, after which he quietly left the bank. He took no money, although a large amount was within his reach, and at no time during the whole affair did he speak a word or demand any money. He was at once arrested, and when questioned about his act did not remember what he had done. At the hearing before the Court before the passing of sentence it was shown that at the time of his strange act Downing was laboring under a temporarily unbalanced mind caused by worry over his private affairs. He has been in the Penitentiary more than a year. The report of the prison physician shows that his physical condition now is good and that his mental condition is fairly good. The District Attorney, in his letter to us, says:

"The defendant, disguised as a colored man, on June 9th, 1916, entered the Curwensville Bank, armed with a revolver and attempted to rob the bank, shooting one of the tellers at the bank. The attempt was so bungled, and the actions of the man so peculiar, that it was very evident that the defendant's mind was affected. His mental condition was largely the result of his physical condition. The evidence produced satisfied me and the Court that the method adopted in attempting the robbery was not the method of a sound mind, and that his mental trouble appeared to be temporary.

If his physical condition has improved and mental condition has cleared up I am inclined to think it is a proper case for the exercise of clemency."

The applicant's mother appeared before the Board at the hearing, and told us that she was the owner of a farm near Hollidaysburg at present without a tenant, and that if her son is released she will place him and his family on this farm and put its management in his hands. Responsible persons in the neighborhood have assured the Board that they will give him whatever oversight he will need in obtaining a fresh start and keep him under observation, and generally take an interest in his welfare.

Our investigation into this case leads us to the conclusion that no further good will follow the keeping of this man in the Penitentiary. We think better results will be reached by placing him among his friends where he will be aided in gaining a normal condition. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, D. O. Downing.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 51, March Term, 1914, Frederick Tactcel, was, March 5, 1914, on trial returned as guilty on an indictment charging (1) assault and battery; (2) aggravated assault and battery; (3) assault and battery to ravish; and (4) rape. On April 3, 1914, defendant was sentenced to pay the costs and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from five years to seven years. On the same day, to No. 53, March Term, 1914, Tactcel, with Eleanor Barrett, was convicted on the charge of conspiracy, both charges growing out of the same alleged state of affairs. The sentence in the first named case appears to have been made to cover both convictions of applicant.

On June 3, 1916, an application for Tactcel's pardon was duly filed, which, upon hearing, June 21, 1916, was refused. In the following March a petition for rehearing was filed, which was denied. In the following September a second petition for rehearing was filed, which was also denied. At our recent November meeting a third petition for rehearing was presented, and allowed, and this brought the matter before us at our meeting today for final disposition. Upon a full consideration of all the details explained to us we think that the application is now ready for our favorable action, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Frederick Tactcel.

Tactcel is a German, forty years old, and an electrician by occupation. At the time of his arrest he had been in this country only about four years. He was unable to speak or understand the English language with any degree of accuracy. He and Eleanor Barrett, the co-defendant in the conspiracy case, were acquaintances of some months standing, keeping company with each other with a view of matrimony. Miss Barrett was employer as a waitress in a restaurant in the City of Philadelphia, in the neighborhood of the Cramps shipyard, where applicant was employed. The prosecutrix, a girl by the name of Murry, was accustomed to visit the restaurant, and thus became slightly acquainted with the Barrett girl. On a certain evening in the early part of the year 1914 these two girls happened to meet on the street and were walking together on their way home. The Barrett girl says that the Murry girl forced her company upon her, as her acquaintance with her did not warrant their being together. They met Tactcel, who did not know the Murry girl previous to that time. The three walked together for a short distance when the Murry girl suggested that they go to Tactcel's lodging place and have some refreshment in the way of beer and oysters. They did this. At the house they met another lodger, with whom the Murry girl soon struck up an intimate acquaintance. Tactcel then took Miss Barrett home, leaving Miss Murry at the house in company with this other man. When he returned she was still there, and according to Tactcel's statement was in the room of this other man. It is claimed by the Murry girl that after drinking several glasses of beer she became unconscious and upon reviving found herself naked in bed with Tactcel. This second man soon disappeared from the scene and it seems nothing has been heard of him since. On the Murry girl's solicitation, it being then very late, Tactcel took her to the house of one, Annie Conway, where he left her. She remained there until the evening of the next day fearing to go home. Several days later an information was laid against Tactcel charging him with the assault complained of and Miss Barrett with being an accessory before the fact. On the trial Miss Barrett was under the rules of evidence precluded from testifying in Tactcel's behalf, and Tactcel was not able to explain in a satisfactory manner the details of the affair by reason of not knowing the use of English words. No interpreter was called. The result was that both he and Miss Barrett were convicted. The latter has served her time. Tactcel has been in the penitentiary for more than three years and eight months. His conviction was had on the uncorroborated testimony of the prosecutrix. When arrested he was working for the Cramp Ship and Engine Building Company which Company is now ready and anxious to reinstate him in their employ. The authorities at the Penitentiary have interested themselves in his behalf and it was on their suggestion that this third petition for rehearing was allowed.

Under all the conditions shown to exist we think that the defendant has answered the demands of the law, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be now granted the applicant, Frederick Tactcel.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Indiana, to No. 67, March Term, 1916, Joe Rupe was arraigned on an indictment containing five counts, viz.: (1) assault with intent to kill and murder; (2) assault with intent to maim, disfigure and disable; (3) wantonly discharging fire arms; (4) aggravated assault and battery; (5) carrying concealed weapons; and upon trial, September 13, 1916, was returned as guilty on all five counts. On November 13, 1916, sentence was suspended on the first, second and third counts. On the fourth count defendant was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for one year; and on the fifth count to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for one year, such imprisonment to begin after the expiration of the term imposed on the fourth count, thus aggregating a fine of $600 and imprisonment of two years.

On December 5, 1917, an application was duly filed for his pardon. The case came before us for hearing at our meeting today in due course. We heard the statements of counsel, and have examined the Record, and, on full consideration of the matters involved, have decided that the application merits favorable action. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joe Rupe.

Rupe, whose real name is given as Ropea, was at the time of his arrest twenty-three years old. He is an unnaturalized Italian, a coal miner by occupation. He worked in the coal mines in Indiana County. He was married in the interval between his arrest and sentence. This application is made by his wife.

The material facts are stated to be: On the night of April 15, 1916, Loui Oricci was shot by an upward glancing shot on the back while outside his house in the village of Ernest, Indiana County. Rupe was arrested a few days afterwards on the information of another foreigner, an outsider to the transaction. He admitted the fact of the shooting, but explained that it was altogether accidental. All parties concerned had been drinking. Rupe and Oricci were good friends, and no semblance of a quarrel was shown. The admitted fact seems to be that the defendant in a spirit of jollification took his automatic pistol out of his pocket and in putting it back, the butt downward and the muzzle upward, it accidentally went off, the ball grazing Oricci's back and making a superficial wound. The medical testimony was that the wound was caused by an upwardly passing ball. It is averred that it was customary to carry an automatic pistol in the pocket with the butt down and the muzzle up. An examination of the Record before us satisfies us that there was an absence of felonious intent in the discharge of this weapon. The Trial Judge writes us about the case, saying among other things:

"The jury found the defendant guilty as indicted, but inasmuch as the counts of the indictment were inconsistent, in passing sentence I did so only on the fourth and fifth counts. There is no question as to the defendant's guilt on the last count, that of carrying concealed weapons, but for this offense he has already served more than the maximum, having been confined for a period of better than thirteen months. The defendant has a young wife who has conducted herself along very proper lines in the face of many difficulties on account of the situation in which she was placed, and deserves a great deal of credit for her continued faithfulness to her husband when the odds have all been against her. She has been living with her parents, but on account of their age and a large family their ability to longer support her is about at an end.

In general, I may say that viewing the matter from all sides it seems to me that the ends of justice have been met, and the purpose of the sentence, that of punishment to the defendant and a deterrent to himself and others has been effected. I can see no good purpose of longer confining Roppa or Rupe, and considering the facts that he has a little more than six months to serve after deducting the time off for good behavior, that the services of men following his vocation are much needed, and the further fact that his young wife requires his support, care and protection, it seems to me there is sufficient good reason why he should be liberated."

The District Attorney writes: "As prosecuting officer knowing all the details of the case I am of the opinion that the ends of justice will have been met if the Board of Pardons taking into consideration the reasons given for this pardon see their way clear to act favorably on the application."

Other letters assure us that if released the defendant can secure immediate employment at his calling; so that as the situation presents itself it seems to be the proper thing to allow this application. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Joe Rupe.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Dauphin to Nos. 246 to 255, inclusive, (ten indictments), George A. Redsecker, September 20, 1915, entered pleas of guilty to ten separate charges of forgery, and thereupon was sentenced in each case to pay a fine of $5, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from three years to six years, the sentences running concurrent.

On December 5, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, the matter coming before us for determination at our meeting today. Having considered the case in its various aspects we are ready to express our approval of the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George A. Redsecker.

The applicant was born and raised in Lancaster County. His age is not given in the application. His occupation is stated to have been that of railroad construction, but at the time of committing the forgeries complained of he was out of work. He is married, but had been living separate and apart from his wife. His operation was practically the same in each of the ten cases for which he was indicted. He forged the name of his father to notes of various amounts and also to stock certificates which he offered as collateral security. These operations started in March, 1915, and continued up until sometime during the summer of that year. He was apprehended about the middle of September, 1915, and was sentenced September 20th. The ground on which the application for Executive Clemency is asked is that the ends of justice have been met by the term of imprisonment which the applicant has already served.

From the fact that no objection of any character has been urged against this application, and the further fact that the defendant has served more than two years and three months of his minimum term of three years, we are willing to endorse the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George A. Redsecker.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 3, July Term, 1915, William Howard Watmuff, was, September 28, 1915, convicted on an indictment charging (1) assault and battery; (2) aggravated assault and battery; (3) assault and battery to ravish; and (4) rape; and on the same day was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than ten years and not more than fifteen years.

On December 3, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. We heard the case at our meeting today. After an examination of the facts in the case as shown on the Record and developed on the hearing we are of the opinion that the application should be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, William Howard Watmuff.

Watmuff is thirty years of age, an Englishman by nativity, not naturalized, and a weaver by trade. He is married, and his wife and child live in England. He was employed at his trade in a mill in Philadelphia. The prosecutrix in this case lived or boarded at the same house with applicant. The allegation of the Commonwealth is that the assault complained of took place at this house on a certain day and under certain conditions. There was very little corroborative testimony to the story of the prosecutrix. The defendant denies the story of the prosecutrix. From all we can gather with regard to the case it is our belief that if any unlawful act was committed by the defendant in his relations with the prosecutrix it did not rise higher than an act of fornication. The applicant has been in the Penitentiary considerably more than two years. He was arrested just as he was about to sail for his home in England. It is his intention, if released, to take immediate passage for England and ultimately to enlist in the army. The British Consulate at Philadelphia is interested in the matter, and we are assured that prompt transportation will be arranged through that source. We do not deem it necessary to comment further on the facts of the case. It is apparent to us that under all the circumstances the demands of justice have been satisfied in the twenty-eight months incarceration, and that no public interests will suffer from the release of this man, having due regard to all the conditions named. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant William Howard Watmuff.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Chester, August Term, 1910, Warren C. Smith, August 29, 1910, entered plea of guilty on an indictment charging the stealing of a horse, saddle, and bridle, and on that day was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than two years and six months and not more than ten years. In February, 1913, he was released on parole, having served his minimum term. Subsequently, in November, 1914, before the limit of his maximum term, while in the State of Maryland he was arrested and convicted on the charge of selling chickens that had been stolen. He was sentenced to three years imprisonment on this charge. At the expiration of two years and six months he was released. He was at once returned to this State, the conviction in Maryland automatically working a forfeiture of his parole. He was re-committed to the Penitentiary to serve out the balance of his ten years maximum term.

On November 7, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which was heard, and considered at our meeting today. In view of the explanations given us we are of the opinion that the application should be allowed, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Warren C. Smith.

Smith is now nearly forty years old. He worked about six years in the Navy Yard at Norfolk, Va., then served an enlistment in the United States Army, and then worked at a manufacturing plant, and on railroads in various sections of the country up until the time of his arrest in 1910. The offense charged against him on the Chester County trial was the taking, or "borrowing" of a horse and riding from Parkesburg, a dry town, to Thorndale, where liquor could be obtained. It was to satisfy his craving for drink that moved him to appropriate his neighbors property on this occasion. He made no effort to sell or dispose of the horse. The owner recovered his property without much trouble and he now joins in this application for the pardon of Smith who, it seems except for this slip and his desire for drink, is rather well thought of in the neighborhood. The Bromwell Brush and Wire Goods Company, where he had previously worked, offers him a position where the wages at the start will be eighteen dollars a week, with prospect of rapid advancement.

In the absence of felonious intent, and inasmuch as the prisoner has been in confinement one place or another most of the time during the past seven years, and with the chance of getting immediate employment if released, we think it would be well to encourage his desire for relief from imprisonment, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Warren C. Smith.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 62, December Term, 1916, George W. Miller, on December 11, 1916, entered a plea of guilty on the charge of larceny, and on December 22, 1916, was sentenced to pay the costs and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of not less than thirty months and not more than three years.

On October 5, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed. The case was heard at our November meeting, and then held under advisement. Having given the matter fair consideration, and having caused certain investigation to be made in reference to allegations advanced on the part of the Commonwealth as to the criminal record of the applicant, we now are of the opinion that the application should be allowed, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George Miller.

Miller is twenty-six years old. His occupation is not stated in the application. At the time of entering the plea he was married, but his wife has since obtained a divorce from him. The charge against him was the stealing of an automobile on the streets of Philadelphia. It was at first thought that he was a confirmed automobile thief. But subsequent investigation showed that, although he had done considerable in this line, his record was not quite as bad as first represented. This application for release is made by the brother of the defendant. The prosecutor in the case writes to the Board requesting that the leniency prayed for may be granted. The brother, who apparently is a man of responsibility, agrees to aid the defendant to rehabilitate himself and obtain honest employment for him and keep a watchful eye over him so that he will continue to be a lawabiding citizen.

The prisoner has been in the Penitentiary more than thirteen months and it is urged he has been sufficiently punished. In view of the present attitude of the District Attorney's Office in withdrawing their strenuous opposition to the application, and relying on the undertaking of Mr. Harry N. Miller, who signs this application, to look after his brother, the prisoner. We think it the part of wisdom to give this young man the chance to lead a proper life.

We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George Miller.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 293, March Term, 1915, John Hamman, was convicted on an indictment charging entering to steal, and on March 15, 1915, was sentenced to pay the costs and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than six years and not more than seven years.

On December 6, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, and the case was given attention at our meeting today. Upon review of the facts placed before us we have reached the conclusion that the application is worthy of endorsement, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John Hamman.

Hamman is now twenty-one years old. He had no trade at the time of his arrest, living at home with his parents, where it is stated his treatment had been harsh. He had previously been committed to the Huntingdon Reformatory for stealing a bicycle. From statements in the application it seems that he, with other boys, was lead by an older man to go to the store of the prosecutor, and, after talking to the proprietor for some time, the older man on the flourish of a revolver demanded the proprietor's money. The whole party then ran away. Applicant was caught and identified. He has been in prison for well on to three years. His case was presented to us by one of the lady visitors to the Penitentiary who has become interested in his behalf. He has learned a useful trade while in prison, and there is promise of immediate work if he is released. Also we have the assurance of his sponsor and of the Parole Officer of the Penitentiary that proper oversight will be given him. On the whole it seems to us that it would be better for the boy to release him now under the conditions named than to compel him to remain in prison for more than three years longer, and we do not see that the interests of society in general will be adversely affected if he is released. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, John Hamman.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of York, to No. 44, January Term, 1915, Joseph Catalano, Joseph Campanello, alias Lewis Dumb, Dominick Campanello, and Salvatore Di Stefano, were jointly charged in an indictment laying eighteen counts for offenses covering: the placing and throwing of explosives, felonious assault, conspiracy, writing threatening letters, etc.; and upon trial, January 12, 1915, were returned as guilty. On January 18, 1915, they were sentenced each to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of varying terms, viz. Joseph Catalano five years to ten years; Joseph Campanello six years to ten years; Dominick Campanello four years to ten years, and Salvatore Di Stefano four years to seven years.

On March 6, 1917, an application for their pardon was duly filed. On hearing March 21, 1917, pardon was refused. At our recent December meeting their petition for re-hearing of their application was allowed. The case was heard at our meeting today, when new light was thrown on the merits of the application. On consideration of all that has been made to appear to us we are now inclined to favor the application for pardon, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the said defendants, Joseph Catalano, Joseph Campanello, Dominick Campanello and Salvatore Di Stefano.

These applicants are all Italians; no one of them is a naturalized citizen of the United States. They have been living in York for from fifteen months to two years. All are laborers who were employed in certain manufacturing establishments in the city of York. Di Stefano is married, and has a family in Italy. The others are unmarried men. Catalano is about twenty-four years old. Joseph Campanello is twenty-three years old. Dominick Campanello is twenty years old. Di Stefano is forty-three years old.

The criminal act of throwing explosives, etc., occurred in the city of York at four o'clock on the morning of November 23, 1914. No person was injured by the explosion, worth speaking about, and the building against which the explosive was directed was but slightly damaged. On the trial of the case the issue was largely as to the identity of the defendants. The evidence was for the most part circumstantial. The Commonwealth's testimony, however, satisfied the jury, although public opinion was divided. An investigation by the prosecutor and by the owner of the building, started soon after the trial and continued until recently, has satisfied these men that the conviction of the defendants was a miscarriage of justice, and it is on the strength of disclosures brought about by this investigation, in connection with other circumstances detailed to us at length, that a change has been effected in the minds of the Trial Judge and the District Attorney, as well as in the minds of many others. Judge Warner, in his letter to us on the subject says:

"I am informed that material evidence not presented at the trial will be offered to the Board of Pardons to show that the defendants, or some of them, were really not guilty of the offenses for which they were convicted, and that the prosecutor himself after the trial reached that conclusion. I have not examined into these matters personally so as to be able to judge of their weight and materiality, but if they are of the nature indicated to me it would seem proper that they should be heard and acted upon by the Board of Pardons."

The District Attorney writes us as follows:

"I was District Attorney of York County, Pa., and tried these cases on the part of the Commonwealth, and at the time was thoroughly convinced that the evidence justified the verdict, however, since that time the prosecutor himself made some further investigation and expressed a belief in the innocence of the defendants.

The owner of the house in which the prosecutor resided has also expressed a belief in the innocence of these defendants from an investigation that he also made.

These investigations by these private parties revealed new facts concerning the cases and might have resulted in a different verdict, had those facts been properly presented at the trial, and under the circumstances I believe it to be the duty of your Honorable Board to give full and serious consideration to the case as now presented before you.

I personally feel that in view of this after discovered testimony, that the defendants have served a sufficient punishment and would be satisfied for your Board to act favorably upon their application for pardon.

Concerning the one defendant, Salvatore Di Stefano, I may state that the evidence against this particular defendant was quite different in substance from that against the other defendants and I was not convinced at the trial of this man's guilt to the extent that I was of the guilt of the other defendants and I have many times thought that there was a possibility of a miscarriage in his case, and I am more convinced now that there was a miscarriage of justice as to this particular defendant, and if this new evidence were to be submitted to the jury, I believe that the jury would probably find a reasonable doubt as to the guilt of all of the defendants."

The new matters referred to were explained to us, and we have given the subject careful consideration. Allowing what we think is proper weight to all that was shown us in relation to the case, and remembering that the defendants have been in the Penitentiary for three years as the result of a finding that may have been an error, we believe the interests of justice will not be adversely affected by extending the clemency asked. We therefor recommend that a pardon be granted the defendants, Joseph Catalano, Joseph Campanello, Dominick Campanello and Salvatore Di Stefano.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Adams, to No. 24, August Term, 1909, Archie Clay, August 20, 1909, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging him with the crime of breaking and entering in the night time with intent to commit larceny; and on August 21, 1909, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from one year to ten years. Upon the completion of the minimum term of this sentence he was paroled, but subsequently, to wit, in April 1912, he was again arrested on the charge of larceny. He pleaded guilty to this charge in the same court and was then sentenced thereon to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from five years to fifteen years. This second conviction automatically revived the sentence imposed in 1909, so that the defendant is now serving out the balance of the ten-year term then imposed.

On January 2, 1918, an application for his pardon on the first conviction, that of 1909, was duly filed. The matter was explained to us at our meeting today. Upon the consideration of the condition now prevailing we deem it proper to favor the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the said applicant, Archie Clay, in the case No. 24, August Term, 1909, Quarter Sessions of Adams County.

Clay, whose name appears to be Arthur A. Clay, is a colored man now about thirty years old. He is not married; he seems to have had no regular trade or occupation. He has spent considerable time in the United States Army, and holds an honorable discharge from the service. The motive underlying this application for pardon is that if the burden of the original ten-year sentence is lifted the prisoner will thus become eligible for parole on the second conviction upon serving the minimum term. He has been in the Penitentiary for more than five years. His father, we are advised, is a very reputable citizen of Gettysburg. He appeared before the Board and promised to use his best endeavors to keep his son out of harm's way in the event of his release on parole in due course. The matter of parole will be in the discretion of the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penitentiary upon proper consideration of all the facts shown by the record.

The prosecuting District Attorney, and the Trial Judge, both endorsed the application on the ground that the pardon will be for the best interest of justice. On the strength of this endorsement we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Archie Clay, for the crime of which he was convicted at No. 24, August Term, 1909, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Adams County.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Armstrong, to indictment No. 1, September Term, 1915, laying the crime of arson, Roy Kirkwood, August 2, 1915, caused to be entered a plea of guilty, and thereupon on that day was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from five years to eight years. At the same time similar plea was entered on three other indictments laying the same charge, on which sentence was suspended, the sentence in No. 1, apparently being intended to cover all the cases.

On September 5, 1916, an application for the pardon of the defendant was duly filed. On hearing in regular course this application was refused. At our recent November meeting a petition for rehearing was allowed. By reason of this action of the Board the case was heard again at our meeting today. In view of our present information, supported by the record, we are of the belief that the application deserves our favorable action. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Roy Kirkwood.

Kirkwood is about thirty years old. He has been a resident of the Borough of Kittanning practically all his life. He is married, and his wife and four or five children are living. His regular occupation is that of a butcher. Previous to his arrest on the charges mentioned his reputation was of the best. Although pleas of guilty were entered, brought on possibly by the pressure of zealous officials, there now appears to be considerable doubt as to Kirkwood's actual guilt. At all events it is the universal sentiment of the community that he has been sufficiently punished for whatever connection he may have had with the commission of the offenses charged. A large number of letters from responsible persons who have known the defendant for many years, including about all the County Officials, among others the District Attorney and the Trial Judge, attest to his previous good reputation and ask that leniency be shown by reason of the two-and-one-half years imprisonment. Judge King, who imposed the sentence, writes us:

"I have no objections to a pardon being granted in this case. From what I have heard the applicant has profited by the punishment inflicted by the law and seems disposed to lead a better life.

Our people in Kittanning Borough seem to desire his pardon, and in view of all the circumstances I do not think justice would be outraged by his pardon at this time. His wife and four small children are in dire need of his support and care, and his aged mother suffers with them owing to his confinement.

I would suggest favorable consideration of his application."

The District Attorney writes in a similar strain, saying, among other things, the following:

"Prior to the commission of the offenses to which Roy Kirkwood entered his plea of guilty, and upon which he was sentenced and is now serving a term in prison, I had known him as a reputable man in this community, and his acknowledgement that he was a criminal was a very distinct surprise to the whole community.

He has now been imprisoned for a year or more. He is a man of family, whose need for his support is pressing.

The petitions for his pardon, so numerous signed by the representative citizens of this community, where his offenses were committed have been submitted to me for examination. In view of the fact that this sentiment in favor of a pardon of Kirkwood seems to be so universal among the substantial citizens of the community, as evidenced by their signatures to the petitions, I feel justified in saying to the Board that a pardon in this case might be for the best, and in joining with them in the request therefor."

With this record before us we feel warranted in sustaining the application for clemency at this time, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Roy Kirkwood.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 191, November Term, 1916, Dominick Regina, November 21, 1916, to an indictment charging in the first count murder, and in the second count manslaughter, entered a plea of guilty on second count—manslaughter, and thereupon, November 22, 1916, was sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from eight years to twelve years.

On December 4, 1917, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which was heard at our December meeting in regular course. The matter was then held under advisement. We have given full consideration to the case, and now, in the light of all the information secured, we think the application has been properly made, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Dominick Regina.

Regina is forty-two years old, an Italian by birth, but a naturalized citizen of the United States. He is a miner. He is married, and his wife and one child are living. The record shows that he was without doubt a quiet, sober, industrious, inoffensive citizen, enjoying the respect of his employers and of his neighbors to the highest extent. He lived in the borough of Pringle. On his return from his work on the afternoon of September 28, 1916, he was told by his wife that Tony Maze, who lived in the other side of the double house, had threatened her with violence, saying he would kill her and the whole family. This threat grew out of some difficulty that had taken place between the children of the two families. Maze had been drinking. He was known to be of a violent temper, and his reputation for peace and quietness was not good. Regina and his wife for the purpose of avoiding trouble went away for the evening. After their return home about nine o'clock they heard through the partition Maze swearing and threatening to kill the applicant and his family. He actually did come to the door and pushed at it. Applicant told him to go away. In the course of a few moments Regina heard some one trying to open the door. Under the impression that it was Maze he went to another part of the house and took up his gun. On finding someone was about to open the door he fired. The man at the door proved to be his brother-in-law, Louis Polodi, who was boarding with him. The shot took effect in Polodi's neck, from the result of which he died.

The formal reasons advanced for clemency are:

Under all the testimony in this case your petitioner, if guilty of any crime, was not guilty of anything more than involuntary manslaughter.

A wrong theory of the case at the trial seems to have pervaded the mind of the court and the district attorney, as well as of counsel for your petitioner.

The sentence was extremely severe under all the circumstances, even assuming that your petitioner was guilty of voluntary manslaughter.

Your petitioner, taking into consideration all of the circumstances and testimony in the case, has been sufficiently punished.

Your petitioner's wife and infant child are in need of care and maintenance, which will be provided by your petitioner, if the prayer of his petition is granted.

In our judgment these reasons have been sustained.

In addition to the many letters on file from the neighbors and friends of Regina asking our favorable action the trial judge, in response of our request for information, writes us, stating among other things, as follows:

I desire to say that the pleas of manslaughter entered by his counsel, in view of the facts involved, seemed anomalous. My first thought was that the act was so reckless that there might be some element of murder in it, and that his counsel, fearing this, obtained a concession from the district attorney, in order to avoid the chance of more serious consequences to his client. It was with this thought in view, that we sentenced him to what, in the light of subsequent events, may seem a hard punishment.

The history of the case you have before you, and therefore we will not relate it here; but it is proper to say, that instead of this being an offense committed through a sudden impulse, in the heat of passion, as the plea would indicate, the worst that could be said of it was, that in fear and terror of his neighbor, who had made threats against him and his family, during the afternoon, of which he was informed on returning home from work, by his wife, and he, himself, having heard the drunken mutterings from the other side of the partition, which divided their homes, when his brother-in-law tried to enter the house, he reached the mistaken conclusion that his enemy was seeking admission, to do him serious injury, and fired the fatal shot too hastily.

It is my opinion, that if he had fought the case to a conclusion from the now well-known and established facts, with his previous good character to support him, he would have stood, before the jury, an excellent chance of acquittal.

In cases generally, after having sentenced a man, we very much dislike to interfere, by making a practice of sending letters to the Board of Pardons, recommending clemency, where we seem to have failed ourselves.

It might, with reason, be considered as a shifting of the burden; but, notwithstanding this, I am satisfied that there are few cases which have come under my notice, in view of this man's previous record, and all we are able to discover of him, where clemency, with more propriety, could better serve public policy and private rights.

The trial district attorney likewise writes us:

"I was the assistant district attorney who represented the Commonwealth in the trial of the case against Dominick Regina. I have read the application of Dominick Regina for a pardon, and believe that the facts set forth therein are substantially correct. I further believe that the ends of justice would be met by the granting of clemency unto the said Dominick Regina.

These views of the court and of the prosecuting office, in our judgment, fully warrant our findings, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Dominick Regina."

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, January 22, 1918.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Cambria, to No. 4, December Term, 1911, Louis Wagner, March 14, 1912, pleaded guilty on the second count of an indictment charging in the first count murder and in the second count manslaughter, a nol pros. having been entered on the first count. On June 7, 1912, he was thereupon sentenced to pay a fine of $50, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than six years and not more than twelve years.

On November 29, 1914, an application for his pardon was duly filed. On the hearing of that application pardon was refused, December 22, 1914. At the recent December meeting of the board defendant's petition for rehearing was allowed, which brought the matter before the board for determination at its meeting of this month. Upon hearing the details of the case at that time the application for pardon appealed rather favorably to the board on its general merits, but in view of certain features thereof the board felt that there should be some assurance furnished which could be made a matter of record that in the event of the allowance of the application some responsible person or persons would exercise an oversight over the man in the nature of a parole officer. Accordingly the case was held under advisement pending the receipt of such an assurance. We have now received for filing a written statement signed by Mr. Frank P. Barnhart, who represented the applicant before the board as counsel, and Mr. Daniel J. Shields, who was instrumental in the bringing of this application, that they will "Immediately upon the granting of a pardon to the above-named Louis Wagner assume the supervision over the said Louis Wagner to the end that he will properly support his family and properly conduct himself." Under these conditions and for the reasons hereinafter set forth we now recommend that a pardon be granted the said applicant, Louis Wagner.

Wagner is now nearly forty-nine years old. He is married, and his wife and five children are living. He was a mill worker and at the time of his arrest was foreman at the billet mill of the Cambria Steel Company at Johnstown—a good position. The homicide took place under peculiar circumstances. During the political campaign of 1911 the applicant was more or less active. Attendant upon this activity, and possibly growing out of it, he took to drinking to excess. Consequently he neglected his work, and his employers were obliged to discharge him. This resulted in his drinking to greater excess, so that on the 17th day of November, 1911, he was in a demented state of intoxication. On the afternoon of that day he was in a barroom while in a condition of drunken stupor. Standing close to him was a life-long friend with whom it is said he had never had a difference or a quarrel, a man by the name of Sheely. Wagner said to Sheely: "Stand over there while I shoot you. What would you do if I shot you?" Sheely replied, "If I thought you were going to shoot me I would get out of your way." At this Wagner drew a pistol and snapped it, but it did not go off. It was not at that time pointed in the direction of Sheely. He pulled the trigger again, and this time the pistol discharged, the bullet hitting Sheely in the body, from the effect of which shot he died.

There was no quarrel or dispute between the two men. The conversation detailed was in a low tone of voice, and was barely heard by those standing nearby, and was not considered by them at all as in earnest. The shooting was a freak which cannot be explained.

The reasons for clemency given in the petition are, in substance, that at the time of the commission of the offense the defendant was so helplessly drunk that he did not know what he was doing, and that the offense is due more to his misfortune than to his fault; that his previous record had been clean, and that he had always worked steadily and provided excellently for his family; that he has served almost the minimum term; that his wife and five children are in destitute circumstances, the wife having worked to keep the family until her health broke down, and she and her children are now the objects of charity; that several weeks ago the aged mother of the applicant died, and the prison authorities permitted the applicant to attend the funeral, at which time his demeanor so favorably impressed his friends and former neighbors that these present proceedings were started with the object of securing his release in order that he could give his wife and family the care and attention they need; that the sense of the community and of influential members thereof is that the pardon should be granted for the reason that full punishment has already been meted out.

From the many letters on file advocating the granting of this pardon we quote those of Judge Marlin B. Stephens, who accepted the plea and passed the sentence; of Judge Francis J. O'Conner, associate law judge of the county, and of Charles C. Greer, the presiding district attorney.

Judge Stephens writes as follows:

"In the matter of the application for the pardon of Louis Wagner, now confined in the State Penitentiary, having been convicted and sentenced for homicide, I desire to state that whatever the board in its wisdom sees fit to do in this matter will be entirely satisfactory to us, especially in view of the fact that Louis Wagner has a wife and five or six children dependent upon him for their support, and that we are informed that since his incarceration in the penitentiary he has been an exemplary prisoner and, on inquiry, we are satisfied that prior to the circumstances that lead to his incarceration he had been a peaceable and law-abiding citizen."

Judge O'Conner writes:

"I have been solicited to communicate what I know concerning the case of one, Louis Wagner, now confined under sentence in the penitentiary at Rockville, Center County, Pennsylvania, by reason of a plea entered before the president judge of our court, who directed that he serve a term of not less than six nor more than twelve years for the killing of one Shilling (Sheely) in a barroom in the City of Johnstown. I believe that he has never been accused of any illegal acts prior to the time of the killing for which he entered the plea, and that up until a short time since his children and wife were at least partially maintained by his father-in-law, who is now an invalid and unable to longer contribute to their support. They are now, I believe, the subject of charity, and those actively engaged to procure his pardon are prompted solely by charitable consideration. They are convinced that nothing but good would come of favorable action in his behalf, and I feel convinced (speaking as a citizen and individual) that from all we can gather this belief is well warranted. The eye-witnesses to the killing are all now dead, and there is no opposition on part of the Commonwealth, as I understand, or anyone connected by blood or marriage with the deceased, who can be found to oppose the prisoner's application. I believe, if your board sees fit to grant this pardon under the circumstances, that your act in this behalf will be commended by all those residing here who have knowledge of the situation."

District Attorney Greer says:

"I remember this case, as when a plea of guilty was entered by defendant I was district attorney for Cambria County. I recall that no motive could be found for the unexplainable act of Wagner, who evidently at the time was suffering from a mild form of dementia, due to excessive drink. When I say dementia, I do not mean legal dementia, but such a state of mind as left him morally irresponsible. He has a wife and five children in destitute circumstances, the oldest child being twelve years of age. Those who knew him say that he supported his family, and it is more with regard to the necessity of having some support for them than anything else that I join in the request of both of the judges, that you look with favor upon the application for his pardon."

The following is a copy of the letter of Messrs Barnhart and Shields:

"Complying with the instructions given at the meeting of the Board of Pardons, held Wednesday, January 16, 1918, the undersigned hereby agree that immediately upon the granting of a pardon to the above-named Louis Wagner, they will assume the supervision over the said Louis Wagner to the end that he will properly support his family and properly conduct himself."

This, as we understand it, complies with the wishes of the board. In case there is anything further for us to do kindly advise us.

Very truly yours,

FRANK P. BARNHART,
DANIEL J. SHIELDS."

In view of the above letters and of the undertaking of Messrs. Barnhart and Shields, and believing that the ends of justice have been accomplished by the nearly six years' imprisonment, we think it well to pass favorable upon this application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the said applicant, Louis Wagner.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail delivery in and for the County of Clearfield, to No. 50,

May Term, 1916, Michael Dennery was convicted upon an indictment for murder, the verdict of the jury being "Murder in the first degree," and he was thereupon, to wit, May 11, 1916, sentenced to be electrocuted.

Michael Dennery, the applicant in this case, appears to have been of a roving disposition. He had been engaged in various capacities as a common laborer, but as a rule followed the calling of a seaman. In winter he was not regularly employed, and roved considerably.

After much traveling about Clearfield County, he came upon a rendezvous for tramps where they took their meals, and in inclement weather slept in kilns at the brick yard. Among the tramps who gathered at the camp were James McAllister, James Allen, John Rowles and others, and Dennery occasionally fraternized with them.

Thomas Shade lived in a two-roomed shanty on Bigler avenue, Clearfield borough. He was a laborer at the Harbison-Walker Brick Works, where Rowles also worked. Rowles and Dennery, prior to January 25th, had been at the Shade shanty together. Shade was a man who went upon occasional protracted sprees.

The entire story of the case taken from the testimony is too comprehensive, but is epitomised in the communication of Judge Bell, who tried the case, which is here given in full:

"At the request of counsel for the petitioner, I beg to say in my opinion this verdict was not only a correct verdict, but the only one logical under the evidence, but in disposing of this application certain other circumstances are properly to be taken under consideration.

"It seemed to the court at the time of trial that while this man, according to the evidence, which was believed by the jury and by the judge, fired the shot which took the life of Rowles, he was probably not the originator of the scheme of burglary and the court did not believe that he either has been of the same evil record as his associates or was an equally dangerous character. The extract from the opinion of the court in refusing a new trial, which is set out in the petition, fairly presents what was then and now is the opinion of the court on this subject. While there was serious evidence in the case which reflected upon the defendant apart from the killing itself, I felt that the petitioner had been drinking to a marked extent and was in the condition when he could readily be influenced to join in this scheme by a man of the adroitness of McAllister. It was easy to see why McAllister and Agnew would desire this robbery, not so easy to understand why Dennery should desire to participate therein, as he had made associates in Clearfield and seemed to be able to get what he wished to drink without a great deal of trouble and with no risk. Nothing in the case indicated to the court that Dennery anticipated the presence of Rowles at the shanty, and to some extent the shooting was probably upon impulse; but this significant fact was present, the other two men acted with the manner of men who have serious business on hand, they spoke little and to the point, evidently ready to kill if opposition existed; they wasted no time in unnecessary words. Dennery, on the contrary, was swaggering and noisy and his whole demeanor left the impression on my mind that he was 'showing off,' demonstrating to his companions that he was just as brave and dangerous a man as they were, and the promptness with which the two experienced robbers separated from him following the shooting indicated that he had served his purpose and they had no further desire for his company.

"A study of the killing, as disclosed upon the three trials, persuaded the mind of the court that in all the acts, except the actual shooting, Dennery was acting under the direction and control of a stronger mentality, and in view of this fact, of the extent to which he was affected by liquor and all the circumstances in the case, I am of the opinion that the interests of justice would in no wise be injuriously affected by a commutation of the death sentence. In so far as the authority of the court is involved the verdict and sentence thereupon is logical and proper, but upon the consideration of an application for commutation there are various circumstances which may well be considered by your honorable body."

Further testimony as to the consensus of opinion by prominent citizens of the community in which the crime was committed is contained in the following letter from one of the leading citizens of Clearfield:

"The Board of Pardons,
Commonwealth of Pennsylvania,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Gentlemen: I was present at the trials of James McAllister, alias Wilson, James Allen, alias Agnew and Mike Dennery, for the murder of Rowles and gave close attention to the evidence.

The alleged murder, as I recall the evidence, was claimed to have been committed in the perpetration of or attempt to perpetrate robbery by all three of these defendants, and all of them who are guilty are, under our laws, guilty of the same degree of crime.

McAllister and Allen were first tried and were convicted of a less degree of crime than was Dennery who was afterwards tried.

It seems to me that, since two of the defendants have been convicted of a degree of crime less than murder of the first degree, a commutation of the sentence of their co-defendant, Dennery, to imprisonment for life would satisfy every requirement of the law and be a humane disposition of the case. I am,

Very respectfully,

J. FRANK SNYDER."

We quote from a letter written by Mr. John F. Short, editor of the "Clearfield Republican," who is in a position to know the sentiments and feelings of the residents of the community as much or better than any other man, because of his wide acquaintance and intimate business relations with the people of the County of Clearfield:

"Having heard all the evidence presented in the trial of this case, also the evidence presented in the cases of Commonwealth versus Allen and Wilson, the charge of the honorable court in each case, I feel it a duty to conscience to appeal to you to commute the sentence of Michael Dennery.

"I heard Dennery's testimony, as did hundreds of other citizens of the community. The practically unanimous opinion of the people in the courtroom was that he would be acquitted.

"The jury in the Dennery case was made up of men from the rural communities. They are prejudiced to the leement known as 'tramps.' One juror was heard to remark that tramps should be severely dealt with whenever brought into court.

"I sincerely believe, knowing the sentiment of the people of this county, I believe as well as any other man in the county, that the ends of justice will be best served by a commutation of the sentence to imprisonment for life.

"Knowing Thomas Shade, his habits, his capacity, his mental calibre, and all that pertains to his credibility that day, I feel it would be little short of judicial murder to send a man to the chair on his testimony. I say this as a friend of Thomas Shade.

"I have lived in this county all my life; know the people generally. I can say from actual contact that at least 99 per cent. of the community hereabouts will be perfectly satisfied with a commutation of sentence. Fact is, the verdict of first degree was a complete surprise, a shock and very few people feel the evidence warranted such verdict."

After a most lengthy and patient hearing of the case, and after a careful consideration of all the facts and circumstances, it now appears to the board that the real ring-leaders in the crime escaped with a verdict of second degree murder. It would be an extreme act of injustice to have this applicant suffer the penalty of death with no positive evidence except that of a drunken witness, and we, therefore, respectfully recommend that your excellency commute the sentence of death passed upon Michael Dennery to that of imprisonment for life.

Respectfully submitted,

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 304, March Term, 1904, John H. Evans plead "guilty" to an indictment charging larceny and entry with intent to steal, and receiving stolen goods. He was sentenced March 16, 1904, to undergo imprisonment in separate or solitary confinement at labor in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of ten (10) years.

He subsequently plead guilty to a charge of entry with intent to steal, and was thereupon sentenced, on September 12, 1913, to imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than four (4) years nor more than five (5) years.

This crime having been committed while on parole for the former sentence, he is now compelled to serve out the time for which he was commuted under the first sentence, and this application for pardon is made for the purpose of relieving the prisoner of serving that part of the sentence which was formerly commuted, and to permit him during the present year to be released on parole where he will be under the supervision of the Board of Prison Inspectors and the parole officers of the penitentiary. By reason of the fact that he had on several previous occasions been convicted of similar crimes he received sentences which were extremely severe, taking into consideration the value of the property stolen. Both of said crimes consisted of entering open cellar windows. The combined sentences aggregate fifteen (15) years, which we consider extreme under the circumstances.

Letters from the chaplain of the penitentiary, and statements made by other officers, lead the board to believe that the said prisoner has reformed, and that the punishment suffered under these two sentences is sufficient to satisfy the ends of justice. He will be under the direct charge and guidance of the Parole Board of the institution, and in view of the fact that he can be returned to prison upon the first violation of any of the rules and regulations of the Parole Board, we are of the opinion that this man should be given another chance, and therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted to the applicant, John H. Evans.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Bradford, to No. 63, February Term, 1916, Dominick Palanesa was convicted of the crime of setting fire to a building, and was by said court, on February 11, 1916, sentenced to pay a fine of five hundred dollars, pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than five (5) years and not to exceed six (6) years.

The district attorney, Hon. David J. Fanning, who prosecuted the case, inter alia, makes the following statement:

"It was suspected that someone had hired Palanesa to do this job; one Patsy Affito was the lessee of the building, and had his goods therein heavily insured, in fact, over insured. He was suspected. Finally, the circumstances which we were able to gather were so strong and many that they seemed to warrant the arrest of Affito, and he was arrested for procuring Palanesa to set the building on fire, and convicted and sentenced to not less than eight years nor more than nine years for his part in the job.

"Palanesa was given not less than five nor more than six years. He is a young boy, and it seemed to me at the time sentence was pronounced that it was pretty stiff. The real culprit has been convicted in the person of Affito, and while Palanesa gave no assistance in the conviction of Affito, yet it seems to me that there is much merit in the application for pardon; it does seem to me that Palanesa has been punished quite sufficiently already."

The pardon of the boy is also strongly recommended by the sheriff, who had him in confinement before and during his trial; also by the chief of police, who was prosecutor in the case, and who writes as follows:

"I do not think that society will gain anything by making this young man serve out the remainder of his sentence, and I do not think that any harm will come to society by setting him at liberty."

In view of the fact that there seems to be doubt as to the guilt of the boy, and even though he committed the offense he was influenced by another man much older, and who has since been convicted of the same offense, we recommend that a pardon be granted to the said Dominick Palanesa.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 169, September Term, 1915, Howard W. Engle, alias Harry E. Engle was convicted upon the charge of robbery, and was on September 15, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, costs of prosecution, and undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than five (5) years nor more than ten (10) years.

The principal reason given in support of the application for pardon is the extreme ill health of the applicant. The board is in possession of a certificate as to his condition from the prison physician, Dr. H. W. Hassell, which reads as follows:

"This prisoner was admitted to the Eastern State Penitentiary on September 15, 1915; was then suffering from laryngeal and pulmonary tuberculosis, and was placed in the tubercular ward, where he has since been under treatment, and his disease seems to be progressing. There has recently been some gastric involvement, which has caused vomiting, and he has lost weight. Admission weight, 127 pounds; highest weight while here, 142 pounds; weight January 1, 1918, 124 pounds.

It is a fairly well advanced case of pulmonary and laryngeal tuberculosis."

The friends of this young man are desirous of having him die outside of the institution, as his case seems to be a hopeless one, and in view of the assertions made by the officers of the penitentiary—that he will probably not live longer than a few weeks—we are of the opinion that this is a case where clemency could properly be shown without affecting the ends of justice, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted to the said applicant, Howard W. Engle, alias Harry E. Engle.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Berks, to No. 121, March sessions, 1917, Henry Keller was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of statutory rape, and was by said court, on March 21, 1917, sentenced to pay a fine of $100, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than three years nor more than ten years.

It appears from the certified copy of the testimony taken in court that the young girls with whom he was charged of being intimate were incorrigible. One has been placed under the charge of probation officers, and the other has since been sent to "Sleighton Farms" (Glen Mills School for Girls).

It appears to the board that the applicant in this case, as shown by the testimony, was not the instigator of the crime, although an accessory, and, perhaps, a willing participant. His age is now 67 years, and his confinement, is, without question, detrimental to his health, he having spent all his life in outdoor work. The girls with whom he was accused of being intimate, and have been proven to be bad characters before, as well as since and during his arrest and conviction.

We are of the opinion that this is a case where the ends of justice have been served by the imprisonment already undergone, and therefore recommend that a pardon be granted to the said Henry Keller.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Northampton, to No. 7, December Term, 1912, Edward Kepp, alias Edward Kempt, plead guilty to an indictment charging him with the crime of arson, and was by the said court, on January 6, 1912, sentenced to pay a fine of fifty dollars, pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than nine years and six months nor more than ten years.

At the same term of court, to No. 8, he plead guilty to a similar charge, and was on the same day sentenced to pay a fine of fifty dollars, pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than nine years and six months nor more than ten years, the two terms to run concurrently.

While there are two indictments, the crime was really but one, as the two stables burned were close together, and the burning of the one consumed the other.

It is alleged by the petitioner:

That at the time of the commission of the crimes he was intoxicated, and did not realize the act he was committing.

That his record during the past five years, which is the entire length of time served by him, is good, and that he desires a chance to prove that he has reformed.

That he is now 44 years of age, and that his opportunities to re-establish himself in the community will be lessened as the time passes, and his ability to earn a livelihood and provide for his family will decrease.

That the defendant has been sufficiently punished for the crimes.

Letters from prominent people of the community in which the crimes were committed, who are interested in the applicant, indicate that they feel sure that he will not commit any further depredations and that he is now reformed.

The applicant has now served more than five years of the term for which he was sentenced, and we are inclined to the opinion that this is a sufficient punishment for the crimes perpetrated.

The property destroyed consisted of two vacant stables, no livestock and no property of value being consumed in the fire, and taking into consideration all the circumstances surrounding this case the board is of the opinion that Executive clemency could properly be exercised without impairing the ends of justice, and therefore recommends that a pardon be granted to the said Edward Kepp, alias Edward Kempt.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 499, May Sessions, 1910, William Felmeth pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with the crime of larceny and receiving stolen goods, and was by the said court, on June 9, 1910, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than two years nor more than ten years.

On October 22, 1912, after having served two years, four months and twelve days, he was paroled from the Penitentiary.

In December, 1913, in company with another, he stole an express package from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and on December 19, 1913, he was sentenced to imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than eighteen months nor more than thirty months.

The maximum penalty for both crimes of which defendant was convicted, and for which he is imprisoned, is six years, but under the present commitment he must serve in full ten years for the first offense, and then at least eighteen months for the second offense, with a probability of serving thirty months or twelve and one-half years in all for the use of a horse, which was returned, and for the larceny of a package of the value of $45.

Among the reasons stated in the application for pardon are the following:

(a) That the defendant has repented of his offenses, and has now determined to live a law-abiding life. He has been an exemplary prisoner, and will become a good citizen if granted a pardon.

(b) That both of the judges who presided at the trial of the defendant have no objection to the board granting a pardon.

(c) That the father of the defendant will immediately take him home, and secure permanent employment for the defendant, if the Board of Pardons will grant him his pardon.

The board is of the opinion that the applicant has suffered sufficient imprisonment for the two crimes he committed, but that he should be under the supervision of the Parole Board of the penitentiary, and, therefore, recommends to your Excellency that he be pardoned only of the crime for which he was sentenced December 19, 1913, thus leaving him under parole, in charge of the penitentiary officers, for at least two years under his first sentence.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 216, November Sessions, 1914, Thomas Harris was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of embezzlement, and was by the said court, on June 27, 1916, sentenced to pay a fine of $500, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than two years nor more than three years.

The petitioner was the collector of taxes for the Borough of Parsons, in the County of Luzerne, and collected the State, county, poor, borough and school taxes. He had been collector from 1909 to 1913. In 1914 the School Board claimed a shortage which Harris did not pay, and later was arrested and tried. In 1908 Harris married a widow, who was the owner in her own name of considerable real estate in the Borough of Parsons. She had at this time two sons, who were growing into manhood. During the years that followed this marriage Harris, together with his wife and stepsons, resided in the Borough of Parsons, in the same dwelling house, up to 1916. The tax duplicates for the various years were kept at their home, and when Harris was not present taxes were taken in by his wife or stepsons. On a number of occasions, at the instance of his wife, Harris allowed her to use from the funds collected moneys for the improvement of her separate estate, as well as the expenditure by her of a sum of money to assist one of her sons to enter into the milk business, and for the tuition of another son at a seminary, and allowed several hundred dollars in taxes upon his wife's estate to accumulate, with the tacit understanding that when his duplicates were to be settled up she would raise this money so expended and square up the accounts with the municipal authorities. When, in 1914, the School Board demanded a complete settlement of the duplicates, as above mentioned, Harris went to his wife for the money, but she refused to raise the money to straighten up the duplicates. After his arrest in 1914, and during the two years up to his trial in 1916, his wife refused and continued to refuse in any way assist her husband. On the trial of the case Harris felt that he would rather suffer punishment than to testify as to the exact facts in the case, which would bring his wife in an unfavorable light before the public.

After he was sentenced he then learned that his wife had no affection for him, and was endeavoring to start proceedings to obtain a divorce. This action on her part has prompted Harris to make a clean breast of the whole proceedings in order that he may, if possible, get out into the world again and square himself with those to whom he is obligated.

Harris' wife has since obtained a divorce, and is reputed to be worth $30,000 in property.

In view of the circumstances surrounding the case, the board is of the opinion that the ends of justice have been satisfied, no protest having been made against the granting of the pardon, and therefore respectfully recommends to your Excellency that a pardon now issue to the said Thomas Harris.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Adams, to No. 16, April sessions, 1912, Archie Clay was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of burglary, and was by the said court, on April 24, 1912, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than five years, and not more than fifteen years.

On August 20, 1919, he entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging him with the crime of breaking and entering with the intent to commit larceny, and on August 21, 1909, was sentenced to imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from one year to ten years. Upon the completion of the minimum term of this sentence he was paroled. Because of the second sentence to imprisonment in the penitentiary he would be compelled to serve the maximum period of his first sentence before the term of the second sentence would begin. He was pardoned in January of this year under the first crime committed in 1909. The application now is for the second offense.

It appears to the board that the sentence imposed was rather excessive, and the time which he has already served is deemed a sufficient punishment for the crime he committed, especially as there was no pecuniary loss as a result of his theft.

In view of the fact that the petitioner has spent a considerable length of time in the United States Army, and holds an honorable discharge from the service, and the further fact that he has served more than five years' imprisonment for these two crimes, and, believing as we do that he has repented, which considered in connection with the assurance given that he will secure employment immediately upon his release, leads the board to the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore recommends that a pardon be granted to the said Archie Clay.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 235, March Term, 1912, a certain Nathan Greenberg was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of burglary, and was by the said court, on March 12, 1912, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than forty-two months nor more than ten years.

The petitioner served the minimum sentence, and in September, 1916, was released on parole, under the conditions that he make monthly reports to his sponsor, and that he should not leave this, Commonwealth without permission: that the terms of the said parole should continue until March, 1922, the full length of his sentence as above.

Since his release on parole the conduct of said prisoner has been excellent, and he has at all times fulfilled the terms of his parole. For the past year he has been engaged in business as a junk dealer. The parole officer of the penitentiary stated to the board that since this prisoner has been out on parole his conduct has been good. The nature of his business is such that he is repeatedly called upon to leave the State in order to attend to the same, and each time he desires to leave he is put to the time and trouble of obtaining permission to do so, and that this requirement greatly retards him in the proper handling of his business.

The petitioner having served his minimum sentence, and for a period of one year and six months having made all reports necessary under the parole law, the board now believes that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore recommends that a pardon issue to the said Nathan Greenberg.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Cumberland, to No. 16, February Term, 1916, a certain George Heard was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of felonious entry, larceny, and receiving stolen goods, and was by the said court, on February 10, 1916, sentenced to pay a fine of fifty dollars, pay the costs of prosecution, and to suffer imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than two years nor more than four years.

The petitioner came to the Merchants Hotel, at Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania, one evening, going out of his room without locking the door, and when he again returned to his room the prosecutor rapped on the door, and asked for his money which had been taken from another room in the hotel. After a thorough search the money was found under a radiator in petitioner's room. He denied all knowledge of it, but upon examination there was found on his person two pieces of gold—a three-dollar piece and a one-dollar piece.

There was no loss to the prosecutor, as all the money was recovered, and the prisoner has already served more than two years' imprisonment for the crime of which he insists he is innocent.

In view of the circumstances surrounding the case—that no loss occurred to the prosecutor; that no person was financially injured by the actions of the prisoner, and that he has already suffered imprisonment for more than the minimum term of his sentence, the board is of the opinion that he is entitled to Executive clemency, and therefore recommends that a pardon issue to the said George Heard.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of York, to Nos. 91 and 92, August sessions, 1913, Frank Minnich was convicted upon an indictment charging him with felonious entry, larceny, and receiving stolen goods, and was by said court, on August 29, 1913, sentenced, in the aggregate, to pay a fine of two dollars, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than six years nor more than thirteen years.

The first crime consisted of the larceny of a horse and bridle. This was more in the nature of a trespass than larceny in the legal sense of the term. The petitioner had been practically raised by the prosecutor, and had frequently on other occasions done the same thing without any accusation being made. At the time of the trial the facts were known to persons in whom the petitioner had confidence, and being informed that the facts constituted a crime, he pleaded guilty to the indictment.

On the second indictment, with respect to the razor, the petitioner was in the company of four or five persons who were shaving with a razor that did not belong to them, but which it was not intended to steal. When the petitioner completed his shaving he laid the razor down and left the room. Upon returning to the room he was informed that the razor was gone, and those remaining in the room accused him of having taken it. The petitioner denies that he took the razor, but was advised at the time of the trial that a plea of guilty would not increase his sentence, and desiring to improve his condition he entered such plea.

No loss resulted in the horse stealing case, as the horse and bridle were recovered. The razor with which he was charged of stealing in the second indictment could not have been worth more than one or two dollars, and considering the two offenses together a sentence of from six years to thirteen years seems too excessive. The board is therefore of the opinion that this petitioner has suffered sufficiently for the crimes he may have committed, and respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Frank Minnich.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 600, September Term, 1917, Reginald Callender was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of assault and battery, and was by said court, on November 1, 1917, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than two years nor more than five years.

The circumstances leading to the commission of the crime by the defendant were as follows:

That on or about September 13, 1917, defendant rented premises No. 2524 Naudain Street through Thomas P. Lowry, a real estate agent at Twentieth and Bainbridge Streets, and on September 15th, 1917, two days thereafter, was moving into said house. This particular block is inhabited entirely by a rough class of white people who have persistently and repeatedly refused to permit a colored family to move therein, and have harassed and assaulted colored tenants who succeeded in moving into this particular block. Defendant moved his goods to said house in a pushcart, and each time a load was taken to said house some boys and young men seized the cart and pushed it down the street, and each time the defendant ran after and recovered same, but during the entire day he was repeatedly insulted, cursed and addressed as a "nigger," with appropriate adjectives preceding, and informed that "niggers" were not allowed in the block.

Defendant was entirely ignorant as to the character of this neighborhood, as he was practically a stranger in Philadelphia, and therefore had no knowledge whatever of the trap into which he found himself placed. The agent did not inform him of the conditions there, and, having paid his rent in advance, he was naturally justified in taking possession.

The petition for pardon is made by the "Pennsylvania Society for Promoting the Abolition of Slavery and for the Relief of Free Negroes Unlawfully Held in Bondage and for Improving the Condition of the African Race."

The petitioner states that from the time of the defendant's arrest up to the present the invalid wife and three minor children have been supported and entirely maintained by the "Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity," at an average cost of $8 per week, and up to February 28, 1918, had expended $137 in this connection. Said society has also investigated this defendant's character and says, "As far as we have been able to learn Mr. Callender bore a good reputation in

In view of the extreme provocation suffered by the defendant by his moving into the house in the neighborhood above referred to, which he was probably justified in doing, and the manner in which he was harassed, while not justifying the use of weapons, and which the court could not overlook, yet in view of his previous good character, and taking into consideration the destitute circumstances of his wife and three children, who are at the mercy of the charitable people of Philadelphia, the board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and we therefore recommend that a pardon issue to the said Reginald Callander.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in and for the County of Huntingdon, to No. 4, February Term, 1905, a certain Antonio Guarduano was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of murder, and was found guilty of murder in the second degree, and on February 10, 1905, was, by the said court, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of twenty years. On November 29, 1913, he was released from the penitentiary on parole, and it is now his desire to become a citizen of the United States. He further avers that he desires to again be married, but he does not want to again marry while a convict, unpardoned.

This prisoner having suffered imprisonment for eight years and eight months in the Western Penitentiary, and since November, 1913, has been under parole, and as the parole officer of the Western Penitentiary certifies that during his incarceration his conduct was good and has been good while on parole, the board recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Antonio Guarduano.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in and for the County of Montgomery, to No. 116, October Term, 1915, a certain Charles Smith, alias Lewis Cohen, alias Lewis Wacker, alias Lewis Greenspar, alias Charles Duffan, was convicted of the crime of larceny from the person, larceny and receiving stolen goods, and was by the said court, on October 6, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of ten dollars to the Commonwealth, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than three years and six months and not more than four years.

The crime of which the prisoner was convicted was for picking the pocket of a man at a horse race at the Belmont Track Clubhouse, the pocketbook taken containing about ten dollars in money. The said pocketbook was found lying on the ground, and there was no direct evidence that the defendant was the thief.

As there was no substantial evidence of this man having picked the pocket of the prosecutor—the only circumstance connecting him with the crime being the fact that he stood next to the prosecutor at the time the theft occurred—and in view of the fact that the prosecutor says, "he did not get any of my money," the board is of the opinion, taking into consideration the term of imprisonment already served, that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and, therefore, recommends that a pardon issue to the said Charles Smith, alias Lewis Cohen, alias Lewis Wacker, alias Lewis Greenspar, alias Charles Duffan.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 6, July Term, 1915, Albert May and Paul May were convicted of the crime of robbery, and were by said court, on July 14, 1915, each sentenced to imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than five years nor more than eight years, and to pay the costs of prosecution.

At the time of the commission of the crime Paul May was nearly 18 years of age, and Albert May was not quite 21 years of age. The two brothers had been employed by Dr. S. S. Hill, superintendent of the State Hospital for the Insane, at Wernersville, Pennsylvania. They left his employ and went to Philadelphia in quest of employment. They purchased a revolver and blank cartridges. After dark they went to Port Richmond, where they approached a man on an unknown street and asked him for a match, and at the same time ordering him to throw up his hands, which he did, and they then took his watch and chain and told him to move on. They repeated this performance three or four times the same evening, and then boarded a car for the central part of the city, where they entered a pawn shop at Fourth and Vine Streets, and attempted to pawn the articles stolen. While in the act of so doing they were apprehended by the police and placed under arrest, and their conviction followed.

Among the reasons given for pardon are the following:

(a) Neither one of the applicants has ever before been arrested. They have never been convicted or accused of crime.

(b) While the crime committed appears to be very serious on the surface, yet the revolver had just been purchased. The cartridges were found to be blank. None were discharged at any time.

(c) The property stolen was recovered immediately after the applicants were placed under arrest.

(d) Both of the applicants are very young men, and it is claimed have been sufficiently punished and would be of far greater assistance to the community if they were released.

(e) The petitioner, Dr. S. S. Hill, superintendent of the State Hospital for the Insane, at Wernersville, Pa., is ready and willing to furnish employment to both applicants after they are released.

In view of the fact that this crime seems to be more of a boyish prank than anything else, and the fact that the prisoners have suffered imprisonment for more than two years and eight months for the offense, and the further fact that Dr. Hill has arranged to give them employment at the State Hospital for the Insane, at Wernersville, immediately upon their discharge, and his promise to exercise direct supervision over the boys, the board respectfully recommends that a pardon issue to the said prisoners, Albert May and Paul May.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, April 17, 1918.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: At our regular meeting, held this day, there were submitted for our consideration, and approval or rejection, under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, certain communications from the Boards of Inspectors of the Eastern State Penitentiary, stating that the convicts therein named had previously been released on parole, and that the said inspectors now recommend that full pardon and final discharge be granted to each of said convicts, viz:

MIKE GEARING. Dauphin County. Rape. Sentenced January 16, 1908, for fifteen years. Paroled November 26, 1913.

ANDREW MALISCHEWSKI, alias ANDY MILLER. Luzerne County. Voluntary manslaughter. Sentenced October 6, 1908, for eleven years. Paroled October 31, 1913.

JOHN BRYAN. York County. Burglary, felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods. Sentenced January 5, 1910, five years to twenty years. Paroled October 29, 1915.

JOSEPH ALSTON. York County. Rape. Sentenced August 22, 1910, three years and nine months to fifteen years. Paroled May 22, 1914.

DANIEL HAGER. Dauphin County. Felonious assault with intent to kill. Five years and three months to twenty-one years. Paroled December 27, 1915. Sentenced September 27, 1910.

FRED KOHLER. Dauphin County. Felonious entry. Sentenced November 28, 1910, three years and six months to fourteen years. Paroled August 28, 1914.

ELMER HOLDERMAN, alias ELMER C. HALDERMAN. Columbia County. Burglary, pointing a pistol. Sentenced December 7, 1910, three years and three months to thirteen years. Paroled February 10, 1916.

JAMES A. ENGLER, alias ARTHUR A. ENGLE. Dauphin County. Bigamy and perjury. Sentenced January 9, 1911, two years and three months to nine years. Paroled July 9, 1915.

HERBERT TRONE. York County. Burglary, felonious entry, larceny. Sentenced January 3, 1911, two years and nine months to eleven years. Paroled October 3, 1913.

ROBERT WILSON. Dauphin County. Burglary. Sentenced January 23, 1911, two years to ten years. Paroled April 1, 1915.

THOMAS BRODERICK, alias WILLIAM ANDERSON. Lycoming County. Statutory Rape. Sentenced April 6, 1912, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled December 18, 1915.

HARRY MONK, alias MENK, alias MINK. Dauphin County. Pandering. Sentenced September 24, 1912, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled October 29, 1915.

CHARLES MINKINS. Lackawanna County. Pandering. Sentenced April 2, 1913, two years and six months to ten years. Paroled October 2, 1915.

ANTONIO PALATAN, alias PALATON, alias PADOVANO. Lebanon County. Felonious assault with intent to kill. Sentenced December 9, 1913, twenty-one months to seven years. Paroled September 9, 1915.

With respect to each of the convicts above named the inspectors assign the statutory reasons for their recommendations, and set forth the grounds on which the said recommendations are based.

Therefore, it appearing that all the rules of the Board of Inspectors, and the rules of our own board, have been observed in the premises, and in endorsement of the Board of Inspectors' report, we also recommend that an Executive order issue granting to the above named convicts each his final discharge and pardon.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, April 17, 1918.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 499, February Sessions, 1914, Harry Clark, alias Harry Hyman, was convicted upon a certain indictment charging him with the crime of burglary, and was by the said court, on the twenty-fifth day of February, 1914, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than eight years nor more than ten years.

For the crime of entering to steal, the defendant was, at the same term of court, to No. 500, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than eight years nor more than ten years, after the expiration of sentence on Bill No. 499.

Also, on the same date, to indictment No. 501, the defendant was sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than four years nor more than five years, after the expiration of sentence on Bill No. 501. To these three indictments the defendant pleaded "guilty."

In the perpetration of the crimes for which the applicant was convicted he was acting in conjunction with and under the direction of two well-known professional criminals, both of whom are now confined in the penitentiary. After his arrest, Clark made a clean breast of the whole affair, and assisted the detectives in recovering over four thousand dollars' worth of property which had been disposed of by this combination, and he subsequently testified for the Commonwealth in other proceedings growing out of his arrest.

Since going to the penitentiary, the defendant has studied and labored industriously to perfect his education, and he is now a first-class clerk in every respect, and does considerable clerical work in the institution. A number of people have become interested in the progress made by this young man.

The board believes that under the circumstances the sentence of the court was excessive, and that the ends of justice have been served by the period of imprisonment thus far served by the applicant, and we therefore recommend that a pardon now be granted to the said Harry Clark, alias Harry Hyman.

Respectfully submitted,

FRANK B. McCLAIN,

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, April 17, 1918.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in and for the County of Perry, to No. 3, January Sessions, 1913, Benjamin Baxter pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with the crime of burglary, and was by the said court, on January 24, 1913, sentenced to pay a fine of $100, pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than two years and two months and not more than five years.

The prisoner, the said Benjamin Baxter, was a young man, who, by reason of association with bad company, as well as the probable use of intoxicating liquor, and as petitioner believes, much in the spirit of bravado, committed the crime for which he was indicted, and when arrested manfully plead guilty to the charge without denial or the imposition of the costs of a trial upon the county.

The parents of the defendant are both aged persons, the father being in his seventieth year and the mother in her fifty-seventh year. Both are in poor condition of health, and require the care and services of their only remaining child, all the balance of their children being in distant parts of the country, except his two daughters, one of whom resides in Perry County, and one in the City of Harrisburg, but both of whom have families of their own.

The said Benjamin Baxter is a fine mechanic, both in his own trade and in the allied trades, and could be a most useful man either to the community or to the government of the United States.

The district attorney of Perry County, Hon. James M. McKee, in referring to the matter, says, inter alia:

"The prosecutors, who are living, do not, it appears, care to take any action against the pardon being granted. Therefore, I am content to rest the case upon the facts as set forth in the application."

After a thorough consideration of the facts in the case it appears to the board that the punishment already suffered by the prisoner for the commission of the crime is sufficient to satisfy the ends of justice, and we, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted the said Benjamin Baxter.

Respectfully submitted,

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in and for the County of Montgomery, to No. 84, June Term, 1915, John King was convicted upon a certain indictment charging him with the crime of burglary, larceny and receiving stolen goods, and was by the said court, on June 9, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of $10, the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than four years and not more than five years.

It appears from the testimony in the case that the applicant, accompanied by two other men, entered the house of George Coyne, at Meadowbrook, and took therefrom a number of rugs, carpets, silverware, etc.

When the applicant was arrested he made a clean breast of the crime. The testimony further shows that one of his co-defendants was the instigator of the crime. This defendant was never before charged with any crime.

Among the letters asking that a pardon be granted the applicant is one from Hon. Edwin H. Varc, State Senator from Philadelphia, which we quote in full:

"I desire respectfully to lay before you this, my appeal for a pardon for John B. King, now in the Eastern Penitentiary. I employed King for a number of years, and found him to be an industrious, sober and hardworking man. If he is released, as I believe he justly can be, I shall be glad to re-employ him at once. I am ready to pay him $3 a day, and shall be glad to do so.

"I believe that the ends of justice have been met by the punishment King has received, and that he should now be given an opportunity to lead a new life."

As the defendant has already served about three years for this offense, which is the first crime he ever committed, and in view of the fact that he will immediately go to work upon his release from prison, and believing that he has sincerely repented for his crime, and that he will in the future lead an upright life, the board respectfully recommends that a pardon be now issued to the applicant, John King.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in and for the County of Lackawanna, to No. 17, January Term, 1913, Matthias Adamcheski was convicted upon a certain indictment charging him with the crime of burglary, and was by said court, on March 31, 1913, sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than eight years and six months nor more than ten years.

The petitioner, in company with two others, while walking home after a day and evening spent in celebrating a wedding, found a package containing clothes, watches and among other things a brown derby hat. The goods were returned to their rightful owner, and petitioner was convicted of burglary and sentenced by the court as above set forth. He is now 59 years of age, with a wife and five children. The older two, aged 18 and 20 years respectively, are now enlisted in the United States Navy, leaving his wife at home with three small children, the eldest being 9 years of age.

The applicant recites the following reasons in support of his petition for pardon:

1. He denies being present at the actual burglary, and even if so, the sentence was excessive, and he has amply repaid for any offense he has committed.
2. That since the enlistment of his sons, his wife, who is the sole support of his other children, is working in a lunchroom in New York, and on that account cannot give their children proper care and attention such as they should receive.
3. That if this case is reheard he will be able to show that for eleven years prior to his incarceration he worked continuously at the silk mill mentioned in this petition, and if pardoned finally, he can secure immediate employment.
4. That giving your petitioner the benefit of no presumption as to truth of facts introduced at trial, the ends of justice have been amply subserved for any alleged offense committed.

He has now served five and one-half years.

In view of the fact that the prisoner has already served five and one-half years imprisonment, which seems to the board to be a sufficient punishment for the first crime of which he was ever convicted; that he has a family of small children; that he will immediately secure employment upon his release, and taking into consideration the previous good record of the applicant, the board respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Matthias Adamcheski.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Dauphin, to No. 104, June Sessions, 1917, Theo. Kharas was convicted upon a certain indictment charging him with the crime of adultery, and was by said court, on October 12, 1917, sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Dauphin County Prison for the term of eight months from date of sentence.

Recommendation for a pardon was made in this case to your Excellency at the February meeting, held on February 20, 1918.

Among the reasons assigned in this recommendation was the fact that the defendant believed that he had been divorced from his first wife when he married the second time. The girl he wronged by this marriage has since married another person. The injury done her is thus atoned, and the board, therefore, renews its recommendation that a pardon now issue to the said Theo. Kharas.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 547, September Sessions, 1917, Charles W. Meels, Jr., was convicted upon a certain indictment charging him with the crime of embezzlement by agent, and was by the said court, on January 22, 1918, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Philadelphia County Prison for a term of one year.

The applicant was engaged in the business of collecting rents, and failed to turn over promptly the money to the owner. The defendant testified that there was some confusion with one of the tenants over rent which was due to the prosecutor, and that he so informed the prosecutor on various occasions, and testified that the prosecutor had authorized him to withhold the money until the matter was adjusted. Defendant claimed at the time of the trial that he had no intention of keeping the money, but that the money was only retained by him until such time as a satisfactory arrangement could be made between the prosecutor and himself. The prosecutor was recalled to the stand, and denied that any arrangement had been made as testified to by the defendant, whereupon, the jury returned a verdict of "guilty." There were no notes taken of the proceedings.

Among the reasons advanced by the petitioner for the pardon of the prisoner were the following:

1. That the defendant has a wife and three small children, who are in a sickly condition, and are destitute of funds, and a prolongment of the defendant's sentence will result in great distress to the wife and three children.
2. The lack of corroboration of a prosecutor's story renders it unsafe to sustain a verdict and sentence.
3. It is respectfully submitted that the ends of justice have been served by the period of imprisonment already suffered by the said Charles W. Meels, Jr.

In view of the fact that the defendant had no previous criminal record, and taking into consideration the destitute circumstances of his family, and there appearing to be no intention on the part of the defendant to permanently retain the funds collected, the board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Charles W. Meels, Jr.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Union, to No. 5, May Sessions, 1915, James Hafer, Jr., was convicted upon a certain indictment charging him with the crime of Burglary, and was by the said court, on May 22, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of ten dollars, to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than 4 years and not more than 6 years.

The crime of which the prisoner was convicted consisted of entering the beer cellar of a hotel at Lewisburg, known as the "Baker House," and consuming some of the beer stored in the cellar. He pleaded guilty to the indictment, and was sentenced the same day as above set forth.

The defendant, James Hafer, Jr., is a cooper by trade, is industrious, and is greatly needed at home to assist in the care and support of his aged parents. It is claimed by the attorney for the applicant that he was sentenced by the Court of Quarter Sessions, a court without jurisdiction of the offense charged in the indictment.

In view of all the circumstances surrounding the case, that the amount of property taken was of small value; that the applicant has suffered sufficient punishment for the crime committed, the Board recommends that a pardon now issue to the said James Hafer, Jr.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Montgomery, Spencer Carr was sentenced on September 21, 1909, to serve a term of not less than two and one-half years and not more than ten years in the Eastern Penitentiary. The defendant, after serving four years and two months of this sentence, was released on parole.

On the 22d day of May, 1917, the defendant was sentenced by Honorable Aaron S. Swartz, Judge of the County of Montgomery, to serve out the unexpired term imposed upon him by Judge Stout, of Bucks County, on September 21, 1909. For the two crimes committed the prisoner has now served seven years and ten months.

The first crime of which the defendant was convicted, viz., breaking, entering, and larceny, was committed upon the premises of his father. After serving four years and two months for said offense, he was paroled and returned to the home of his parents in Ivyland, Montgomery County. After residing with his parents for several weeks he procured employment as a clerk in a Philadelphia grocery store. He worked in Philadelphia until about the 4th day of May, 1914, when he was again arrested for breaking into and entering the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Station, at Hatboro, and stealing about $2.00 in money and a suit of clothes, valued at about $15.00.

The value of the goods taken does not seem to justify such extreme punishment, and the Board is, therefore, of the opinion that the imprisonment already suffered by the defendant is sufficient to atone for the crimes committed, and now recommends that a pardon issue to the said Spencer Carr.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail delivery in and for the County of Beaver, to No. 1, June Term, 1915, Harry Spencer was convicted upon a certain indictment charging him with the crime of Felonious Rape, and was by the said Court, on June 17, 1915, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than four years nor more than fifteen years.

At the time of the trial the defendant entered a plea of nolo contendere, and was, thereupon, sentenced as above. He is somewhat over thirty years of age, and was employed at the Phoenix Glass Company, of Monaca, Pa., at or about the time of his arrest. By reason of the death of his father he was early in life thrown upon his own resources, and from the time of his boyhood had worked in order to assist in the support of his mother, with whom he had resided up until the time of her death, a little over four years ago. While taking his meals at a restaurant in the Borough of Monaca, where he resided all his life up to the time of imprisonment, he met a young woman of that place, who was working in the restaurant. At the time this young woman went to work in said restaurant she is alleged to have given her age as upwards of sixteen. Following the meeting between the applicant and the young woman an intimacy resulted, and applicant frequently took her to places of amusement, and she on several occasions visited his room where the crime of which he was convicted was committed.

The District Attorney of Beaver County, Hon. Louis E. Graham writes the Board, inter alia:

"The defendant has now served almost three years of his minimum sentence, and there is no disposition on the part of this office to resist his application, and, if granted by the Board, it will be perfectly satisfactory to the Probation officer and myself."

Hon. Richard S. Holt, Ex-Judge of Beaver County, who tried the case, makes the following statement:

"I feel that the ends of justice would be met by giving him his liberty at this time."

A petition numerously signed by citizens of the Borough of Monaca and vicinity, the place where the defendant resided for many years, was also presented to the Board, praying that the Board give favorable consideration to the application. Several letters from reputable citizens asking that a pardon be granted the defendant are on file with the papers in the case.

The Board, therefore, being of the opinion that the ends of justice have been satisfied by the punishment already suffered by the applicant, and taking into consideration all the circumstances surrounding the case, respectfully recommends that a pardon issue to the said Harry Spencer.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions in and for the County of Lancaster, September Sessions, 1916, P. Curtis Koeune was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of False Pretense, and was by the said Court, on September 12th, 1917, sentenced to pay a fine of $25, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Lancaster County Prison for a period of three months.

Upon appeal to the higher courts the Judgment was affirmed, and on April 15th, 1918, the applicant was committed to serve sentence.

The business of the petitioner was that of adjusting fire losses for the assured. When a fire occurred he would call upon the person whose property was burned, and make a contract with him for a percentage of the payment for loss, his duty then being to take care of the interests of the assured.

The prosecutor, E. W. Brown, of Lancaster, suffered a loss by fire. The applicant called upon him and secured from him a signed contract, appointing the applicant his adjuster. He performed some of the work in connection with the contract the same day, and when he returned the next morning to continue the work Mr. Brown refused to permit him to do so. The applicant then consulted counsel and was advised to file a lien against all monies due from the Insurance Company by reason of the said contract. When the Insurance Company refused to pay Mr. Brown the amount of his loss, he swore out a complaint against the applicant for False Pretense.

The prosecutor admitted signing the contract, but insisted that he had not read it, and was ignorant of its contents, and that he thought the applicant was acting for the Insurance Company.

It appears to the Board that this offense, if such it was, was as much the fault of the prosecutor as of the defendant in his signing the contract without a knowledge of its contents, and that, as a matter of fact, there was no False Pretense; the Board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and, therefore, recommends that a pardon be granted to the said P. Curtis Koeune.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia a certain Alvin Mack was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of robbery, and was, by the said court, on November 4, 1914, sentenced to imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from four years to five years.

The crime charged was for robbery in a taxicab, which had been hired late in the evening to take a ride through Fairmount Park. One of the party was taken out of the cab somewhere in the Park and left to his own resources. The next day the chauffeur found this man's pocketbook on the seat of the cab, the same containing checks to the amount of eight hundred dollars, but a little cash missing, also his watch. The defendant, Mack, was arrested, together with a man by the name of Barsatti, for robbery, and both were convicted and sentenced for the crime.

It appears from the testimony that all three were under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Hon. Norris S. Barratt, the Judge who tried the case, recommends that a pardon be granted at this time.

In view of the fact that the prisoner has served three and one-half years of his four-year sentence, his previous good character and reputation; his conduct in the prison, and the numerous letters from prominent people of the community where his family resides, prompts the Board to believe that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Alvin Mack.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Chester, No. 1, January Term, 1915, Dr. James C. Newhinney, April 27, 1916, was, on trial, returned by the jury as guilty on an indictment charging statutory rape, and on July 10th, 1916, was sentenced by the court to pay a fine of $500, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than five years nor more than fifteen years.

On April 30, 1918, an application for his pardon was filed, which was heard at our meeting today. Upon consideration of the matters laid before us with regard to the case we are of the opinion that it would be well to favor the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Dr. James C. Newhinney.

Newhinney is about sixty years of age, a practicing physician, who lived in Spring City, Chester County, where he had for years practiced his profession. He is a widower, and has no children. He had an extensive practice, and was highly respected by his neighbors and acquaintances. He had held various public offices in his town. This is the first offense of a criminal nature that has ever been charged against him, so far as the record shows. There is no doubt at all about his guilt in this particular case. There are circumstances, however, attending the relations of the applicant with the girl which showed that her father consented to and connived with the actions of the accused.

The applicant has been in the Penitentiary for nearly two years. Public sentiment in the community favors the application for clemency. The District Attorney of the County, in his letter to the Board, says "That a favorable recommendation of this case would be proper for the following reasons:

"That the defendant by reason of his social and professional standing in the community has already suffered more during the two years in which he has been confined than many other persons would in suffering a full minimum penalty of five years.

That the defendant's wife has died since his imprisonment. That the defendant, if given his freedom at this time, will be in a position to build up his medical practice and regain to a substantial degree his former good name and standing in his community, and in addition to this will be of service in his community by reason of the fact that there are still a large number of persons who have faith in him as a man and as a doctor. There also appeared in the investigation which the District Attorney's office made in this matter that there was some question about the reputation of the girl, Margaret Bertollet, for chastity previous to her meeting the doctor, and in fact Margaret admitted that she had indulged in sexual intercourse on one or two occasions with a boy who went to school with her before she became acquainted with Dr. Newhinney, and this fact might properly have reduced the grade of the crime to adultery, had it been successfully urged at the trial."

Under all the conditions explained to us with regard to the case we think it well to take favorable action, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Dr. James C. Newhinney.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions in and for the County of Berks, September Sessions, 1911, a certain John Wagner was convicted of the crime of burglary, and was by the said Court, on December 13, 1911, sentenced to pay a fine of $10, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a period of not less than two years and six months nor more than ten years.

The District Attorney, who tried the case, writes to the Board as follows:

"This case was called for sentence by one of my predecessors in office and the information which I have gathered from the trial alderman shows that the defendant resided with his parents in one of the neighboring counties, and while working in Reading lived with an uncle, who had a son by the name of Steffy Stoltz, who was then a notorious criminal. It is the opinion of the alderman, who heard the testimony, that Steffy Stoltz is largely responsible for the young man's actions. Defendant pleaded guilty and was sentenced December 13, 1911, to pay a fine of $10, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from two and one-half years to ten years.

The crime was committed on the night of October 24, 1911, while in the company of the said Steffy Stoltz, and the cigar store and dwelling at 656 South Seventh street were then entered. They took about $25.00 worth of personal property and the same was found at the home of the said Steffy Stoltz and restored to the owner the next day. The defendant was born in America from Polish parents. I am informed that he is a well-behaved prisoner and that he can secure a position.

"I am of the opinion, if your Honorable Board will permit me—that the young man has served a long term, in view of the fact that he was young when the crime was committed, and that he was led by an older boy in the commission of the crime. The principal in the crime, Steffy Stoltz, did not plead guilty, and a jury acquitted him.

"WILSON S. ROTHERMEL, District Attorney."

In view of the fact that the prisoner was a boy of only sixteen years of age when the crime was committed; that he was influenced in the commission of the crime by an older man, who was a notorious criminal, the Board is of the opinion that the punishment already suffered is sufficient to atone for the offense, and, therefore, recommends that a pardon now issue to the said John Wagner.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Westmoreland, August Sessions, 1914, James Miller was convicted of the crime of murder in the second degree, and was by the said Court, on September 11, 1914, sentenced to pay a fine of $1.00, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from eight years to fifteen years.

The petitioner, James Miller, and his friend, Mike Pehulic, were at or near a place called "Poverty Hollow," in the Township of Hempfield, Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, on the 7th day of June, 1914. Some trouble arose over a game of bowling. Miller and Pehulic engaged in a fist fight, or altercation of some kind, with one or more of the persons present. After the fight was over, and it was not a serious one, and no one injured, they both left to go to the house of a friend where they were expected, possibly for refreshments of some kind. When they finished or before they finished their dinner, they were informed that quite a crowd of the friends and partisans of the persons, or some of them with whom they had been previously fighting, had gathered outside of the house where Miller and Pehulic were, with the intention of attacking them. Miller and Pehulic then hastily left the house and started for their respective homes at Madison, a village some distance away. While moving rapidly along the foot-path towards Madison, they were pursued and over-taken by the crowd before mentioned, led by the man who was subsequently killed. The assaulting party surrounded Miller and Pehulic, throwing stones at them and striking at them with clubs. Pehulic was hit a number of times and severely injured. At this time, Miller, believing that both he and Pehulic were in great danger, ran towards the house which they had just left, looked back and saw his friend Pehulic surrounded, and, as he believed about to be killed or very seriously injured. He then seized an ax and ran to his friend's rescue. Swinging the ax, he advanced for the purpose of opening an avenue of escape for Pehulic. It was then that the deceased, Joe Bianchet, the leader of the assaulting party, was hit and killed. Miller and Pehulic then ran down to the coal tipple, about three hundred yards away, and there gave themselves up to the watchman in charge. They made no attempt to escape, offered no resistance whatever—in fact voluntarily surrendered themselves.

The reasons for pardon assigned by the applicant are as follows:

1. Your petitioner's family is greatly in need of his support. As stated in the application, he is the sole support of his wife and daughter of the age of seven years, and is likewise responsible for the support of his mother, of the age of seventy years, and of a crippled brother.
2. The Petitioner now maintains, as he did at the time of the trial, that the killing was in the defense of himself and his friend, Mike Pehulic.
3. Your petitioner believes that he has been punished sufficiently, having already served almost four years.
4. Your petitioner is able and willing to work and his services are not only needed by the family, but by the community at large.
5. Your petitioner is rather an unfortunate man than a vicious man, and further punishment would serve no useful purpose.

In view of the fact that the crime committed appears to have been done in self-defense rather than a premeditated assault, the defendant fearing that his life, as well as that of his friend, was in danger, and in view of the further fact that he has an aged mother to support, a brother who is a permanent cripple, and a family consisting of a wife and a daughter of seven years of age, and that no protest against the issuance of a pardon is made by the prosecuting attorney, or any one else in the community where the crime was committed, the Board believes this to be a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and, therefore, recommends that a pardon now issue to the said James Miller.

Respectfully submitted,

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Bucks, to No. 29, November Term, 1909, Joseph Davis entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging Burglary, Felonious Entry, Larceny, etc., and was, upon the 12th day of November, 1909, sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of not less than two years and six months and not more than ten years. On June 24, 1912, he was released on parole.

On October 1, 1912, this same defendant was convicted in the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 979, September Term, 1912, on the charge of Robbery, and on that day was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than three years and not more than five years.

On May 15, 1918, an application for his pardon in the Bucks County case was filed. The matter was heard at our meeting today, and in view of the long term that the defendant will have to serve by reason of his breach of parole in that case, if the law is given full effect, we think he is entitled to some relief. We, therefore, recommend that a pardon be granted him in the Philadelphia case. This action will render the applicant eligible for parole under the Bucks County sentence, and the Inspectors of the Penitentiary will still retain control over him until the expiration of the minimum term of that sentence.

It is, therefore, hereby recommended that a pardon be granted the applicant Joseph Davis.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Bradford, to No. 1, September Term, 1917, a certain Curtis Vanderpool was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of Burglary and Larceny, and was, by the said Court, on September 26, 1917, sentenced to pay a fine of $10.00, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than one year nor more than thirteen months.

The crime consisted of entering the basement of the railroad station at East Towanda, and taking therefrom a coil of copper wire. The prisoner's story is to the effect that he was induced to do this by another person, who claimed the wire was his personal property, and that he would pay the prisoner for his assistance in removing the wire. This story was denied by the other party, and the defendant was the only one to suffer for the offense.

The Judge, who tried the case, writes to the Board as follows:

"In the matter of the application pending before the Board of Pardons, for the pardon of Curtis Vanderpool, sentenced by me, on September 26th, 1917, for the crime of burglary and larceny, will say:

"This man, Curtis Vanderpool, was charged with stealing copper wire from the L. V. R. R. Co., taken from the Company's storeroom under the Station, in Wysox Township, this County.

"Mr. Vanderpool is a person who drinks intoxicating liquor to some extent, and he alleges that he was induced to commit this crime by another party. Ordinarily, he is not a bad man. He is a splendid worker, and laborers around here and upon farms are exceedingly scarce, and are in great demand, and for this reason I have thought it a patriotic duty, under the present conditions, to recommend his pardon.

"He has a wife and four or five small children, and I understand the Poor District of Bradford County have been taking care of his family since he was sent to the Penitentiary, and, if released, he will be able to take care of his family and relieve the Poor District to that extent.

"I am influenced to recommend this for the foregoing reasons. The question of help in this locality is a very serious proposition. The laborers, as a rule, have all gone to work for the Government or in munition factories, and in other factories that are doing government work because of the wages they receive.

"I also feel if we show some leniency now to this man, under the circumstances, that he may appreciate it, and it may have an influence over him for good.

Yours truly,

WM. MAXWELL."

In view of the facts and circumstances surrounding this crime; the previous good reputation of the prisoner; the fact that it was the first time he had ever been charged with any offense, and that no loss occurred to anyone through his action, the Board recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Curtis Vanderpool.

Respectfully submitted,

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Allegheny, February Sessions, 1915, a certain Gioacchino Contardi was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of Voluntary Manslaughter, and was, by the said Court, on June 4th, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of $1.00, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for not less than five years nor more than eight years.

The crime consisted of the prisoner shooting his brother-in-law. They had quarrelled the day before, and the deceased made threats against the life of Contardi. The next morning the quarrel was renewed, the men exchanged blows and then the defendant shot the deceased.

Hon. Singleton Bell, the Judge who tried the case, writes the following letter:

"In Commonwealth vs. Contardi, No. 29, February Sessions, 1915, which was tried before me, I felt a great deal of sympathy for this man and certainly have no possible objection to a pardon. In fact, it is one of those cases in which I regret that there is not more extensive power lodged in someone to deal with this class of cases than we appear to have. If the brothers of the deceased and the citizens of the community, who knew the defendant best, are favoring his pardon, I would think it could well be granted without any injury to the public."

We also quote from the District Attorney's letter, who prosecuted the applicant:

"Since that time I am informed that the brothers of the deceased, together with nearly all reputable business men of the town of Universal have joined in his petition asking for a pardon. Also that Judge Bell, who tried this case, is inclined to join in his request. Under these circumstances, as trial assistant, I could not conscientiously oppose the granting of this application."

In view of the fact that the Judge, who tried the case, and the District Attorney both recommend a pardon, the Board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and, therefore, unites in recommending that a pardon now issue to the said Gioacchino Contardi.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions in and for the County of Dauphin, March Sessions, 1915, a certain George O'Gorek was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of Felonious Entry-Larceny, and Receiving Stolen Goods, and was by the said Court, on March 24, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of $5, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than two years nor more than four years.

This defendant had previously been arrested on several indictments, receiving sentences aggregating from four and one-half years to eighteen years imprisonment. At the expiration of the minimum term he was paroled. Before the expiration of the maximum term he again committed a crime for which he is now making application for pardon. If he is released at this time he will still be under the control of the Board of Inspectors and the Parole Board of the Eastern Penitentiary, subject to their supervision, and should he in any way violate the law before the expiration of the unexpired portion of his maximum sentence he will be returned to the Penitentiary.

The crime for which he is now under sentence of the Court was of a rather trivial nature, and the punishment inflicted under the Parole law would mean an imprisonment of about twelve years.

In the opinion of the Board this is too severe a punishment for the crime committed, and, therefore, respectfully requests that a pardon now issue to the said George O'Gorek for the sentence of March 24, 1915.

JOSEPH HREHA. Sentenced January 26, 1910, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from three years to twelve years, on conviction of murder—voluntary manslaughter. Paroled January 26, 1913.

CHARLES SYSBOTES, alias SZOBODOS. Sentenced December 19, 1908, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of twelve years, on conviction of murder—second degree. Paroled November 28, 1913.

GERMANO VICHIO, alias GERMANO VECCHIO. Sentenced October 21, 1907, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of twelve years, on conviction of murder—second degree. Paroled November 28, 1913.

ERASTUS EDWARDS, alias TIGNER. Sentenced December 23, 1905, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of sixteen years, on conviction of robbery and receiving stolen goods. Paroled December 22, 1913.

WILLIAM S. MILLER. Sentenced December 20, 1911, by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Allegheny County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from two years to six months to seven years, on conviction of felonious assault and battery. Paroled June 20, 1914.

MARCUS LUKES, alias MARK LUCAS. Sentenced April 9, 1910, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from two years and six months to ten years, on conviction of robbery, receiving stolen goods. Paroled May 9, 1913.

FRANK BOINSKI. Sentenced November 17, 1913, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Erie County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from one year to five years, on conviction of robbery. Paroled November 17, 1914.

MIKE RAPCHOK, alias MICHAEL RAPCAK. Sentenced September 29, 1914, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Clearfield County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from one year to four years, on conviction of murder—voluntary manslaughter. Paroled September 29, 1915.

ELIAS JOHNSON, alias LEO. W. JOHNSON. Sentenced October 15, 1909, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from two years and six months to ten years, on conviction of robbery. Paroled February 4, 1914.

JOSEPH GIBBON, alias WALTER DAVIS. Sentenced April 6, 1910, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from two years and six months to ten years, on conviction of robbery and receiving stolen goods. Paroled December 6, 1912.

JOHN LIGGAN, alias JOHN LIGON. Sentenced August 23, 1911, by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Washington County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from one year and nine months to seven years. Paroled January 30, 1914. Convicted of felonious assault and battery.

MIKE BOGOVICH. Sentenced May 28, 1910, by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Washington County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from two years and six months to ten years, on conviction of felonious entering and larceny. Paroled December 28, 1912.

GEORGE MATSON. Sentenced November 9, 1908, by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Washington County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of twelve years, on conviction of robbery and larceny. Paroled November 28, 1913.

FRANK CHENGER. Sentenced September 10, 1906, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Washington County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of fourteen years, on conviction of murder—second degree. Paroled November 28, 1913.

JAMES LOVE. Sentenced May 17, 1905, by the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Washington County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of sixteen years, on conviction of murder—second degree. Paroled November 28, 1913.

T. R. SWANK. Sentenced September 1, 1915, by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Erie County, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from one year and six months to three years, on conviction of larceny. Paroled March 1, 1917.

With reference to each of the convicts named above the inspectors assign the statutory reasons to their recommendations and set forth the grounds on which said reasons are based.

It appearing that all the rules of the Board of Inspectors of the Western Penitentiary, and the rules of the Board of Pardons, have been observed in the premises, and in endorsement of the report of the Board of Inspectors, we also recommend that an Executive order issue, granting to the above named convicts, each, his final discharge and pardon.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Montgomery, March Sessions, 1915, Harry C. Burman, alias Harry C. Cannon, was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of larceny and receiving stolen goods, and was by the said court, on March 4, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of $10, the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than five years and six months and not more than seven years.

The crime of which the prisoner was convicted consisted of taking a horse, a wagon and harness, the total value of which was $160.

This defendant has a family consisting of a wife and six children whose ages range from six years to sixteen years. He has the reputation of being a diligent, hard-working man. The board is in receipt of a letter from the United Hebrew Charities, of the City of New York, in which they promise, immediately upon his release, to secure for him employment.

In view of the fact that the sentence was severe; that he has a large family of young children to support; that upon his release he will immediately remove from the State of Pennsylvania and join his family in New York City, the board recommends a pardon to the said Harry C. Burman, alias Harry C. Cannon.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Clearfield, to No. 17, February Sessions, 1917, a certain David Bryant was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of larceny and receiving stolen goods, and was, by the said court sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from two and one-half years to three years.

It appears from the history of the case that the defendant, David Bryant, who is a young colored man, was an industrious and thrifty person, and had accumulated some property, consisting of a house and some land. This house was rented by a white woman, who persuaded him to leave his own home and live with her. It was not long before his savings were dissipated, and the brothers of the woman induced him to join them in some escapades which resulted in his conviction.

Hon. Singleton Bell, the judge who tried the case, writes as follows:

"I am informed that you are about to present application for pardon in the matter of David Bryant, and I do not think the public interest will be any way injured by clemency being extended to this man. In view of a record which I am advised he has made as a prisoner, and I would think that he will abstain from the course of conduct which got him in trouble before, and in view of the scarcity of available men for the different lines of employment, I am following a very conservative policy now as to sentences, and if the matter were now before me this would probably affect the term of sentence. As I do not make recommendations for pardons in these matters, I can only say that I know of no objection to it being granted."

The district attorney adds the following:

"From what I have been able to learn, the applicant is deserving of some consideration, and his past conduct has indicated that he has many redeeming traits that justify extending consideration, and I believe it is a proper case for the exercise of clemency."

Other letters from prominent citizens of the community are on file, strongly urging a pardon at this time.

In view of the fact that the stolen property was of small value, and practically all recovered; that the prisoner has served over one year and four months; that the people of the community desire and ask for his release, paying especial attention to the letters of the judge and district attorney, the board respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said David Bryant.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, at September Sessions, 1917, Frank Lattari was convicted of the crime of murder in the first degree, and was by the said court, on January 31, 1918, sentenced to be electrocuted.

The crime committed by this applicant consisted of the shooting of two men, and both died a day after they were shot by defendant. The only reason advanced for the commutation of the death sentence in this case is the weak mentality of the applicant. He is a victim of epilepsy, which disease has been stated to the board to be of a progressive character, and it will be but a short time until he will be absolutely insane.

During the past month, the case having been heard in April, the board has made a further investigation, and it is reported to us that the disease is progressing with great rapidity, and that at the present time the petitioner is very much unbalanced mentally. The board therefore respectfully recommends that a commutation of the death sentence to that of life imprisonment now issue in this case.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 734, September Term, 1903, Louis O. Hine was, February 4, 1904, found guilty of murder in the first degree, and on the 19th day of June, 1905, was sentenced to be hanged. In February, 1906, an application for his commutation was filed, and, on hearing, commutation was recommended by the board, and was subsequently awarded by the Executive. An application for the pardon of the defendant was refused in 1916. At our recent meeting in May a petition for rehearing was allowed and we heard the case at our meeting today. We recommend that the prayer of the applicant be favored and that a pardon be granted him, Louis O. Hine.

Hine is now about fifty years old. The homicide of which he was convicted was the killing of his wife. The details of the case are set forth at length in the original application for commutation of death sentence. Briefly stated, they are: Hine and his wife, who was known as Deborah, the Gypsy queen, conducted a Gypsy encampment at an amusement park in or near Philadelphia. Trouble arose between them, owing to the wife's accepting the attention of another man. Hine remonstrated, but was finally driven out of the business and his place taken by this second man. Brooding over his difficulties, he started in drinking heavily, although he had not been before that a drinking man. The culmination of it all took place about eleven P. M., August 3, 1903, when Hine appeared in a tent at the Gypsy encampment, where were gathered his wife, the exhibitor of trained animals, and others, at a midnight supper. Hine opened fire, killing his wife and wounding the man. He returned to the city in a dazed condition, making no efforts to escape, and was arrested on his return to his residence. On the trial of the case there was no testimony produced tending to show the mental condition of the prisoner or a taint of insanity in his makeup at the time of the homicide. Subsequent developments brought to light the fact of a hereditary strain of insanity in his family, and this fact was urged before the board who recommended the commutation chiefly on the report of their chosen expert in that line.

We hardly deem it worth while to state at length the various reasons set out in this present application for pardon. It seems to be conceded that if prior to the original trial there had been an inquiry into the defendant's mental condition and a defense formulated along that line, the grade of the offense most likely would have been determined as murder in the second degree. We have assurances of responsible counsel, joined in by those of Bishop Garland, of Philadelphia, who have looked into the early history of the defendant, that they offer themselves as guarantors of the proper use of freedom on the part of Hine if pardon is granted. The defendant has been in the penitentiary for more than thirteen years and several years prior to his commitment to that institution in the county prison. From all that was placed before us, and relying on the assurances of a proper oversight of the man from this time on, we are of the opinion that the ends of justice have been met, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Louis O. Hine.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to Nos. 281 and 282, June Term, 1917. David Rosenberg was, September 24, 1917, convicted on the charge of larceny by clerk, servant and employee; and on the same day was sentenced to pay the costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from two years to three years.

On June 4, 1918, an application for his pardon was duly filed. We heard the case at our meeting today, and upon consideration think from the explanations given us that the application is worthy of favorable action. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, David Rosenberg.

Rosenberg is thirty years old, an unnaturalized Roumanian, who has been in this country about thirteen years. He is married, and his wife and two children are living and are dependent upon him for their support. He is a tailor, and a salesman of ladies' cloaks and suits. In this capacity he was working for a certain firm in Philadelphia. He collected for them various amounts aggregating $3,075, upon which sum he claimed he was entitled to a commission amounting to $300, which he retained. His employers contended that his commission was to be only two and one-half per cent. The applicant's previous reputation was good. The difference between him and his employers was in the nature of a dispute about a contract for wages, and should properly have been settled in the civil courts. At all events, under the circumstances he appears to have been sufficiently punished, and it was shown us that, if released from prison now, immediate employment awaits him. Under these conditions we think it proper to extend him the clemency asked, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the defendant, David Rosenberg.

Sir: At our regular meeting held this day there was submitted for our consideration and approval or rejection, under the provisions of the Act of Assembly, a communication from the Board of Inspectors of the Western State Penitentiary, stating that Damiano Madelena, who had been convicted in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, in and for the County of Elk, to No. 7, April Term, 1902, of the crime of murder in the second degree, and had been sentenced October 16, 1902, to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for twenty years, and who was released on parole November 28, 1913, and recommending that the said Madelena be now granted his final release and a pardon, had during the term of his parole observed the rules of the penitentiary and complied with the provisions of the Act of Assembly relating to paroled prisoners.

Therefore it appearing that all the rules have been observed in the premises, we endorse the recommendation of the Board of Inspectors of the Western Penitentiary and recommend that an Executive order issue granting to the said Damiano Madelena his final discharge and pardon.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Franklin, to No. 15, December Sessions, 1915, a certain Jacob Shockey was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of larceny, and was by the said court, on December 9, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a period of not less than two years and nine months nor more than three years.

The crime of which the applicant was convicted consisted of taking from the Waynesboro Water Company a quantity of pig lead, the value of which was $16.53.

The reasons upon which this application for clemency is based are:

(a) The applicant has been in confinement since November 13, 1915, first in the jail of the County of Franklin awaiting trial, and since December 20, 1915, in the Eastern State Penitentiary, at Philadelphia, Pa., and applicant believes that he has fully expiated his offense, and that no good purpose will be accomplished by his further imprisonment; that he fully realizes the enormity of his offense, and has resolved to lead a different and better life in the future.

(b) That the confinement has affected somewhat applicant's eyesight, and applicant fears that further confinement may so effect his sight as to impair his future usefulness as a citizen of the Commonwealth and his ability to earn a living.

(c) That applicant has had some military training and is anxious to secure his liberty in order that he may again enlist in the Army and do his part toward defending his country in the present emergency, if acceptable, and if rejected by the Army, he can at least give his services on the farm or in the factory and thus do his part toward winning the war. Under present conditions, applicant feels that he is not only not helping his country, but is actually a hindrance and is unable to do anything to help his country.

(d) During the period of his confinement in the Eastern Penitentiary, the applicant has always endeavored to conduct himself properly and comply with all the rules and regulations of the institution, and believes that his good conduct record there is such as to entitle this applicant for clemency to consideration.

In view of the fact that the prisoner was but a youth when he committed the crime; that he realized no profit from the theft, and that the goods taken were again returned to the water company from whom they were stolen, it appears to the board that the punishment already suffered by the applicant is sufficient to atone for his crime, and we therefore recommend that a pardon now issue to the said Jacob Shokey.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Chester, to January Term, 1917, Albert Burrell was, February 1, 1917, convicted on an indictment charging assault and battery, aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery with intent to kill; and on the 12th day of February, 1917, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from two years to three years.

On June 6, 1918, an application for his pardon was duly filed. At our hearing today we were advised of the details of the case, and from the information given us in relation thereto we deem the application for pardon properly made, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Albert Burrell.

Burrell is thirty-nine years of age. He is married and his wife and two children are living. By occupation he is a trimmer in the steel works. At the time of his arrest, however, he was engaged in keeping a restaurant. He was likewise a special policeman in the City of Coatesville. On the sixteenth day of December, 1916, while at work in his restaurant he heard some shots fired in the back yard. He hurried to the scene, and there found the prosecutor, Cooper, and arrested him. Cooper attempted to escape, and made a movement which Burrell understood as an effort to draw his pistol. Burrell ordered him to throw up his hands and on Cooper's failing to do so Burrell shot at him. It was testified that Cooper had a loaded revolver on his person at the time.

The reasons assigned for pardon are:

1. Petitioner is an able-bodied man, and prior to his conviction had been a policeman in Coatesville for more than twelve years and had the reputation of an efficient officer.

2. The offense for which he was convicted was an error in judgment rather than a crime.

3. Justice has been satisfied by the imprisonment already suffered by him.

4. The story told by Cooper was false and can be shown to be false.

From statements made to us of the efficiency of Burrell as a police officer during the many years of his service we are in accord with these reasons, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Albert Burrell.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 130, April Term, 1916, Charles H. Baumgartner, on arraignment, April 24, 1916, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging him with embezzlement by member of a corporation, and larceny by clerk, servant and employee. On the same day he was sentenced to pay the costs and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from two years and six months to three years.

On June 3, 1918, an application for his pardon was duly filed. On hearing at our meeting today we were made acquainted with the facts of the case, and, after proper consideration, we are of the belief that it would be well to allow the application. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Charles H. Baumgartner.

The applicant is twenty-nine years old. His immediate family consists of his wife and a son three years of age. His aged mother is also dependent upon him for support. He was in the employ of the Girard Trust Company for a number of years; and at the time of his arrest was assistant receiving teller of that institution. In this capacity he appropriated to his own use funds of the company to a large amount, most of which, it is alleged, was spent in gambling, etc. On his detection he admitted his guilt, and spent some days in helping the bank officials to straighten out the accounts, and restored nearly $8,000. His minimum term has been served except about four months. The bank officials unite in asking for the clemency sought. Promise of employment by a reliable iron working firm, if he is released, is on file with the papers. Under all the circumstances of the case as brought to our attention we think the clemency asked may with safety be allowed. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Charles H. Baumgartner.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Cumberland, February Sessions, 1916, a certain Cora Dayton was convicted, along with a certain Edward Windomaker and A. George Geesey, upon an indictment charging them with the crime of malicious injury to railroad and larceny, and each was sentenced by the said court to pay a fine of fifty dollars to the Commonwealth, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than five (5) years nor more than six (6) years.

It appears that the three persons guilty of this crime were traveling together. The crime consisted of taking the wire which connected the rails. It does not appear that the woman, Cora Dayton, was an active participant in the crime, but with the other defendants she plead guilty. There is no question about the previous depravity of the woman; she traveled with these men as a tramp attired in men's clothes. She has now been confined in the Eastern Penitentiary for a period of more than two (2) years, and the board is of the opinion that her release at this time previous to the expiration of the sentences imposed upon her associates in this crime, might result, with the help, aid and assistance of people who have interested themselves in her case, in securing for this defendant a good home where she would be under the supervision and guidance of those who are willing to look after her welfare, and thus give her an opportunity to make a woman of herself.

The board has a letter from Judge Sylvester B. Sadler, who tried the case and sentenced the prisoners, in which he says:

"What you say in reference to Cora Dayton has been noted, and I trust that you are correct in your view that there is some hope for the future of this prisoner. If you are convinced of this, I will interpose no objection to her release on parole."

In view of the facts and circumstances surrounding this case, and believing that it would be to the best interests of society as well as to the prisoner to have her released before the discharge of her co-partners in the crime, we therefore recommend that a pardon now issue to the said Cora Dayton.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia to No. 145, March Term, 1918, a certain Philip Taylor was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of larceny, and was by the said court, on March 12, 1918, sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than two years and six months nor more than three years.

The crime in this case consisted of the defendant, who was employed by a man engaged in hauling, assisting his employer in transferring some goods from one store to another. While occupied in this work they were both arrested charged with the crime of larceny. The co-defendant in the case, Ike Orenstein by name, has executed an affidavit, which reads as follows:

"Ike Orenstein being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is an inmate of the Eastern State Penitentiary, Philadelphia, Penna., being known as Number B-9143; that he was sentenced to said institution by Hon. W. W. Carr on April 12th, 1918, to undergo a term of not less than two years and six months and not more than three years for the crime of receiving stolen goods to which charge he pleaded guilty only on the advice of counsel; that one Philip Taylor, known as Number B-9144 in said institution was charged with and convicted of the crime of larceny, etc., in said county on the same day, having been charged as being a co-partner of mine in the commission of the alleged crime; that he is absolutely innocent of the crime charged because I had promised to pay him $1.50 to do a little moving for me, I having been hired to do the moving by a man who's name was Goldstein, and who promised to pay me $5, and I in turn hired Taylor; that I did not know the transaction was illegitimate; that I only pleaded guilty to the crime having placed confidence in my attorney in stating he could get me off with probation; that Taylor did not know he was going to do any wrong in helping me, believing the matter to be a perfectly legitimate business transaction; that I make this affidavit in his behalf without any promise of any kind on my behalf, feeling and knowing that the man is innocent, and also that I stated this fact in the courtroom the day of the trial.

(Signed)

IKE ORENSTEIN.

(B-9143)."

The district attorney, through his assistant, writes to the board as follows:

"I have made a very thorough investigation of the matter of Commonwealth vs. Philip Taylor, sur application for a pardon, argued before you on the 20th instant. The consensus of opinion of the assistant district attorney, who tried the case, the lawyer for the defense, and another disinterested lawyer, who heard the case in its entirety, is that Taylor was a tool in the hands of the other defendant and really should not have been charged with a guilty knowledge of the fact that the goods were stolen.

"He is an illiterate, ignorant person, who could not adequately give his own defense when on the witness stand, and because of the opinion of the gentlemen above named and the fact that the co-defendant, Orenstein, has absolved Taylor from any complicity, I believe that a pardon ought to be granted.

(Signed)

CHARLES E. FOX,
Assistant District Attorney."

In view of the circumstances surrounding this case; the affidavit of the co-defendant in the indictment, and the letter of the assistant district attorney, the board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore recommends that a pardon now issue to the applicant, Philip Taylor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Montgomery, to No. 95, October Term, 1917, a certain Samuel Levin was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of receiving stolen goods, and was by the said court, on October 6, 1917, sentenced to pay a fine of ten dollars, the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Montgomery County Prison for a term of two (2) years.

The defendant is a junk dealer in the City of Philadelphia. On August 9, 1917, two men came into his shop and said they had some wire for sale. They induced him to drive out to the neighborhood of Willow Grove to purchase this copper wire when the three men were arrested, Levin upon the charge of receiving stolen goods. It is claimed by the defendant that he never even saw the wire which had been stolen by the other two men, but nevertheless he was convicted upon the charge and sentenced as above stated.

There are a number of letters on file, as well as petitions signed by numerous people, who certify as to the previous good character and reputation for honesty of the applicant.

In view of the facts and circumstances surrounding the case, that the defendant never even saw the goods which were stolen, and which he wanted to purchase; that he did not know they were stolen, and because of his previous good character, and the further fact that he has a wife and four small children, who are now in destitute circumstances and dependent upon charity for support, and believing that he will never again be induced to commit any offense against the law, the board recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Samuel Levin.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Dauphin to No. 110, January Term, 1907, Bruno Pizzimenti, March 26, 1907, entered a plea of guilty of murder in the second degree after the Commonwealth had about finished its testimony on the trial of the case. He was sentenced, March 30, 1907, to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for the term of eighteen years. Under the working of the parole acts in force in 1913 he was released on parole, October 21, 1913. While on parole, in 1914, he applied for a pardon which was refused. In 1916, while still on parole, and then acting as agent in the organization of some sort of a labor union among railroad laborers, he was found trespassing on the right of way of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in Chester County and was arrested on that charge. He was sentenced to a short term in the Chester County prison. On his release from that prison he was of course returned to the Eastern Penitentiary to serve out his term originally imposed.

This present application is for pardon on the Dauphin County charge. Applications for his pardon were filed several years ago, but were refused. Finally at our May meeting a petition for rehearing was allowed and we again considered the case on its merits at our meeting today. We are now ready to report in favor of the application before us and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Bruno Pizzimenti.

The applicant is thirty-eight years of age. He was a laborer on the railroad since his arrival in this country in March, 1903. He has been in prison approximately eleven years. It is the opinion of the officials of the penitentiary, as well as that of many others acquainted with the facts of the case, that he has been sufficiently punished. We are disposed to coincide with this view, and as no opposition has been advanced to the present application, we recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Bruno Pizzimenti.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Montgomery, December Sessions, 1915, a certain Julius Baehr was convicted upon an indictment charging him with crime of burglary, and was by the said court, on the seventh day of December, 1915, sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than five (5) years nor more than six (6) years.

There appears to the board to be some doubt as to the guilt of the applicant. The applicant was no doubt convicted because of the fact that for several days prior to the commission of the crime he had been in the company of another man who was guilty beyond doubt. The applicant realized nothing from the crime, he having been only the tool of the real culprit in the case. His previous reputation was good.

Among his former employers is M. P. Howlett, a commission merchant of Philadelphia, who writes to the board as follows:

"Julius Baehr is serving time at the Eastern Penitentiary for burglary. He worked for me for some little time as chauffeur and houseman, and during his sojourn with me he had the full run of the house and nothing was missed by myself or family. His wife was employed by me at the same time.

"While he was convicted, I think the confession made by him was entirely due to his inability to understand the English language. His wife is now employed by me, and if your honorable board sees fit to pardon Julius Baehr I would not hesitate to give him employment."

In view of the fact that there is some doubt in the minds of the members of the board as to his participation in the offense of which he was convicted, and that he simply acted as messenger of the man who did commit the burglaries in carrying his suitcase to New York City, the board is of the opinion that the punishment already suffered by the applicant is sufficient to atone for his part in the crime, and in view of the further fact that he can secure employment immediately upon his release, we recommend that a pardon now issue to the said Julius Baehr.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of York, to No. 71, August Sessions, 1915, a certain Stewart Chilson was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of robbery, and was by the said court, on October 20, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of $300, the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than five (5) years nor more than eight (8) years.

The crime of which the defendant was convicted consisted of stopping a carriage in which a young man and his mother were returning from Williams Grove, and requesting them to throw out of the vehicle a pocketbook containing the money which the mother had with her. It appears that the man who committed the robbery had a mask over his face, and that the identification does not seem to have been complete.

The applicant has a wife and three small children who are entirely destitute.

The district attorney of York County, Harvey A. Gross, Esq., who tried the case, writes to the board as follows:

"I was district attorney of York County at the time the above defendant was convicted in our courts, and while I was thoroughly convinced at the time of the trial that he was guilty in manner and form as indicted, I have also had the opportunity of looking over certain depositions which have been taken in his application for pardon, and it would seem from these affidavits that there exists some doubt as to his guilt, and in view of the fact that he has already served a very substantial term of imprisonment, I recommend that his application for pardon be considered favorably by you."

In view of the fact that the applicant has already served about three years imprisonment for the crime committed, and as there seems to be some doubt as to his guilt, and in view of the further fact that he is by trade both a carpenter and an ironworker, and can secure employment immediately upon his release and take care of his family, the board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore recommends that a pardon now issue to the applicant, Stewart Chilson.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of York, to No. 50, January Term, 1916, Howard C. Lehr, January 5, 1916, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging extortion, and was thereupon, January 8, 1916, sentenced to pay a fine of $1, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of from three years to fifteen years.

On January 6, 1918, an application for pardon was duly filed, which was heard at our meeting today. On consideration of the situation explained to us we are of the belief that the application is well taken and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Howard C. Lehr.

Lehr is an unmarried man, thirty-nine years of age and a painter by trade. He lived with and supported his mother in the City of York. Through some visionary notion of securing money in an easy way he sent threatening letters to Mr. A. B. Farquahar, a prominent manufacturer of York, and one of the Commonwealth's leading citizens, demanding the payment to him of a certain sum under penalty of injury to Mr. Farquahar personally and to his property. The letters were placed into the hands of detectives who soon ran down the culprit. Lehr, on accusation, confessed his guilt, and on arraignment entered the plea of guilty and was sentenced as indicated.

The grounds on which the application is based are that the sentence was excessive and that his mother needs his services for her support. The trial judge and the district attorney write us in approval of the application. The prosecutor, Mr. Farquahar, in writing to us says among other things:

"Howard Lehr was sent to the penitentiary for attempt to raise money from me by threatening letters. He of course deserved punishment, but I am inclined to think he has been punished enough. He was led off by bad company. His mother and the community need his services, and he can be of a great deal more use outside and I am entirely satisfied he will not commit another offense. I cordially recommend his pardon."

He has been in prison almost two years and six months. On the face of this record we feel justified in favoring the application and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Howard C. Lehr.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 26, December Term, 1916, Salvatore Cardomene, together with Bruno Cada, Frank Cero, and Raffali Peni, was arraigned on the charge of murder. On entry of plea of not guilty Cardomene obtained a severance, and was tried March 5, 1917. On March 9, 1917, the jury returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. On February 27, 1918, the defendant was sentenced to be electrocuted.

On June 4, 1918, an application for the commutation of this death sentence was duly filed. The case was heard and considered at our meeting today, and we are of the opinion that the application should be allowed. We therefore recommend that the sentence of death imposed on the applicant, Salvatore Cardomene, be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Cardomene is an unnaturalized Italian, who, with his wife and two children, lived in the Borough of Duquesne, Allegheny County. He is thirty-one years of age. He is a laborer, and was employed on railroad work, and in the Carnegie Steel Company. On Sunday, October 8th, 1916, he, with the other defendants, spent the afternoon on the porch of his neighbor, Raffali Peni. Another party of Italians were on the porch of a nearby house, on the same side of the street, occupied by a family named Vesh. About five o'clock the Peni party decided to go to Homestead, and started for the street cars at the next corner. About the same time the Vesh party started for the same corner to take the cars to Pittsburgh. The two parties met at or near the corner, and, although there had been no previous dispute or altercation between them during the afternoon, a quarrel somehow arose at this point, and pistols were drawn and used freely on both sides. One of the Peni party was killed on the spot by John Vesh. The fight was continued by John Vesh and the rest of his party on one side, and the Peni party on the other. Vesh was finally shot by someone in the Peni party, and subsequently died from the effects of the wound. All the defendants above named were arrested for the murder of Vesh. Cardomene was convicted of murder in the first degree. The other defendants entered a plea of guilty before another judge of the county, who, on the same statement of facts as produced at the Cardomene trial, fixed the degree of guilt as murder in the second degree, and he sentenced them each to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for from seven years to ten years.

The Reasons for clemency set forth in the application are:

1. The death penalty would be too great a punishment for Salvatore Cardomene, because the part he took in the fatal encounter was no greater than that of Ralph Peni and Frank Cero, who received sentences of not less than seven years or more than ten years in the Western Penitentiary.
2. Because the ingredients necessary to constitute murder in the first degree do not exist in this case.

From the statements and explanations made to us there seems to be much merit in these reasons. This view is shared by many others familiar with the facts.

The trial judge, Honorable A. B. Read, writes us as follows:

"I was convinced that the jury was warranted in its action and therefore refused a motion for a new trial. Whether, however, under all the circumstances, (particularly in view of the second degree conviction and comparatively mild sentences imposed upon other participants in the killing), the sentence of death should be carried out is worthy of careful consideration. It may be that the ends of justice will be as well subserved by the commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment.

Should your Board in its wisdom, see fit to exercise clemency in this case, your action will elicit no dissent from me."

The Private Prosecuting Attorney writes:

"I was employed by the relatives of John Vesh to prosecute as private counsel in the case charging the murder of John Vesh against Salvatore Cardomene, and appeared in connection with this prosecution with Mr. Cancelliere, assistant District Attorney.

I have always believed from my knowledge of the case, that Cardomene, Cero and Peni were equally guilty and I have further felt that Judge Brown reached a just conclusion in the cases against Cero and Peni where a plea of guilty was entertained by the Court. My clients also feel that Cardomene should not be executed.

I desire, therefore, to earnestly join in the application of this defendant for a commutation of the death sentence in the full belief that this step is entirely just."

The Trial Assistant District Attorney writes:

"I was the Assistant District Attorney that tried the case of Salvatore Cardomene, who was found guilty of murder in the first degree in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County. The verdict came as a surprise to me, as I did not ask the jury to bring in a verdict of guilty in the first degree. In view of all the facts surrounding this case and the uncertainty of the evidence, and also taking in consideration that Frank Cero and Ralph Peni pleaded guilty to murder before his honor, Judge Brown, and that Judge Brown could not see a higher grade of murder than second degree and gave both of them moderate sentences, I think the life of Salvatore Cardomene should be saved, and I, therefore, join in Salvatore Cardomene's application for a commutation of the death sentence."

With no intention of going to the extent of saying that the verdict of the jury in the Cardomene case was wrong, or of attempting to fix the degree of guilt as less than that found by the jury, we are of the opinion that the ends of justice will be better met by commuting the death sentence of the applicant to that of life imprisonment than by enforcing the rigorous penalty passed upon him. We therefore recommend that the sentence of death imposed upon Salvatore Cardomene be commuted to that of imprisonment for life.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 51, November Term, 1914, James Kelly, November 20, 1914, entered a plea of guilty on an indictment charging breaking and larceny, and on the same day was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary of from two years to three years.

On June 6, 1918, an application for his pardon was filed. We heard and considered the application at our meeting today. Relying on the statement of facts presented in relation to the matter, we favor the application and recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant James Kelly.

Kelly, whose real name seems to be Daniel Dugan, and it is with this name he is spoken of in the application, although the court record makes no mention of an alias, was twenty-six years old at the time of his arrest. He is a mill worker, lived at Bristol, Pa., with his mother, and is unmarried. Somehow, not explained, he got into the company of one James Ryan, and with him started on a drinking tour. It was while with Ryan, that the offense complained of was committed. The application discloses that in the year 1910 this applicant was convicted in the Bucks County Court on the charge of robbery and, on May 10, 1910, was sentenced to the penitentiary for from two years and six months to ten years. On December, 1912, he was paroled. It was while on parole that this offense now under consideration was committed in Luzerne County. The Luzerne County Court had no knowledge of the sentence of the Bucks County Court hanging over the defendant when the present sentence was passed. The present sentence automatically revived the ten-year term of the Bucks County sentence. We are asked to grant a pardon in the Luzerne County case so that the applicant may be eligible for re-parole under the Bucks County sentence. He has already served the full amount of the Luzerne County sentence.

Judge O'Boyle, of Luzerne County, who imposed the sentence there, writes to Counsel for the applicant as follows:

"At the time when my sentence was imposed I did not take into consideration the fact that the breach of his parole would require him to serve the sentence which had been imposed by Judge Stout, of Bucks County; nor did I know either the maximum term for which he had been sentenced by Judge Stout.

I sentenced him on the basis of the offense to which he plead guilty before me and was of the opinion that he had already served his time.

When I read the facts contained in your petition, while it is not my custom to send letters to the Board of Pardons, still, in a case such as this I am in hearty accord with any efforts put forth by you for his relief, believing that he has already been punished more than enough under all these circumstances.

If you deem it advisable you may use this letter in presenting your case before the Board of Pardons."

On the statement of facts contained hereinbefore it appears to us that the pardon now sought in the Luzerne County case may with propriety be allowed, inasmuch as the applicant if, in the wisdom of the Inspectors of the Penitentiary, should be re-paroled on the Bucks County sentence, he will remain under the supervision of the Inspectors for the remainder of the ten-year term fixed by the sentence.

We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, James Kelly, in the Luzerne County case.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 480, January Term, 1918, Andrew Paul was March 8, 1918, returned by a jury as guilty of involuntary manslaughter, and on March 28, 1918, was sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the County Prison for the term of one year.

On June 4, 1918, an application for his pardon was duly filed, and the case was heard at our meeting of the 20th instant, and then held under advisement pending an interview by a member of the Board with the Trial Judge as to the merits of the application. The result of such interview is that the Trial Judge is now of the opinion that the man has been sufficiently punished, and he recommends that a pardon be granted him. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant Andrew Paul.

Applicant is sixty-two years old. His wife is living. He was engaged as watchman at the Philadelphia bank. On November 27, 1917, at his home he had some dispute with his nephew and the mother of the nephew, applicant's sister-in-law. The woman struck him with a rolling-pin which he took from her. Later in the day the quarrel was renewed, when the woman again attempted to attack him while he was eating supper. He seized her by the wrist and forced her to a chair. It developed that the woman had for some time, unknown to herself or to anyone else, a diseased heart, although her appearance was that of a healthy woman. The excitement of this quarrel, it seems, resulted in a rupture of one of the walls of the heart, and she then and there collapsed. Two days later she died.

Paul had all his lifetime enjoyed a good reputation in every respect, and was not in any way addicted to quarreling. The history of the case shows that he had been badly treated in his own home for some time. The death of the woman evidently was accidental, hastened of course through the excitement of the occasion. It is claimed that her decease cannot be charged to the applicant. He was in his own home, and it is but fair to presume that he acted properly in upholding his supremacy therein. At all events there seems to be merit in the suggestion that he has been sufficiently punished for whatever he may have done. The Trial Judge states that at the time of the conviction he felt that some punishment should be imposed, but that he has since softened, and now believes that the ends of justice will not be harmed by the pardon of the defendant and he therefore expresses himself in favor of our acting affirmatively on the application. We therefore recommend that pardon be granted the applicant, Andrew Paul.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 380, September Term, 1909, George L. Marion was convicted, January 27, 1910, on an indictment charging him with murder, and on March 4, 1911, he was sentenced to be hanged. On appeal to the Supreme Court the judgment of the Court of Oyer and Terminer was affirmed. In September, 1911, on application duly filed, the Board of Pardons recommended the commutation of death sentence to that of imprisonment for life, and commutation was issued accordingly. On May 28, 1918, an application for his pardon was duly filed with us. This application was heard at our meeting on June 20th, and then held under advisement. After due consideration we are now prepared to recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George L. Marion.

Marion, whose real name is stated in the application to be Sullivan, is now more than sixty years old. He was an actor by profession, but at the time of his arrest he had no employment and no fixed home. The victim of the homicide was his common law wife, whom he shot and killed in the city of Wilkes-Barre under the circumstances detailed in the recommendation for commutation. The prisoner has two sons by a first marriage, aged twenty-eight and twenty-four years respectively, who reside with his sister, Mrs. Catherine Le Suerer, in Huntingdon Park, California. He has no other living relatives.

The reasons put forward as a basis for the present appeal are:

1. That your petitioner at the time of the commission of the said crime was suffering from intense emotional strain, resulting from acute domestic unhappiness, and was unable to form a reasonable and sane judgment of his acts.
2. That your petitioner is a consumptive, afflicted with the disease both in his lungs and bones, and has been an inmate of the Tubercular Ward of the Eastern Penitentiary for upwards of five years. He has undergone several operations made necessary by the ravages of the disease, and his right foot has been amputated since his incarceration because of necrosis of the bone due to tuberculosis. Continued imprisonment will hasten the progress of the disease and in all probability will result in his death in a short time.
3. That your petitioner's sister, Catherine Le Suerer above named, is ready and willing to maintain and support your petitioner for the remainder of his life, and furnish him a home with her, so that he will not become a charge upon this or any other community.
4. That your petitioner was never before prosecuted for any offense of any character, however trivial, and during his incarceration has been a model prisoner with a clear record for good behavior.

These reasons appear to us to be substantial and worthy of favorable consideration under the circumstances. We have on file a letter from Mr. C. J. Hepburn, a reputable member of the Philadelphia bar, personally guaranteeing that he will be responsible, if Marion is released under these proceedings, for providing for his immediate transportation to the home of his sister, Mrs. Le Suerer, in California, with ample arrangements for his comfort, accommodation, and sustenance on the trip.

Inasmuch as Marion has been in jail and the Penitentiary for nine years, and taking into account his age and impaired physical condition with prospect of his living but a short time, and the fact that he will be entrusted to the charge of his sister and sons in California, who we are told are in circumstances which will enable them to properly care for him and there being no opposition at all raised to his release, we think the interests of the Commonwealth will not be jeopardized or the demands of justice frustrated by according him the clemency asked. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, George L. Marion.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Delaware, to No. 186, September Term, 1916, Charles Giglio was on trial, returned by a jury as guilty of assault and battery with intent to kill, and on the same day, to wit, September 29, 1916, was sentenced to pay a fine of $50.00, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than three years and not more than five years.

On June 5, 1916, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which was heard at our meeting of June 20th and then held under advisement. Having satisfied ourselves in regard to the merits of the application, we now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Charles Giglio.

Giglio is an unnaturalized Italian, of the age of forty-three years. He is married, and his wife and two children are living temporarily in England. His occupation is that of chef, and at the time of his arrest he was employed as steward on a ship plying between Chester and Havana. On June 17, 1916, the ship was docked at the port of Chester. One of his subordinates in the mess room had been annoying him and tormenting him off and on for some while. On the early morning of that day, about two o'clock, this man, Selby Andrews by name, who had been ashore and who was more or less under the influence of liquor, came aboard the ship and awakened Giglio, telling him there was a man on deck who wanted to see him. Giglio got up and went on deck. An altercation arose between these two drunken men and Giglio. Giglio was struck by one of the men. Andrews grappled with Giglio, when the latter, being in fear of his life, drew from his pocket a small knife with which he stabbed Andrews. Andrews was taken to the hospital, but it was found that he was not seriously injured and he soon recovered from the wound. Giglio was arrested on the information of the Chief of Police of Chester and tried on the charge mentioned. He had no counsel, and was unable to understand or speak the English language to any extent and had no witnesses on his behalf. It is urged as a reason for clemency that the defendant's case was not adequately placed before the Court, and that he should have been acquitted on the ground of self-defense. The Chief of Police who was the prosecutor, is of this opinion and he joins in the application for pardon. The defendant is not known to have had any previous criminal record, but on the contrary is spoken of as being a quiet and inoffensive person.

Under all the circumstances as shown to us by our investigation we are of the belief that the appeal for clemency should be allowed and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Charles Giglio.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 508, February Term, 1916, Abraham Decker was tried on an indictment charging murder, and was returned by the jury, May 26, 1916, as guilty of murder in the second degree. On July 10, 1916, he was sentenced to pay the costs and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for not less than four years and nine months and not more than five years.

On June 5, 1918, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which was heard at our meeting on June 20th and then held under advisement. We are now satisfied with reference to the propriety of the application, and we therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Abraham Decker.

Decker is seventy-three years old, a veteran of the Civil War. By trade he is a ship carpenter, and was working at that trade to the best of his ability. He is a widower. Up to a short time prior to his arrest he lived with his daughter in Philadelphia until her removal from the city a short time previous to his arrest when he went to live with strangers. He was somewhat mentally impaired and was totally deaf in one ear. He had certain other physical ailments brought on by his service in the army, which made him more or less helpless. He had been from time to time annoyed and teased by a crowd of boys in the neighborhood where he lived, among whom was young Miller, the victim of the homicide. On the night of January 2, 1916, he was attacked by this crowd of boys, knocked down and robbed of his watch and money and a diamond pin. After the assault he followed up the boys and came upon them. He recognized Miller, a youth of about seventeen years, as the leader of the party. Words passed between Decker and young Miller, the latter calling the old man ugly names and advancing toward him in a threatening manner. Decker, having been similarly attacked sometime previously was carrying a pistol, which he drew and fired several times in the air. Miller continued to advance towards him when Decker shot directly at him, striking him in the abdomen, from the effect of which wound Miller died.

The reasons advanced for clemency are: The age and physical disabilities of the applicant which render further confinement detrimental to his health; that he has been sufficiently punished; that his married daughter who has returned to Philadelphia to live, offers him a home where he will be cared for and properly looked after. We have caused an investigation to be made with reference to the last stated reason, and are advised that the home of the daughter, who is a comparatively young woman, and of good repute, and of sufficient substance, will be an entirely proper place for him, with the prospect of his being placed in a soldiers' home later on.

On the showing made to us we are of the belief that justice has been meted out to the applicant, and that it will be advisable to release this aged veteran from the Penitentiary. We therefore recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Abraham Decker.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny to No. 209, January Term, 1918, Charles F. Shields was returned by a jury as guilty of receiving stolen goods, but recommended to the extreme mercy of the Court. On April 25, 1918, the defendant was sentenced to pay a fine of six and one-fourth cents, costs, and to undergo imprisonment in the Allegheny County Jail for six months.

On June 5, 1918, an application for his pardon was duly filed, which was heard at our meeting on the 20th of June, and then held under advisement. Having fully considered the facts in the case we now recommend that a pardon be granted the applicant, Charles F. Shields, whose real name is stated in the application to be Charles T. Shields.

The applicant is forty-six years old, he has no regular trade, but for many years had been a police officer. He is married, and his wife and two children are living. He was charged with having received an automobile from a man by the name of Swain knowing it to have been stolen. The two men took the machine to a garage for repairs, where it was allowed to remain several months. On one or two occasions Shields took the machine out, but always after consulting Swain. The owner of the garage knew Shields, and opened the account for repairs, etc., in Shields' name, although Shields did not exercise any other rights of ownership except as stated. The fact of his having been a police officer, it is thought, influenced the jury in rendering a verdict of guilty on the trial. Shields seems to have borne an excellent reputation in every respect. We have on file with the papers numerous letters from highly responsible persons and firms attesting to his worth and expressing regret at the unfortunate slip he made and avering their belief in his integrity. Among other letters is one from the officials of the Duff Manufacturing Company, a large manufacturing concern of Pittsburgh, offering to give him immediate employment on their police force in the event of his release, they having full knowledge of his ability in this direction from having employed him on their force. The trial district attorney: "While the testimony against Shields was not very strong, the fact that he had been a police lieutenant, and, as such, charged with the duty of apprehending men like Swain, probably had an influence on the jury. Swain was convicted and is now serving a long term of imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary."

No opposition is raised in any quarter, and this being a first offense, and the opinion of many good citizens of Pittsburgh being that he has been sufficiently punished, we are constrained to favor the application for clemency, and we therefore recommend that pardon be granted the applicant, Charles F. Shields.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, March Sessions, 1917, Benjamin Divac and Israel Divac were convicted upon an indictment charging them with the crime of entering to steal; larceny and receiving stolen goods, and were by the said Court, on April 1, 1918, each sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in separate or solitary confinement in the Philadelphia County Prison for a term of fifteen months.

These two prisoners conducted a shoemaking establishment in the City of Philadelphia, occupying the second floor of a factory building. On the third floor of the same building was a similar establishment. They were charged with having taken from the third floor some leather stock belonging to the men engaged in business on that floor, and after a search some leather said to belong to the third floor parties was found in their possession. While the defendants had a considerable stock of leather of the same style and print on hand, the prosecutors claimed a certain portion was their property. There seemed to have been some doubt as to the identification of the goods, and when the officers came to make a search of the premises of the defendants they gave the officers full privilege to examine all the stock they had on hand, offering no resistance whatever. The jury evidently believed the story of the prosecutors.

The two prisoners are brothers, and were engaged in business as a partnership. They have families to support; their business is entirely dissipated, and the prosecutors who were supposed to have suffered the loss were given the leather stock alleged to have been stolen from them.

There are possibly forty letters on file with the Board from prominent manufacturers, merchants, and dealers in the City of Philadelphia earnestly praying that a pardon be granted to these two men, one of which letters we quote below:

"Benjamin Divac, who is now serving a sentence of fifteen months, was well known to us as an active merchant, and whose transactions were always conducted in a satisfactory way. In our judgment, the public disgrace and loss of character attendant to his sentence has been a greater penalty than his continued incarceration, and we believe this consideration, and the further fact that his family is suffering, would in our judgment warrant your favorable consideration for a pardon.

Yours very truly,

LOUIS N. SPIELBERGER,
V. Pres. and Cashier,
Union Nat. Bank, Phila."

In view of the fact, even if these defendants were guilty, that the prosecutors lost nothing and that the defendants gained nothing by their misdeeds; that they both have families to support, and that they lost their entire business and must begin without any capital, the Board is of the opinion that the imprisonment already suffered is sufficient punishment, and therefore recommends that a pardon now issue to the said applicants, Benjamin Divac and Israel Divac.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions, in and for the County of Lackawanna, to No. 17, January Sessions, 1913, a certain Frank Urbanski and Peter Ruski were indicted with another defendant named Matthias Adamcheski, and were by the said Court, on March 31, 1913, each sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than eight years nor more than ten years.

The petitioners while walking home after a day and evening spent in celebrating a wedding found a package containing clothes, watches, and, among other things, a derby hat. The goods were returned to their rightful owner, and the petitioners were convicted of the crime of Burglary, and sentenced by the Court as above set forth.

The petitioners recite the following reasons in support of their petition for pardon:

First. Your petitioners have been confined since September 21, 1912. At that time they were arrested, having been in possession of stolen goods. They were immediately apprehended with the goods, which consisted of a package containing clothes, watches, and, among other things, a brown derby hat. The goods were returned to their rightful owner, your petitioners were convicted of burglary and sentenced by the court to imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a period of from eight and one-half to ten years.

Second. One of your petitioners, Frank Urbanski, is now 55 years old, with a wife and one daughter, aged 14, still living and dependent upon him, and that prior to this offense had been working as a carpenter at Garfield, N. J. That if pardoned he can secure immediate employment, as evidenced by a copy of letter hereto attached.

Third. Your petitioner, Peter Ruski, has never before been in trouble of any kind, and has been employed continuously as a carpenter laborer, a copy of his employer's letter is hereto attached and made a part hereof. He is now 38 years of age.

Fourth. (a) They deny being present at the actual burglary, and even if so, the sentence was excessive, and they have amply repaid for any offense committed.

(b) That Matthias Adamcheski, who was arrested and convicted with them at the same time for the same offense, has been pardoned, and is now a useful citizen, working at his old trade as a silk worker at Garfield, N. J.

(c) That if pardoned they will immediately be able to receive useful employment, as evidenced by letters of contractors who are ready and willing to give them employment.

(d) That giving your petitioners the benefit of no presumption as to the truth of facts introduced at trial, the ends of justice have been amply subserved for any alleged offense committed. They have now been confined for a period of almost six years.

In view of the fact that these prisoners have already served almost six years imprisonment for a crime committed in which no property was lost to the owners, and the board believing these sentences to have been excessive, and taking into consideration the further fact that one of the participants in the crime has already been pardoned, the board respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Frank Urbanski and Peter Ruski.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 357, April Sessions, 1915, a certain John McAlarney was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of burglary, taking and larceny, and was by the said Court, on June 28, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of $500.00, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than 6 years, nor more than 10 years.

This applicant, in company with two other boys, broke into the cellar of one Michael J. Grontowski, at West Hazleton, and took from said house a quarter of a keg of beer and some cooked meats. They carried this material a short distance from the building where they drank the beer and ate the meat. The petitioner now appeals for a pardon after having been confined for a period of over three and a half years for the reason that he feels that he has been sufficiently punished for the crime committed.

The District Attorney who tried the case writes to the Board as follows:

"I am informed that the defendant during his custody has been most respectful to authority and very industrious. Such being the case, one of the objects of his severe sentence has been accomplished—the correction of the offender himself—and I am of the opinion that the just demands of the law have been satisfied."

After considering the circumstances surrounding this case the Board believes that it was more of a boyish prank than an attempt at larceny; that the minimum sentence of six years imposed by the Court, in view of the fact that the property taken was valued at less than five dollars, is excessive, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said John McAlarney.

Respectfully submitted,

Sir: The prisoners named below have been recommended for pardon by the Board of Inspectors of the Eastern Penifentiary by reason of the severe sickness of the said prisoners. In each case all the requirements of the law have been complied with, and the certificate of the Prison Physician is attached to the papers in each application. The only reason for pardon is the extreme illness of the applicants:

JOHN BEEMAN. Dauphin County. Aggravated Assault and Battery. Sentenced March 19, 1918, for from one year to eighteen months.

SARAH RODGERS. Philadelphia County. Voluntary Manslaughter. Sentenced February 27, 1917, for from two years to three years.

HARRY NELSON. Montgomery County. Felonious entry, etc., (2 indictments). Sentenced September 18, 1912, for from four years to eleven years.

ISAAC ANDERSON. Dauphin County. Larceny from the person; felonious assault. Sentenced January 14, 1918, for from fifteen months to eighteen months.

JOHN DUITTMAN, al. Banks. Philadelphia County. Entering with intent to steal, larceny. Sentenced January 9, 1918, for from three years to three years and four months.

Since the applicants were made, one of the six applicants died, and the death of another is expected daily.

It appears to the Board that it would be an act of mercy to the prisoners as well as to their families, if they were permitted to spend their last hours outside the prison, surrounded by their families, and we therefore respectfully recommend that a pardon be now granted to each of the five applicants above named.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Lancaster, to No. 42, April Term, 1916, Edwin B. Eberly and Ephraim R. Kreider were convicted upon an indictment charging them with the crime of conspiracy, and were, by the said Court, on November 17, 1917, each sentenced to pay a fine of $25.00, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Lancaster County Prison for a term of four months.

Sentence was suspended while an appeal was taken to the Superior Court. This Court sustained the decision of the lower Court, and the petitioners commenced to serve their sentence on July 27, 1918.

The history of this case as summarized from the voluminous statements prepared by the attorneys for the petitioners, and from the printed paper books used in the arguments before the Supreme Court, and from arguments made before the Board, appears to be as follows:

Eberly and Kreider lived in the same community in Lancaster County; both were farmers, and had dealings with each other. In the course of time Kreider borrowed, at various times, from Eberly sums of money for which he gave notes, and in a settlement the total amounted to $1,250.00, for which Kreider gave Eberly a judgment note. The prosecutor and other creditors of Kreider made a charge against the two defendants of conspiracy to defraud. This charge was tried in the Lancaster County Court and the two found guilty. Later the defendant Kreider was adjudged a bankrupt, and the United States District Court decided that the note was valid. An appeal was taken to the Superior Court, which Court sustained the decision of the Lancaster County Court. We, therefore, have the irregular and inconsistent position of the District Court of the United States holding that this note was valid, and the verdict of the jury in the Quarter Sessions Court based on the fact that the note was fraudulent.

In support of the application there are numerous letters on file with the Board from prominent people living in the community where the two petitioners resided, testifying to the honesty and good character of the petitioners. Among these letters being one from Jacob G. Henly, of Ephrata, another from J. M. Rettew, a prominent merchant of Ephrata, another from A. E. Lane, merchant, Clay; another from Benjamin Wissler, President of the Lincoln National Bank, Lincoln; one from Harry L. Wealand, Justice of the Peace, Clay; one from E. B. Hauenstein, Justice of the Peace, Lincoln; and one from W. L. Weidman, President of the Ephrata National Bank, Ephrata.

In view of the fact that the Lancaster County Court adjudged the judgment note to be invalid, and the United States District Court adjudged the same to be valid, and in view of the fact that the above named gentlemen certify to the good character and honesty of the applicants, and taking into consideration the fact that the term of their sentence will expire in November next, the Board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Edwin B. Eberly and Ephraim R. Kreider.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia a certain Joseph Barsotti was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of robbery, and was, by the said Court, on November 4, 1914, sentenced to imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for from four years to five years.

The crime charged was robbery in a taxicab, which has been hired late in the evening to take a ride through Fairmount Park. One of the party was taken out of the cab somewhere in the park and left to his own resources. The next day the chauffeur found this man's pocketbook on the seat of the cab, the same containing checks to the amount of eight hundred dollars, but a little cash missing, also his watch. The defendant, Barsotti, was arrested, together with a man by the name of Mack, for robbery, and both were convicted and sentenced for the crime.

It appears from the testimony that all three were under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

In view of the fact that the prisoner has already served three years and ten months of his four-year sentence, that his co-defendant in the case has been pardoned, the Board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Joseph Barsotti.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Centre, to No. 27, December Sessions, 1917, a certain Joseph Kubina was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of voluntary manslaughter, and was by the said court, on November 30, 1917, sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a period of not less than two years, and not more than three years.

The crime of which the applicant was convicted occurred on a festive occasion when the deceased woman, Mary Moser, threw a bucket of water on your petitioner, who, in a like humor and without malice or criminal intent of any sort whatever, threw a tin dipper, small in size, which happened to be in his hand at the time toward her striking her slightly on the side of the head. At the time of such playful act the said Mary Moser made no complaint whatever of feeling any ill effect, and later went to Morrisdale. During the festivities held at the time of the play between your petitioner and the said Mary Moser, the said Mary Moser also engaged in similar behavior and play with others of the party to a degree more or less rough, and which could likewise be construed to be a contributing cause of her subsequent death. There is no proof that the playful throwing of the dipper was the direct cause of the death of the said Mary Moser.

In support of the application the Board has on file a letter from Honorable Henry C. Quigley, the Trial Judge in the case; also from James C. Furst, Esquire, the District Attorney who tried the case.

The Board believes that there was no intention to injure, and there seems to be much doubt as to whether the death occurred by reason of the action of the defendant, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Joseph Kubina.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 168, July Sessions, 1913, a certain Stanley Rook was indicted, together with another person named Mike Metro, and was by the said Court, on July 12, 1913, sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than six years, nor more than nine years.

The crime of breaking and larceny of which the applicant was convicted consisted of breaking into an outhouse, commonly called a "Shifting Shanty," and removing therefrom a number of articles of the value of $60. The applicant has now served more than five years of his sentence, which sentence appears to the Board to be extremely severe.

In view of the fact that the accomplice in the commission of this crime, Mike Metro, was pardoned more than a year ago, and as the two men were equally guilty, it seems but just that this applicant be granted a pardon at this time, and the Board therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Stanley Rook.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 120, September Sessions, 1917, a certain John Kirrane was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of robbery, and was by the said Court, on September 14, 1917, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than two years, nor more than three years.

The charge upon which the petitioner was tried was that on July 22, 1917, he had assaulted one Harry J. Lind, near Womrath Park, in Frankford, Philadelphia, and had robbed him of a wallet containing two dollars and a watch. At the time of the alleged robbery Lind was accompanied by a companion named Robert Roner. Both had been drinking.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty. Thereupon an officer related to the Court an account of two other assaults in Frankford that were said to have occurred in the months of July and August, 1917. A probation officer stated that the section in question was near his home; that automobiles had been held up time and time again; "It is a bad crowd. The police have constant reports of men being held up at all hours of the night." There was no evidence whatever that Kirrane was in any way concerned in such holdups or assaults or to support the implication that he was a member of any "bad crowd."

The petitioner has already served more than one year of the sentence imposed. Lind, the prosecuting witness, and both of his parents, have voluntarily joined in the request that a pardon be granted, and a large number of responsible and representative citizens and residents of Frankford have also added their petition that clemency be extended to this applicant.

Among the letters on file with the Board is one from Hon. James A. Dunn, who represents the Frankford District, Phila., in the House of Representatives, which reads as follows:

"The application of John Kirrane, of Frankford, Philadelphia, for a pardon being before you for consideration, I wish to state that I have known his mother for a long time, as well as his family. I recommend them as worthy and respectable. This young man made a mistake in his life, and I think he has paid the penalty and learned a lesson. I understand he wants to go into the Army to make a man of himself. I will appreciate any encouragement you can give him."

In view of the fact that the applicant is a vigorous young man willing to work and serve his country in any capacity, whether in the Army or Navy or in any shipbuilding plant or munition factory, the Board respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said John Kirrane.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Clinton, to Nos. 14 and 27, July Term, 1917, a certain Orvis Seyler was convicted upon two indictments, charging him with the crime of larceny, and was by the said Court, on July 21, 1917, sentenced in the aggregate to pay a fine of ten dollars, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of not less than four years nor more than six years.

The petitioner in this case was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and while thus employed he carried away tools which he used at his home. The tools were found on his property, and he was charged with the larceny of the same. On the second indictment he plead guilty to taking a motorcycle from one of his neighbors. All the property in both cases was recovered, and consequently neither the Railroad Company nor the owner of the motorcycle lost anything by the action of the applicant.

Below we quote a letter written to the Board by Honorable R. B. McCormick, President Judge of the Courts of Clinton County:

"In the matter of the application of Orvis Seyler for pardon from a sentence imposed by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Clinton County on the 21st day of July, 1917, for a period of not less than four years nor more than six years, although I did not preside at the trial of this case, I was familiar with the facts at the time of the trial.

"The defendant plead guilty to the larceny of the motorcycle. The evidence showed that this was more of a mischievous prank than an actual felony. The motorcycle was not taken far from the home of the owner and no attempt was made to convert the motorcycle to the use of the defendant or any of them.

"The defendant was also charged with the larceny of a quantity of tools from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. To this indictment, without trial, he plead guilty. He had been employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for some time as an Assistant Machinist. There was no attempt upon his part to sell or convert any of this property to his own use, except that a number of the items were found in his possession.

"This young man had before this time borne a very good reputation, and is a mechanic of considerable skill. I thought at the time the sentence was imposed that it was excessive under the circumstances, and I am still of the same opinion. Just at this time men of this type are greatly in demand, and I feel justified in recommending that a pardon be granted."

The Board is also in receipt of letters from both the Associate Judges recommending, in strong terms, the pardon of the applicant.

In view of the fact that no loss occurred by reason of the misdeeds of the applicant, and in view of the fact that the three judges, who had knowledge of and who were familiar with the circumstances surrounding the case, recommend that clemency be shown the petitioner, the Board respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Orvis Seyler.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 150, February Sessions, 1918, a certain Eddie Baldwin was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of enticing a female child under the age of sixteen years for the purpose of sexual intercourse, and was by the said court, on February 28, 1918, sentenced to pay a fine of one hundred dollars, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than two years, nor more than five years.

In support of the application for pardon the Board has on file letters from several of the leading citizens of Luzerne County. Below we quote several of the letters addressed to the Board:

"This is to certify that I have made an investigation of the conviction of Eddie Baldwin, and will say although convicted of the charge set forth in the indictment, I have found that he is a man of good moral character until this charge; that while in the County Prison of Luzerne County, was a model prisoner; that the girl, Loretta Mulhall, in the neighborhood where she resides, bears a bad reputation, and a girl whose word is not believed by her neighbors, and that the police of Hazleton, Pa., had had her under observation for some time.

Yours very respectfully,

GEORGE F. BUSS,
Sheriff of Luzerne County."

"As Chief of Police of the Borough of Freeland I have met Edward Baldwin, now seeking a pardon, while he performed in our town. I became rather well acquainted with him, and I can say that I found him to be a gentleman who was sober, honest, and apparently of good character.

The girl in the case I know well by reputation. She was, to say the least, very fond of the companionship of men with whom she was always ready to flirt. She is now in a Reformatory. She is well grown and fully developed, and one would take her to be at least eighteen or nineteen.

I unqualifiedly endorse a pardon for this unfortunate fellow.

Very respectfully,

LOUIS STOLZ,
Chief of Police of Freeland, Pa."

"I am an ex-police officer of the City of Hazleton, and in my duties as such officer I had occasion to run across Miss Loretta Mulhall, Lattimer Mines, Pa., who came to Hazleton City almost nightly. She was constantly on the city streets, and bore a bad reputation for chastity and morality. She was the object of police surveillance in Hazleton more than once.

Baldwin, who is applying for a pardon, do not know, but I feel confident that this girl is entirely responsible for the acquaintanceship between herself and Baldwin.

Very respectfully yours,

MICHAEL SIBIA,
Hazleton, Pa."

In view of the fact that the reputation of the girl is bad, as certified by the above officers; that the prisoner has served nearly seven months of his sentence, the Board respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Eddie Baldwin.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in and for the County of York, to No. 14, August Sessions, 1914, a certain Dick Campeto was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of robbery, larceny, etc., and was by the said court, on August 26, 1914, sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than 3 years, nor more than 10 years.

The applicant served the minimum term of his sentence, and was paroled on August 26, 1917. There seems to have been a serious question as to the identification of the applicant as being the one who committed the crime, as shown by the letters of the District Attorney, who tried the case, and the present District Attorney, which we quote below:

"In the matter of the application of Dick Campeto, I desire to state that I was District Attorney at the time this case was tried in our court, and conducted the trial of this defendant personally.

"The defendant at the trial offered a very good defense which the jury might have been justified in believing, I myself was never absolutely certain that the defendant was guilty. I could therefore heartily join in recommending a pardon for this defendant, and especially in view of the fact that he has served a very substantial term and is now out on parole.

HARVEY A. GROSS,
Ex-District Attorney, York Co."

"I, C. W. Albert Rochow, present District Attorney of York County, hereby join in the above recommendation.

C. W. ALBERT ROCHOW."

A pardon at this time will relieve the applicant from reporting to the Parole Board, as required by law, and will permit him to enlist in the Army, or perform work in some munition plant for the government. The Board, therefore, respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Dick Campeto.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in and for the County of Lawrence, to No. 1, March Term, 1914, a certain Jim Cordi was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of murder in the second degree, and was by the said court, on May 19, 1914, sentenced to pay a fine of $100.00, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of not less than five years, nor more than twenty years.

The former County Detective and prosecutor in the case, William H. Dunlap, writes to the Board as follows:

"I understand that James Cordi, who was convicted at No. 1, March Session, 1914, of the Oyer and Terminer Court, in and for the County of Lawrence, is making an application to your Honorable Board for a pardon.

I was the prosecutor in the case, being County Detective of the County of Lawrence at the time James Cordi was convicted of murder in the second degree for the killing of Frank Muscatello.

I made a very thorough investigation of this case a short time after it happened, and was familiar with the testimony of both the Commonwealth and the defendant; in fact, there was very little difference in the testimony of the Commonwealth and that of the defendant.

The men were playing cards in the home of Frank Muscatello, when a dispute arose over the turning of a card, and this dispute lead to words and finally a fight started, and in the fight, Jim Cordi picked up a butcher knife which was lying on the table at which they were playing cards; said knife having been used to open a can of tomatoes, and to cut bread for lunch at which all had been participating.

From the investigation which I made at the time, I found that Jim Cordi and Frank Muscatello, the man who was killed, had always been good personal friends, and there was no bad blood or ill feeling between them; Muscatello, however, had the reputation of being quarrelsome among the people who knew him, and Cordi was aware of that fact. This I learned from the investigation of the case before the trial, and was so proven at the trial, and all through the case it was staring the Commonwealth in the face—the bad reputation of Frank Muscatello.

When I saw Muscatello, he was at the hospital in New Castle, with a knife wound in one of his lungs, he was dying at that time, and he refused to even tell who had wounded him, and in fact, the first positive evidence the Commonwealth received in the case as to who had committed the crime came from Jim Cordi when I got him from the police at Sharon, where he had been picked up by directions which I had sent out, and there was no question in my mind from what I learned in investigating in this crime that there was no bad blood, or no premeditation, it was simply done in a fight, and with a knife which happened to be lying on the table, and was grabbed up in the excitement.

In my opinion this man has been sufficiently punished, and if the Board could see fit to pardon him, the ends of justice have been taken care of."

The Trial Judge in the case, Honorable William E. Porter, also writes to the Board as follows:

"I am informed that James Cordi is making an application for pardon before your Honorable Board, and in respect to the same I desire to say that Mr. Cordi was convicted of murder in the second degree at No. 1, March Sessions, 1914.

At the time of the trial of the defendant a serious doubt arose in my mind whether or not he was guilty of an offense higher than manslaughter. However, the jury convicted him of murder in the second degree and he was sentenced. I believe, however, that in view of the fact that he has been confined to the penitentiary since about the time of his conviction, that he has been sufficiently punished.

This homicide grew out of a quarrel during a game of cards, and the defendant prior to that time had borne an excellent reputation for peace and good order, while the deceased was a man of very quarrelsome disposition.

Under all the circumstances in the case, I am of the opinion that the defendant has been of good conduct since his confinement that the ends of justice have been met by pardoning him."

In view of the recommendations of the prosecutor in the case, the Trial Judge, and numerous signed petitions from residents of the community in which the crime was committed, the Board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Jim Cordi.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Indiana, to No. 95, September Sessions, 1917, a certain Joe Rigano was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of assault with intent to kill, and was by the said Court, on December 11, 1917, sentenced to pay a fine of one hundred dollars, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of not less than eighteen months, nor more than two years.

It appears from the evidence in the case that on the evening of November 28, 1917, the defendant in company with others was drinking in a saloon in the borough of Creekside, Indiana County, Pennsylvania, and while there became engaged in an argument, and finally the bartender ordered them to leave the place, and some time later when the prosecutor and his friends left the saloon and started home they were approached by some one from the shadow of the trees, some conversation occurred, and one of the prosecutor's party took hold of the person who had accosted them, who it was said was Rigano, whereupon, the allegation is, that Rigano drew a knife and struck one John Riley in the stomach or side, cutting a gash, but which did not prove to be serious and from which Riley soon recovered. Rigano contended that he had not done the stabbing, and the identification was not positive as to him, the evidence was that he was a large man, dressed in a certain way, and the description corresponded to Rigano's appearance and dress. The evidence was to the effect that all parties concerned had been drinking heavily during the evening and were intoxicated.

The Board has on file a letter from the Trial Judge, Hon. J. N. Langham, which reads as follows:

"I have been informed of the intention to make application for the pardon of one Joe Rigino or 'Rigano' on September 18, 1918.

He was convicted in the Court of Quarter Sessions of assault with intent to kill and sentenced to the Western Penitentiary for not less than eighteen months nor more than two years, of which he has served about nine months. The sentence was rather extreme in view of the fact that all parties concerned were intoxicated, and the injury inflicted was slight. But, the real purpose of the sentence was to deter others and I feel that this has been effected, and also that the defendant has been sufficiently punished. He has a good wife and four small children who need his care and support. Besides, he is a coal miner by trade, and his labors in this line are required by the country at this time.

I, therefore, ask that he be pardoned, and trust that you will take favorable action on his application."

The District Attorney, William N. Liggett, who prosecuted the case, writes to the Board as follows:

"Concerning the application for the pardon of Joe Rigino or Rigano, I have no desire to oppose this application. Having tried the case and being familiar with all the circumstances surrounding the assault I am of the opinion that the ends of justice have already been met and believe the defendant has already been punished for his wrong doing, and being a strong able bodied man ought to be released to provide for his family, and engage in the mining of coal in which business he is a very able man."

The Board is also in receipt of letters from several reputable and responsible citizens in the community where the crime was committed, asking that favorable consideration be given the application.

In view of the fact that favorable action on this application is recommended by both the Trial Judge and the District Attorney who prosecuted the case, and having entire confidence in the statements made by these officers, the Board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Joe Rigano.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 373, March Sessions, 1918, a certain George McKee pleaded guilty to the charge of larceny and receiving stolen goods, and was by the said Court, on March 28th, 1918, sentenced to pay a fine of six and one-quarter cents, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Pennsylvania Industrial Reformatory, at Huntingdon.

The age of said applicant was sixteen years on March 17th, 1918; he had no previous criminal record of any kind, nor had any charge ever been made against him.

The age of the boy would preclude the possibility of his having any such criminal record, and the imprisonment already suffered appears to the Board to be sufficient to have taught him a lesson which he will never forget. The Board being convinced that he has no criminal instincts, and that he will never again transgress, respectfully recommends that a pardon be now granted to the said applicant, George McKee.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 397, June Sessions, 1911, a certain Arthur J. Thomas was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of "attempted burglary, entering in the night, without breaking, with intent to commit a felony," and was by the said Court, on July 27, 1911, sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than two years nor more than seven years.

After serving the minimum term of his sentence, he was released on parole and went to the City of Baltimore, thus violating his parole, and consequently returned to the Eastern Penitentiary to serve out the unexpired part of the maximum sentence.

During his absence in Baltimore he pleaded guilty to the larceny of articles valued at $60.00, and was sentenced by Judge Harlan to undergo imprisonment in the Baltimore City Jail for a term of eighteen months.

This prisoner seems to have had a mania for stealing trousers, and has served imprisonment at various times for this offense.

The only crime the petitioner committed in Philadelphia and for which he is now serving imprisonment, was attempted larceny. For this said crime he served the minimum term of his sentence, and because of the violation of his parole is now compelled to complete the minimum term of his sentence of seven years.

This sentence appears to the Board to be unreasonable and excessive for an attempt to commit a crime in which he was unsuccessful and which did not yield him anything.

The Board, therefore, recommends that a pardon now be granted to the said Arthur J. Thomas.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Allegheny, to No. 40, September Sessions, 1908, a certain Charles Hurley was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of felonious rape, and was by the said Court, on September 24, 1908, sentenced to pay a fine of six and one-quarter cents, cost of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of fifteen years.

He was released on parole December 22, 1913. On August 28, 1914, he was arrested on a charge of assault and battery, and on October 9, 1914, was sentenced to pay a fine of $25, costs of prosecution and to undergo imprisonment in the county jail for a period of sixty days. He was confined in said county jail from October 9, 1914, until April 12, 1915, when he was recommitted to the Western Penitentiary where he has since been confined continuously from April 12, 1915, until the present time.

His sentence for the first crime was expiated by his release on parole. However, in consequence of the commission of the crime of assault and battery he was again returned to the Western Penitentiary where he has up to the present time been confined for more than three years, and which the Board believes to be rather severe punishment as a result of his second offense.

In view of all the facts and circumstances surrounding this case we believe that the defendant has been adequately punished, and, believing this a proper case for our favorable consideration, respectfully recommend that a pardon be now granted to the said Charles Hurley.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Susquehanna, to No. 20, November Sessions, 1915, a certain John Moore was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of larceny, and was by the said Court, on November 11, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of $100, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than four and not to exceed ten years.

The petitioner was charged with entering a sleeping room of the Railroad Y. M. C. A., located in the depot of the Erie Railroad Company, and taking from the pocket of a lodger therein four dollars and an Elgin watch. The property alleged to have been stolen was found in his possession.

The health of the petitioner's wife is greatly impaired, and she is unable to support herself and child, a boy five years of age, as verified by an affidavit of her physician.

The prisoner has already served more than three years for the commission of a crime which availed him nothing, and the prosecutor, the man who was robbed, requests that a pardon be granted.

In view of the facts and circumstances surrounding this case, the board is of the opinion that the term of imprisonment already suffered has amply satisfied the end of justice, and, therefore, recommends that a pardon now be granted to the said John Moore.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Somerset, to Nos. 2 and 3, May term, 1915, Alfred Jennetti was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of forcible entry and burglary, and was by the said Court, on May 27, 1915, sentenced in the aggregate to pay a fine of twenty dollars and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a period of not less than seven years nor more than ten years.

Carmelo Merricco, his co-defendant in the crime, was on the same day sentenced in the aggregate to pay a fine of ten dollars, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of not less than six years nor more than nine years.

Honorable Wm. H. Ruppel, the judge who tried the case, and Virgil R. Saylor, Esquire, District Attorney of Somerset county, write to the Board as follows:

"I am informed that an application for a pardon will be made to you by the defendant in the above case (Alfred Jennetti). In view of his youth at the time of conviction, his previous good record, and the probability that the sentence he has already served will make of him a man of useful purpose, I would recommend favorable consideration of his application, and the further fact that his mother has moved to another community, and the young man, if liberated, will have new surroundings.

Of the four men convicted for complicity in this crime, two have already been pardoned, and the applicants (Alfred Jennetti and Carmelo Merricco), are the only two still confined to prison, although an examination of the court records does not disclose any evidence showing that the present applicants were guilty in a greater degree than the other two participants in the crime who have already been granted Executive clemency.

In view of the fact that the commission of the crime resulted in but a small loss—most of the stolen goods having been recovered—and in view of the further fact that the two prisoners have already served almost four years of their respective sentences, the Board respectfully recommends that pardons now issue to the said Alfred Jennetti and Carmelo Merricco.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Schuylkill, to No. 819, June Sessions, 1914, a certain Ed. Haight pleaded guilty to the crime of burglary and larceny and was by the said Court, on June 15, 1914, sentenced to pay costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of from nine years to ten years.

The crime in this case consisted of entering the house of Mrs. Wm. L. Sheaffer, in Pottsville, and taking therefrom a lot of jewelry and other articles. The stolen articles were recovered, and the prosecutor in this case, the party from whom the goods were stolen, writes the board that she is very desirous that a pardon be granted the applicant.

As the health of the prisoner appears to be in a critical condition, the Board is of the opinion that it would be an act of mercy to show clemency at this time, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon be now granted to the said Ed. Haight.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of York, to No. 36, April Sessions, 1916, a certain Arba Talman Krise was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of sodomy and burglary, and was by the said Court, on April 21, 1916, sentenced to pay a fine of $50, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than three years nor more than five years.

The only reason advanced for a pardon in this case is the critical condition of the petitioner's health, as shown by the statement of the penitentiary physician, which we quote below:

"In compliance with your request, I have examined the above mentioned prisoner, and beg to submit the following report:

This is a severe case of pulmonary tuberculosis. There are crepitant rales and dullness over right lung, more marked at upper portion. Harsh respirations in right lung. Sputum shows numerous Tubercle Bacilli. Temperature runs 102 1-2 at night. Admission weight 152 lbs., August 1, 125 lbs. This case, from the numerous bacilli in the sputum, and the fever developed at night, has a distinct unfavorable prognosis."

(Signed) H. W. HASSELL."

In view of the precarious condition of the prisoner's health, the Board respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Arba Talman Krise.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Erie, to Nos. 32 and 33, November Sessions, 1916, a certain James Billingsly was convicted upon two indictments charging him with the crime of robbery, etc., and was by the said court, on November 20, 1916, sentenced in the aggregate to pay a fine of $110, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of from five and one-half years to ten years.

The Board is in receipt of a letter from Wm. F. Detzel, Chief of Police of the City of Erie, which we quote in full:

"In behalf of James Billingsly, who has made application to your Honorable Board for a pardon, I desire to state that I have known the said James Billingsly and his family for a number of years.

The family is well known and highly respected in this community, consisting of the father, mother, and eight children, two of whom are in the military service of the United States.

I never knew the said James Billingsly to be involved in any wrong doing until the summer of 1916, when he, together with several other young men, all being about seventeen years of age, appropriated an automobile standing on the streets of this city, and took a joy ride, leaving said automobile on the outskirts of the city when through with it. These young men were arrested, and an indictment for larceny found against them at the September Sessions, 1916, to which they pleaded guilty. The said James Billingsly being paroled by the court in my custody. In October of the same year, and pending said parole, James Billingsly, together with others, again became involved in the taking and using of automobiles belonging to others; in one of which said instances they frightened the driver of the automobile by exhibiting a revolver, to drive them about until on sight of a police officer they left the driver unharmed and in possession of his automobile. For these offenses the young men were indicted at the November Sessions for larceny and for robbery, and pleas of guilty were entered in both indictments, and the defendants sentenced to the Western Penitentiary.

I am convinced that the commission of the aforesaid offenses by these young men was in a spirit of boyish pranks and desire for excitement of automobile joy-riding, rather than from a criminal intent or any desire to profit financially therefrom.

I know that the father of James Billingsly is sorely in need at this time of his help and assistance in his business, and

I believe that the two years' imprisonment already undergone by James Billingsly will have a most wholesome and deterrent effect upon his future conduct; that if he is granted a pardon he will become a useful, upright, and respected citizen."

The Board is also in receipt of letters from Hon. Miles B. Kitts, Mayor, City of Erie, and Hon. J. Denny O'Neil, State Commissioner of Highways, who ask that a pardon be granted the applicant in this case.

In view of the fact that the boy was only seventeen years of age at the time of the commission of this crime, that he has already served two years of his sentence, and the further fact that eminent citizens of the community ask for his release, the Board respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said James Billingsly.

Harrisburg, November 21, 1918.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor:

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 57, August Sessions, 1917, a certain James Rolin was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of assault and battery, rape and adultery, and was by said Court, on November 2, 1917, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than fifteen months nor more than eighteen months.

The said James Rolin, is twenty-eight year of age, a motorman by occupation, had been employed by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company for twelve years prior to his arrest.

The girl in the case had been a frequent visitor to the house of the defendant, giving music lessons to his wife, and it is charged that on several occasions he took this girl to a hotel in Philadelphia and there had intercourse with her, as the girl admits, on at least three different occasions. It appears from the evidence in the case that the girl was large and well developed, and apparently much over the age of sixteen years.

There is a numerously signed petition on file with the Board by citizens of the community in which these people resided, and who are familiar with all the circumstances surrounding the case, which reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, citizens of the City and County of Philadelphia, respectfully represent to Your Honorable Board that we have known James Rolin for a number of years, and have always found him to be a thoroughly honest, industrious, and law abiding man in all the relations of life.

We are familiar with the nature of the charge brought against him, and in view of our knowledge of the man and his reputation, we have no hesitation in appealing to Your Honorable Board, and requesting that a pardon be granted to the said James Rolin."

The wife of James Rolin has been ill for the past few years, and on account of internal trouble cannot do very much work. Since her husband has been in prison she has tried hard to support herself, but in doing so she has suffered a great deal, and on account of working her condition has become worse, and at the present time her physical condition is such that she should not continue working. Her husband always supported her, and if he is pardoned, he will be able to support and take care of her in the future, and if she is not compelled to do hard work, her condition is likely to grow better instead of worse.

Under all the circumstances in the case, and in view of the fact that the prisoner has already served more than a year of his sentence, the Board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said James Rolin.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Berks, to No. 49, December Sessions, 1912, a certain James Hohl was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of robbery, and was by the said Court, on October 26, 1912, sentenced to pay a fine of $10, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than two years and six months nor more than ten years.

The prisoner was released from the Penitentiary on parole after serving the minimum term of his sentence, and violated his parole by leaving the State without permission. While on parole he enlisted in the service of the United States, and while on duty at Fort Jay, N. Y., he absented himself from the fort for a period of eighteen days. He was arrested and returned to Fort Jay as a deserter. He was tried by Court Martial; found not guilty of desertion, but was found guilty of absenting himself without leave, and was sentenced to two months' confinement in the Fort Hamilton Guard House. While there he was informed that he would have to be returned to serve his unexpired maximum term in the Eastern Penitentiary, and on January 13, 1917, the morning the officer from the Penitentiary was to arrive, defendant endeavored to escape. He was shot in the back by a sentry, injuring his spine. Ever since then both legs have been paralyzed; there is but slight movement in the legs, and he is unable to stand. He has to be lifted from the bed to a wheel chair, and large bed sores have developed owing to the loss of nutrition from the deficient nerve supply.

In view of the circumstances surrounding the case that the applicant will be a hopeless cripple for life, and will never again be able to walk, the board respectfully recommends that clemency be shown and that a pardon be granted to the said James Hohl.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Chester, to No. 78, April Sessions, 1916, Rollin E. Clevensline was convicted upon a certain indictment charging him with the crime of embezzlement, and was by the said Court, on June 20, 1916, sentenced to pay a fine of $100, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Chester County Jail for a term of one year.

The applicant was charged with the crime of embezzling certain moneys coming into his hands as tax collector. His contention was that the money had never been collected. The applicant had always persisted that there must be a mistake in the books, and that they showed no such balances as were claimed. No witnesses were called on the part of the Commonwealth to show that he had failed to credit a single payment of tax which he had received. Very shortly after his actual commitment a petition for parole was filed and granted by the court.

The Board is convinced that there was no intention on the part of the applicant to misappropriate any funds, but that it was a case of incorrect bookkeeping rather than any criminal intent on his part, and the bondsmen have refunded the entire deficiency alleged.

The petitioner had never been suspected of any dishonesty or irregular dealing; he has been a Justice of the Peace in the community where he resided for many years, and his offense has resulted in no loss of money to the municipality, and after thoroughly reviewing all the facts brought to our attention in this matter respectfully recommend that the pardon asked for be granted to the said petitioner Rollin E. Clevensline.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of York, to No. 87, August Sessions, 1912, a certain Walter Slavovich was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of rape and assault and battery, and was by the said court, on October 22, 1912, sentenced to pay a fine of five dollars, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than twelve years nor more than fifteen years.

There seems to be some doubt as to whether this case was one of rape, or simply fornication. At the trial the woman claimed that the petitioner carried her, with one hand over her mouth and with his other arm about her shoulders, for a considerable distance through a woods, and through a field covered with briars and stones. There was nothing to show that she had a single mark upon her body, nor that the clothes she wore at the time were torn, the prisoner's contention being that she approached him and secured from him the sum of two dollars to permit the intercourse.

No protest has been filed with the Board by the District Attorney, or by anyone else residing in the community where the crime was committed.

It appears to the Board that with so much doubt in the case the imprisonment of six years already suffered is sufficient punishment, and, therefore, respectfully recommends that a pardon be now granted to the said Walter Slavovich.

Lynn was convicted upon two indictments charging him with the crime of larceny and receiving stolen goods, and was by the said court, on September 20, 1917, sentenced, in the aggregate, to pay a fine of twelve and one-half cents, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for a term of not less than two years nor more than three years.

The jewelry taken by the applicant was restored to the owner, and it is now urged that petitioner's aid and assistance is greatly needed in the support of his mother. He has an uncle of considerable means residing in California, who has agreed to give him employment immediately upon his release.

The Board is of the opinion that the prisoner has atoned for his crime by the imprisonment already suffered, and with the assurance that he will leave the State of Pennsylvania immediately upon his release and be given permanent employment, respectfully recommends that a pardon be now granted to the said James V. Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, December 18, 1918.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 725, November Sessions, 1917, Charles H. Russell, James S. Van Vranken and William S. Jones were convicted upon a certain indictment charging them with the crime of "embezzlement by employes of a municipal corporation," and were by the said Court, on February 20, 1918, each sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than one year nor more than three years.

The facts show that the petitioners' conduct during their imprisonment for a period of nine months has been exemplary. They have always borne a good reputation; they are old and infirm, and the time already served is very much and fast impairing their now deteriorated health. The law unquestionably fixes punishment for crimes, yet where it is shown that in consequence of the extreme age of the persons imprisonment is gradually undermining their already impaired health justice will not, nor does it contemplate an exactness of sentence. The prisoners have made restitution, and taking all things into consideration expiated their crime.

Upon request, the prison physician, Dr. H. W. Hassell, makes the following report as to the physical condition of the three petitioners:

"James H. Russell, B-9060, has been under treatment since May, 1918, for Chronic Rheumatism, with acute attacks in which the joints are painful, and there is marked swelling of the left ankle.

"On account of his age (66 years), and the history of the case, and owing to the fact that this condition has existed for some years, I consider his chances of recovery are not very good."

"James S. Van Vranken, B-9061, states his age to be 60 years and looks much older. He has chronic bronchitis, and is markedly anaemic. His heart sounds are feeble at times, and there is oedema of the legs. His physical condition is markedly impaired."

"William S. Jones, B-9062, has a pulse of high tension; the veins of his forehead are protruding and tortuous. He is 64 years of age, and is under treatment for Rheumatism.

"These prisoners are all undergoing simile changes; their physical condition is that of men much older than their real age."

The Board is assured that responsible persons have pledged themselves to look after the petitioners and to provide for them, if practicable, with employment, and to aid them in whatever manner found necessary and expedient.

In view of the fact that the prisoners have made restitution of the entire amount of funds embezzled, and taking into consideration their respective ages and physical condition; that they had no previous criminal record, the Board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore respectfully recommends that pardons now be granted to the petitioners, Charles H. Russell, James S. Van Vranken and William S. Jones.

Respectfully submitted,

Lieutenant Governor.

Board of Pardons.

Harrisburg, December 18, 1918.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Luzerne, to No. 2, February Sessions, 1914, a certain John Wilkinson was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of statutory rape, and was by the said Court, on February 7, 1914, sentenced to pay a fine of $1,000, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a period of not less than ten years nor more than fifteen years.

The Board is in receipt of a letter from Honorable J. B. Woodward, the judge who tried the case, which we quote below:

"I am asked to write a letter favoring the pardon of John Wilkinson, sentenced by me in February, 1914, to a term of fifteen years' imprisonment in the Penitentiary for rape committed on his daughter, a child about ten years old.

"This was the first serious case that came before me after I took my seat on the Bench in January, 1914, and the enormity of the crime impressed me so much that I gave him the full term allowed by law for the crime. The prosecutrix was a married sister, with whom the little girl lived. The jury convicted him on the testimony of the child, who testified that the crime was actually consummated, and the testimony of the doctor, who corroborated her. Since then she has told me that there was no actual penetration, but merely an attempt on his part to commit the offense, and a doctor who has examined her lately corroborates this statement.

"I do not attach much importance to this, as the attempt would be almost as bad as the consummation, but the defendant in his own behalf testified that he had been drinking and had no recollection of the matter at all. He is a weak character mentally and physically, and his family, including the sister who prosecuted him, have now relented towards him and wish to have him pardoned. He has now served almost four years. He has never been in trouble before, and his family, who at the trial were very bitter against him, now believe that he has been punished to such an extent that he will reform in his drinking habits and make a better citizen. Under these circumstances I will not oppose a pardon."

The Board has on file numerous letters from citizens of the community where the crime was committed, all asking, in strong terms, that favorable consideration be given this application.

In view of the fact that there is no protest against the issuance of a pardon to the petitioner; that the trial judge, who is familiar with all the facts and circumstances attending the case, is favorably inclined towards Executive clemency at this time, the Board therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon be now granted to the said John Wilkinson.

Respectfully submitted,

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Bucks, September Sessions, 1917, a certain Guiseppi Camaroto was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of assault and battery with intent to kill, and was by the said court, on September 17, 1917, sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a period of not less than two years nor more than four years.

The crime in this case consisted of the prisoner shooting a fellow countryman, both being Italians. The shot took effect in the upper part of the thigh of the victim. The defendant was admitted to bail, and while the trial was pending he was drafted into the service of the United States. However, upon being examined at the cantonment he was found to be suffering with an incurable malady consequently discharged.

Below we quote the report of the penitentiary physician, Dr. H. W. Hassell, as submitted to the Board:

"I hereby submit report on the physical condition of Guiseppi Camaroto, B-9313, an inmate of this institution.

At times he has had bloody urine, and complains of pains in the back. The urine shows traces of Albumen, many leukocytes, and few red blood cells; micro organisms many. It is a case of pyelitis or inflammation of the pelvis of the kidneys."

The District Attorney of Bucks County, Hon. H. H. Keller, writes to the Board as follows:

"I am informed by Mr. DuBois and Judge Ryan and the District Attorney, before whom and by whom Camaroto was tried, have stated in writing (their statements being of record), that they have no objection to the granting of the pardon, because of the physical condition of Camaroto (Pyelonephritis of congenital origin), and for the same reason, I, as District Attorney of Bucks County, have no objection to the granting of Camaroto's application."

In view of the condition of applicant's health, and taking into consideration the fact that the crime committed did not terminate seriously, the Board is of the opinion that the punishment already inflicted is ample to satisfy the ends of justice, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Guiseppi Camaroto.

Respectfully submitted,

FRANK B. McCLAIN,
Lieutenant Governor.

Harrisburg, December 18, 1918.

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Chester, to No. 12, August Term, 1917, a certain Ernest Reynolds was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of burglary and larceny, and was by the said court, on August 27, 1917, sentenced to pay a fine of $25, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than two years nor more than three years.

The crime of which he was convicted consisted of entering the store of the Pavnall Hardware Company, and taking therefrom several revolvers, rifles, knives and cartridges, amounting in value to about $40.00. This property was secured by the officers and returned to the hardware company.

The prosecutor, the manager of the store which was entered, and the officers who made the arrest, unite in this petition for pardon.

The petitioner was about fifteen years of age when he committed the offense for which he was sentenced. He had no previous criminal record. His mother is a widow who recently passed through much trouble, all the members of her family were ill with the late epidemic, and at the present time she is greatly in need of the petitioner's services and aid.

The judge who tried the case, Hon. J. Frank E. Hause, writes to the Board as follows:

"I beg to say that if in your judgment this applicant should receive favorable consideration in view of all the facts, I shall be glad to know that relief is extended to him. I have nothing to urge against the application."

In view of the fact that the prisoner was very young when he committed this offense; that he has already suffered one year and four months imprisonment, the Board is of the opinion that the ends of justice have been amply satisfied by the punishment already undergone, and therefore recommends that a pardon be now granted to the said applicant, Ernest Reynolds.

Respectfully submitted,

His Excellency, Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Dauphin, to No. 41, September Sessions, 1917, a certain Theodore Miller was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of larceny, and was by the said Court, on September 28, 1917, sentenced to pay a fine of $5, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than two years nor more than four years.

The crime consisted of taking a pocketbook of the value of $10.00 from a lady on the street in the City of Harrisburg.

The defendant is now just 21 years of age. He has no previous criminal record. His mother is sickly, and is greatly in need of the help of her son.

The Board is of the opinion that the ends of justice will be met by the punishment already suffered by the prisoner, and in view of the fact that his mother needs his services, and that he can secure employment immediately upon his release, we consider this a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore respectfully recommend that a pardon be now granted to the said Theodore Miller.

Respectfully submitted,

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery in and for the County of Lackawanna, to No. 16, December Term, 1914, a certain Ciccio Greco, alias Frank Greco, was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of manslaughter, and was by the said Court, on February 12, 1915, sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than nine years nor more than twelve years.

The District Attorney who tried the case, Hon. George W. Maxey, writes, inter alia, as follows:

"Cresco was indicted for murder, and on the tenth day of February, 1915, he was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced by Honorable A. T. Searle, specially presiding, to a minimum term of nine years in the penitentiary.

At the time he was sentenced, my impression was that the sentence was a rather severe one under the circumstances, at least as measured by sentences in other cases in this county where defendants have been convicted of manslaughter. I expected that Greco would receive a sentence of about five years.

In view of the above and of the allegation that Greco is now suffering from tuberculosis, I would have no objection to his being granted a pardon. My judgment is that he has sufficiently expiated his crime."

The appeal for clemency in this case is based on the physical condition of the applicant. We quote below from the letter of the prison physician, Dr. H. W. Hassell:

"Ciccio, alias Frank Greco, alias Francesco Greco, E-7583, an inmate of this institution, is a case of Pulmonary Tuberculosis. There is a cavity at the apex of the right lung, with harsh respirations over the lung. He has protruding eye balls and enlarged thyroid glands. The heart is dilated and pulse feeble.

This combination of cardiac disease with pulmonary tuberculosis makes a bad prognosis, and the case may terminate fatally at any time."

In view of the condition of the prisoner's health, and taking into consideration the statement of the District Attorney, as above quoted, the Board is of the opinion that this is a proper case for the exercise of Executive clemency, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said Ciccio Greco, alias Frank Greco.

Respectfully submitted,

Lieutenant Governor.

Sir: In the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Philadelphia, to No. 448, December

Sessions, 1914, Girardo DeDonato was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of assault and battery to ravish, and was by the said court, on September 22, 1914, sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than five years nor more than seven years.

The District Attorney's Office makes the following statement in regard to this case:

"The prosecutrices in this case are Annie and Mary Carrara, the latter, at the time of the commission of the crime being under 16 years of age. From an investigation made by the officer in charge of the case it was learned that the two Carrara girls, together with two or three other girls of about the same age, had been in the habit of going into stores and shops in the southern section of the city and practically offering themselves for the purpose of prostitution. A number of arrests were made, and the defendant in this case was one of those arrested."

The applicant in this case is now in his seventy-fifth year. At the time of the trial he had no attorney to defend him, and being unable to speak the English language he was handicapped in defending himself.

In view of the fact that the reputation of the prosecutrix for chastity is not good, as stated by the district attorney's office, and taking into consideration the advanced age of the petitioner the Board is of the opinion that the more than two years' imprisonment already suffered for the offense is sufficient punishment, and therefore, respectfully recommends that a pardon be now granted to the said Gerardo DeDonato.

Respectfully submitted,

Sir: In the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the County of Berks, to No. 85, September Sessions, 1911, a certain William Barnes was convicted upon an indictment charging him with the crime of larceny and receiving stolen goods, and was by the said Court, on September 12, 1911, sentenced to pay a fine of $50, costs of prosecution, and to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of not less than 9 months nor more than 3 years. He was paroled on July 3, 1912, when he violated his parole, and was sentenced by the Philadelphia Court, upon conviction of the crime of Larceny, on June 14, 1915, to undergo imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for a term of from 2 years to 3 years. In consequence of the commission of the second offense and the sentence thereon is practically a sentence of 4 years and 6 months to 6 years, which appears to the Board to be out of all proportion to the enormity of the crime.

The crime consisted of the defendant, with three others, hiring an automobile and using the same in taking a "joy" ride. After keeping the machine in their possession for about four days the companions of petitioner ran away, and Barnes then notified the owner of the machine to come and get same, which was returned undamaged. There is no statement as to what became of his companions in the crime.

The mother of the applicant is an aged woman, in ill health, and greatly in need of his aid and assistance.

After considering all the facts and circumstances in this case the Board is of the opinion that the imprisonment already suffered by the applicant is sufficient punishment for the commission of the first offense, and therefore respectfully recommends that a pardon now issue to the said William Barnes.

REPORT OF THE AUDITORS OF THE PHILADELPHIA
SAVING FUND SOCIETY FOR THE YEAR, 1917.

The subscribers, duly appointed by the President Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County, to audit and settle the accounts of The Philadelphia Saving Fund Society, under the provisions of the third section of the supplement to the "Act" incorporating the said Society, approved March 15, 1824, having been duly qualified, respectfully report:

That, in the performance of the duties assigned them, they have audited and settled the books and accounts of The Philadelphia Saving Fund Society for the year ending the thirty-first day of December, 1917, and have examined and ascertained the amount of the bonds and mortgages, real estate, public loans, railroad loans, and the other evidences of the property and effects of the said society, and agreeably thereto have made out the subjoined statement, which agrees with the books at that date, and exhibits the situation and condition of the said The Philadelphia Saving Fund Society on the first day of January, 1918.

In compliance with the requirements of the 19th section of the Act of Assembly passed March 20, 1918, entitled "An Act to Improve the Navigation of the River Lehigh," I would respectfully report that the tolls received on the Lehigh Navigation during the year 1917 amount to twenty-five thousand, seven hundred ninety-seven and 16-100 dollars ($25,797.16), according to the returns made to this office.

Very truly yours,

HENRY LODGE,
Assistant Secretary.

State of Pennsylvania,
City of Philadelphia.

Before me, the subscriber, a Notary Public of the County of Philadelphia and State of Pennsylvania, personally appeared on this seventeenth day of December, A. D. 1917, Henry Lodge, Assistant Secretary of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, who being duly sworn according to law, did depose and say that the above statement is just and true to the best of his knowledge, information and belief.

HENRY LODGE.

Affirmed and subscribed before me the day and year aforesaid.

R. V. PIERCE,
Notary Public.

My commission expires February 21, 1919.

REPORT OF THE HEALTH INSURANCE COMMISSION.

Gentlemen: Your Commission was appointed under the Act of July 25, 1917, and directed to investigate:

1. "Sickness and accident of employees and their families, not compensated under the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act of 1915, the loss caused to individuals and to the public thereby, and the causes thereof;
2. The adequacy of the present methods of treatment and care of such sickness and injury;
3. The adequacy of the present methods of meeting the losses caused by such sickness or injury, either by mutual or stock insurance companies or associations, by fraternal or other mutual benefit associations, by employers and employees jointly, by employees alone, or otherwise;
4. The influence of working conditions on the health of employed persons;
5. Methods for the prevention of such sickness,—all with a view to recommending ways and means for the better protection of employees from sickness and accident and their effects, and the improvement of the health of employed persons, and their families in the Commonwealth." (1).

WILLIAM T. RAMSEY,
JOHN M. FLYNN.

We interpret these directions as imposing on us the duty of investigating the extent and nature of sickness among wage workers, and its economic and social effects, with a view toward making recommendations for the improvement of existing conditions.

In England and in many other countries of Europe there are now in force systems of health insurance under which wage workers are protected against the sickness risk. The development of such insurance in the various countries has followed the growth of that system of protecting workers against the economic consequences of industrial accidents which this state has embodied in the Workmen's Compensation Act of 1915. We realize that the principal object of our appointment, as of the appointment of similar Commissions in eight other states, was to obtain a report on the advisability of taking in this state this next step in social insurance, the insurance of the employe against sickness.

The Commission was appointed on the seventeenth of October, 1917. The fifteen months which have since elapsed have enabled us to gather much information relating to the extent and nature of sickness among wage workers in Pennsylvania, its economic and social effects and the adequacy of the present methods both of treatment and of meeting the losses caused by such sickness. But the time and money at our disposal have not been sufficient to enable us to examine thoroughly, in the light of these facts, the sickness insurance systems in force in other countries or to consider the numerous modifications of these systems which have been proposed in this country. We are therefore not in a position to embody in this report definite recommendations concerning the legislative or other action which should be taken to meet the problems presented by sickness among the wage workers of the state.

The Commission might have assumed that the situation created by sickness among employed wage earners in a great industrial state like Pennsylvania is a serious one, and might have expended the appropriation of $5,000 in meetings called to hear the advocates and opponents of the various remedies which have been suggested. But all of us were, and are, unanimously opposed to such a procedure. We believe, and we submit, that the interesting and important nature of the facts relating to sickness among the wage workers of the state which we are now prepared to lay before you, justifies the belief that a proposition of such moment and magnitude as that involving the general insurance of all wage workers against sickness can be properly passed upon only in the light of adequate knowledge of existing conditions.

It is generally realized that the Workmen's Compensation Act deals with a large subject of great difficulty and importance. Some idea of the extent of the problems which we have been directed to investigate may be obtained by contrasting the amount of disability among employees due to industrial accidents with the amount due to sickness from other causes.

In 1916 there were 255,616 industrial accidents in Pennsylvania and 3,026,371 working days were lost through such accidents. In the same year approximately 16,800,000 working days were lost on account of illness not due to industrial accident. Measured by loss of productive capacity and earning power sickness from other causes produces a problem between five and seven times as great as that produced by disability resulting from industrial accidents.

For the reason just stated, almost our first action after our organization was to determine to expend our appropriation in collating facts already gathered by public and private agencies and as far as possible in instituting and carrying out original investigations into sickness conditions among wage workers in this state.

The work of the investigating staff of the Commission was begun in May, 1918, and has been carried on under the immediate supervision of the Committee on Plan of Work and Investigation.

The results of the investigation are set forth in detail in the report of this committee attached as Appendix A. An examination of this report will show that we have not only received the active co-operation of Federal and State departments and officials, but that we have also had great material assistance from a number of private organizations now dealing with the social and economic results of poverty and sickness. It is manifest that the sum of $5,000 is wholly inadequate to make extensive original sickness surveys. The report of the committee contains the results of several studies made at the suggestion and under the general direction of our investigating staff, without expense to the commission. The cost of making through our own staff such original investigations as these, would have amounted to many times the appropriation available.

It is unnecessary to enter here into any detailed analysis of the report of the committee. We desire, however, to point out that among other things the facts obtained show that in Pennsylvania:

I. In regard to the extent of sickness among employees:

1. More than 385,000 employees in the State are constantly suffering from illness; approximately 140,000 from severe, and 245,000 from slighter illnesses.
2. The average loss of working time among employees in the State is at least six days each year because of sickness.
3. Pennsylvania stood highest of any State in the Union in the percentage of men rejected for physical reasons in the draft of April, 1917. Of her young men between twenty-one and thirty-one years of age, 46.67 per cent. were rejected. The average for the country as a whole was 29.11 per cent. and one State had but 14.13 per cent. of her men rejected.
4. Death rates in Pennsylvania are higher than those for the registration area of the country as a whole. The infant death rate—"that most sensitive index to sanitary conditions" is highly excessive in many parts of the State. It was higher in 1917 in Philadelphia than in any other city of similar size in the country. Pittsburgh ranked second among cities of its size, having an infant death rate of 116 per 1,000. The State as a whole had an infant death rate of 1916 of 114 per 1,000, while that for the whole registration area was 101. In the State and in Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh, the infant death rate is increasing instead of decreasing.

(1) Laws of Pennsylvania, 1917—P. 1199.

II. In regard to Losses due to Sickness of Employees:

1. The losses to employees consist of (a) loss of wages (b) cost of care (c) reduced earning power and standards of living.

Averages do not measure the loss to individuals, because of the uneven distribution of the sickness burden. In one of the sickness surveys in an industrial district in Philadelphia each wage earner sick in 1917 lost 30 days; in another sickness survey each sick wage earner lost 67 days; one-third of the total time lost in this group was lost by nine men and three per cent. of the total illness cost in this study was borne by one-seventh of the entire number of families. In a study of working women one-fourth of the total cost of medical aid was borne by ten of the women.

- a. At the nominal rate of $2.00 a day the wage loss to employees of this State every year because of illness is at least $33,000,000.
- b. The tendency to secure needed medical care has a direct relation to income of the family. As the family income increases, the amount spent on medical care increases. The average cost of medical care for every employees' family is between $30.00 and $50.00 a year. In the Visiting Nurse Study this average was $47.00. Medical charity given in many instances cannot be considered as in any way an ultimate solution of the illness problem in a country claiming democratic ideals.
- c. Because most wage earners cannot afford to be ill, many develop chronic illnesses and greatly reduce their future earning capacity; this reacts on society by a direct loss of productive power and prevents the growth of a vigorous citizenship by making it impossible to maintain family standards which permit proper nourishment, care, and opportunity for the children.
2. The losses to employers consist of (a) decrease in production due to the absence of sick wage earners or to the lessened efficiency of half-sick workers; (b) cost of labor turn-over.
- a. Employees in the State lose at least 16,800,000 days' work annually because of sickness, and large numbers of actually sick men and women are at work every day. These facts, while not an exact measure of the loss to industry, give an indication of the extent to which production suffers. During the influenza epidemic, anthracite coal production dropped behind 500,000 tons in a few days. There is constant limitation of production because of constant illness, not spectacular, and therefore not seriously considered.
- b. Four large industrial establishments state that it costs on an average from $30.00—$50.00 to hire and train a new workman. The greater the labor turnover, the greater the cost of production; the greater the amount of sickness, the greater the labor turnover. Progressive employers are engaging industrial physicians and nurses, opening dispensaries and establishing sick benefit funds for the practical reason; it pays to see to it that sick workmen receive care.
3. The losses to the community consist of (a) money loss (b) social loss.
- a. The State spends over $6,000,000 every year directly for the treatment of sickness. In addition, 4,000,000 is spent for the maintenance of institutions for the care of defectives, a large part of which expenditure is undoubtedly made necessary by the neglect of sickness, and its consequences. Beside the ten State Hospitals for miners, 175 other hospitals reported State Board of Charities in 1916, that 57 per cent. of their in-patients had been treated free and 40 per cent. of their hospital days had been free days. Illness is no less a burden upon private funds. Aside from the multitude of dispensaries, hospitals, convalescent homes, visiting nurse societies and other charitable and semi-charitable agencies especially for the care of the sick, organized relief societies invariably report illness to be the most frequent disability in the families coming to them for aid.

- b. The loss from illness to the community is not only in money and in reduced efficiency of the employees themselves, but involves the citizenship of the future. Growing children, forced to endure a period of under-nourishment because of straightened family resources when the bread-winner is ill—mothers who receive no prenatal care, working until the last minute before confinement and as soon thereafter as they can "stand on their feet"—babies who are not given a fair start in life—all these mean not only a present problem, but a serious and unjust handicap for the generations to come.

There is no more important problem today than safeguarding the health of the wage-earning women; not only for her own sake, but for the sake of her children, whose task it will be to make real the ideals for which our men have been laying down their lives.

III. In Regard to Present Methods of Meeting these Losses.

1. Facilities for medical care among wage earners are not satisfactory, whether considered from the standpoint of extent, cost, or proportion of persons receiving care in time of sickness.

Hospital accommodations in the State average little more than one-half the standard minimum of five beds per 1,000 of the population.

Even if good medical care were available and adequate, most employees could not afford to pay for it. Fees are not large, but wages have not kept pace with the soaring cost of living, save in a few groups. Most employees are unable to save toward emergencies. The result is that many of them fail to receive medical care of any sort, and that many more do not receive care until the illness has passed the stage when it could be quickly remedied.

Approximately a fourth of those actually disabled by illness never receive medical care, and a larger percentage of those ill but still trying to work, are without attention.

The startling number of long chronic illnesses found among the 12,000 people in one Philadelphia survey (53.5 per cent. lasting more than one year), together with the low proportion of those ill who are receiving treatment, makes obvious the fact that neglected sick men often become chronically disabled, and that half sick men are struggling to keep at work because they cannot afford to be ill.

2. Insurance protection against sickness is found among approximately 30 per cent. of employees, but seemingly least often among those who need it most. Illness, is a thing of chance, and most employees take the chance of escaping it. When the sickness comes, they are stranded, after savings and credit have been exhausted. The lower the wage group, the less likely the insurance protection. Nor does the existing insurance in most instances meet the real need. It seldom provides good medical care and cash benefits, and is limited by many restrictive rules.

One-half to three-fourths of existing sickness insurance is carried through the sick benefit funds of the lodges or fraternal. In most of these, sickness insurance is secondary to life insurance. As a rule, no medical benefits are given, and the cash benefit is but $5.00 a week for thirteen weeks in any single year, payable only after a man has been ill more than two weeks. Trade union funds rarely afford better protection. Commercial health insurance is costly and subject to many restrictive rules.

Establishment funds afford better protection, but are relatively few in number and exist only among the most progressive employers where health hazards are frequently reduced to the minimum.

IV. In regard to the influence of working conditions on health:

1. Industry is clearly responsible for a large proportion of illness among employees.
2. Investigations of the industries of Pennsylvania have shown that "no other State has so widely a variety of those industrial processes which carry with them danger to the workers either because of poison in the form of fumes, liquids, or dusts, or because of mechanically irritating dusts which injure the throat and lungs."
3. Seventy-nine per cent. of all the deaths of persons of working age in 1916 were from diseases whose connection with important Pennsylvania industries has been established.
4. Death rates among persons of working age in Pennsylvania from degenerative diseases due in large measure to certain kinds of occupation, are steadily increasing.

V. In regard to Sickness Prevention:

1. Fully one-half of existing sickness could be eliminated if proper preventive measures were taken.
2. At present from 70 to 75 per cent. of the school children in Pennsylvania are physically defective and for the most part the defects are correctable if treated in time.
3. A large number of communities in the State have no active health work, much less an adequate appropriation for health activities.
4. Nothing so stimulates preventive effort as definite responsibility for the losses entailed. Preventive measures proved inadequate to meet the problem of industrial accident until stimulated by the enactment of Workmen's Compensation Laws. This form of social insurance has steadily reduced the number of accidents and the appeals to charity from families affected and has proved practical in administration.

VI. Our own and other investigations prove that—

1. The responsibility for illness rests on three groups: The community, industry and the individual. At present these three groups are meeting the losses from illness in wholly unequal shares; the burden on the individual is often disastrous and out of proportion to his individual responsibility.

Some means of a just distribution of this burden should be found.

2. There is in Pennsylvania today urgent need for a program of health measures which will (a) Provide for the efficient care of employees and their families when actually ill, and (b) Provide preventive measures which will in so far as it is possible, prevent illness and increase the opportunity for health and vigor in the citizenship of the State.

The problem which your honorable bodies asked us to investigate was the problem, not of the man who will not work, or the man who cannot get work, but the problem of the employed worker who for a longer or shorter period becomes incapacitated through illness. Other causes of distress such as intemperance, low wages, unemployment, ignorance or extravagance, serious though they are, do not concern us, save as they are connected with the problem of illness. The nature of that problem and the tragic results which may come when it is not solved, are shown by innumerable life histories set forth in the records of our charitable institutions.

The story of a family whom we will call the Callahan family, well illustrates a typical course of events: John Callahan was a tailor, who had worked for a prominent Philadelphia firm for several years. He was the father of four small children. His wages were not large, and as he was trying to add to his small savings, he felt he could not afford to be sick, even when he contracted tuberculosis, due undoubtedly in part to the industrial conditions in which he worked. He denied that he was sick and dosed himself continuously with a patent medicine, warranted to "cure all ills." Finally, after a bad hemorrhage, he gave up, and when examined he was diagnosed as an advanced state of tuberculosis. Although his fraternal paid him a sick benefit and in addition took up a collection for him, no adequate help was available and the medical attention had come too late. The family, up to this time always self-supporting, became dependent upon a charitable agency. The children were all young and Mrs. Callahan could not leave them to go to work. Two of them were found to be tubercular, and Mrs. Callahan was pronounced a quiescent case of tuberculosis. John Callahan was only thirty-eight and the family had no resources for the long future that loomed ahead. He was sent to Mount Alto, where little hope is given for his recovery; during the past three years the family has been cared for entirely by private philanthropy at an expense of many hundreds of dollars. The oldest child is now only eleven. Meanwhile the State supports Mr. Callahan in a public sanatorium. Has this been cheap for public or private funds, or for society at large? The community has lost a self-supporting industrious citizen; industry has lost the productive energy of a good worker; Mr. Callahan has lost his earning power and his home, the children have suffered, the normal family unit has been permanently broken up.

The Callahans are not unlike hundreds of other families. The road from independence to dependence is being traveled every day in this State by hundreds of our fellow-citizens. It is the State's responsibility to see that the problems of sickness are reduced to a minimum. Your Commission believes that the best way to close this sickness high-road to poverty and dependency is to make available immediate and adequate medical care for sickness cases and to prevent the financial burden of sickness from falling entirely on the person least able to bear it—the sick wage worker. In some way this burden should be distributed among all wage workers, or shared by industry and by the community as a whole. How the distribution should be accomplished, whether by an extension of existing voluntary insurance agencies, or by a system based on some modification of the English or other European plans, we are not prepared to say. In the time and with the money at our disposal we have, as stated, ascertained the main facts pertaining to sickness among wage workers in this State, the present methods of care of such sickness, and its economic consequences.

In the opinion of your Commission the next step should be to take the facts set forth in Appendix A of this report, and in the light of these facts and any others that may be obtained, to make a thorough investigation of existing and proposed plans for sickness insurance of employees, with a view to making definite recommendations at the earliest practical moment compatible with the nature of the subject.

The work of examining proposed systems of sickness insurance, of holding public hearings in various parts of the State, and of obtaining the views of representatives of the interests especially affected, is one which will require a commission composed of persons able to give a great deal of their time to the work. Many of the systems advocated directly affect not only the wage workers but also the employers and the medical profession, all of which groups should be represented in the membership of the Commission.

We, therefore, recommend that instead of continuing this Commission, your honorable bodies pass an act providing for the appointment of a Commission of eleven persons to carry on and complete the task of dealing with one of the most vital of the social and industrial problems of our times; the Commission to consist of three members from the Senate, three from the House of Representatives, and five other members to be appointed by the Governor at large.

We append hereto, as appendix B, a copy of a bill providing for the appointment of such a Commission as we suggest.

We respectfully urge the prompt passage of this bill. We have secured an investigating staff which could not be easily replaced, and which we could not hope to retain should there be any considerable delay. Moreover, constant and steady work on the part of the Commission, not from a period subsequent to the final adjournment of your honorable bodies, but from the present time, will alone in our opinion insure the completion of the task so that any recommendations may be thoroughly digested before the meeting of the Legislature of 1921.

Finally, we hope that the appropriation of $25,000 which we have suggested will met with your approval. The work of the investigating staff should be continued, to which must be added a study of constitutionality and a thorough actuarial inquiry into the cost of the various insurance systems which it will be the duty of the Commission to examine, while the Commission will have to hold a very considerable number of public hearings and executive sessions. In this connection we desire to point out that the Commission charged with the duty of investigating industrial accidents on whose report the Workmen's Compensation Act was adopted received $19,800 for its expenses. The subject of sickness insurance is, as has been indicated, one of greater magnitude, and, we believe, of greater difficulty.

To the Members of the Health Insurance Commission,
Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen: Your Committee on Plan of Work and Investigation present herewith their report.

January, 1919.

No. 414.

AN ACT

To establish a commission to investigate sickness and accident, not compensated under the Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, of employed persons and their families, and to make an appropriation for such commission.

Health Insurance Commission.

Section 1. Be it enacted, &c., That a commission is hereby created, to be known as the Health Insurance Commission, which shall investigate:

Subjects of Investigation.

1. Sickness and accidents of employees and their families, not compensated under the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act of one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, the loss caused to individuals and to the public thereby, and the causes thereof;
2. The adequacy of the present methods of treatment and care of such sickness and injury;
3. The adequacy of the present methods of meeting the losses caused by such sickness or injury, either by mutual or stock insurance companies or associations, by fraternal or other mutual benefit associations, by employers and employees jointly, by employees alone, or otherwise;
4. The influence of working conditions on the health of employed persons; and,
5. Methods for the prevention of such sickness—all with a view to recommending ways and means for the better protection of employees from sickness and accident and their effects, and the improvement of the health of employed persons and their families in the Commonwealth. The commission shall hold public hearings in different parts of the Commonwealth. The commission shall submit a full final report, including such recommendations for legislation, by bill or otherwise, as in its judgment may seem proper, to the General Assembly of nineteen hundred and nineteen.

Appointment of the Commission.

Section 2. Members. The commission shall consist of three Senators, to be appointed by the President Pro Tempore of the Senate; three Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives; and three other persons, not members of the General Assembly, to be appointed by the Governor.

Powers.

Section 3. Powers. The commission shall have power to elect its chairman and other officers, to examine witnesses, books, and papers respecting all matters to be investigated, to issue subpoenas, to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers, to administer oaths, to employ a secretary, experts in the matters to be investigated, and all necessary clerical and other assistants, to purchase books and all necessary supplies, and to rent halls for hearings. If the commission shall appoint from its members subcommittees to make an inquiry, the subcommittees shall have the same powers for the examination of persons and papers and to administer oaths as are herein conferred upon the commission. Salaries and other expenses of the commission shall be paid upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the commission, up to the amount appropriated by the General Assembly.

Co-operation.

Section 4. Co-operation of other departments. The Commissioner of Health and the Commissioner of Labor and Industry are hereby directed to co-operate with the commission, and to render it any such proper aid and assistance as in their judgment may not interfere with the proper conduct of their respective departments; and, as far as possible, rooms in buildings owned or leased by the Commonwealth shall be assigned to the commission for hearings or other purposes.

Appropriation.

Section 5. Appropriation. The sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby specifically appropriated for the actual and necessary expenses of the commission in the carrying out the provisions of this act. Payment of the money shall be on order of the chairman of the commission and on warrant of the Auditor General.

Approved—The 25th day of July, A. D. 1917.

PART I.

INTRODUCTORY SUMMARY

Section I.

History of the Commission.

During the session of 1917, the problems created by illness among the employees of the State were brought to the attention of the Pennsylvania Legislature by the introduction of a bill providing for a State-wide system of compulsory Health Insurance. Many persons and agencies interested in social welfare and progress had been instrumental in securing the passage of a Workmen's Compensation Law in the State, and had noted with great interest the success with which such laws, transplanted from Europe, had been put into operation in this country. Since Workmen's Compensation is but a part of a comprehensive social insurance system in force in many European countries, by means of which protection is afforded, not only against injury, but also against sickness, old age, and unemployment, the possibilities of successfully adopting other features of the system suggested itself to the authors of the bill.

The bill was carefully considered by the committee to which it was referred and a public hearing on it was largely attended.

The discussion at that time brought out strikingly the need for a thorough study of health conditions among employees and their families in the State, and resulted in the introduction of a bill creating an unsalaried Commission to conduct the investigation and present a report to the Legislature of 1919. This bill was passed as No. 414 of the Acts of the Legislature of 1917.

At the first meeting of the Commission, on December 28, 1917, in Philadelphia, Hon. Edward E. Beidleman was elected chairman, an Hon. Isadore Stern, secretary and treasurer. A Committee on Plan of Work, consisting of Dr. Lewis, Mr. Ramsey and Mr. Stern, was appointed and charged with the duty of formulating a plan for the work of the commission, taking into consideration the limited appropriation of $5,000 which had been made for the work.

This committee secured the advice of Mr. Miles M. Dawson and Dr. I. M. Rubinow, consulting actuaries, of New York, and on May 13, 1918, submitted a report, recommending a careful investigation by trained workers.

This report was accepted, and Dr. McAlister was made an additional member of the committee, which was authorized to open an office and engage an investigating staff to carry on the work for three months, until Aug 15th. At that time a preliminary report was to be submitted. The sum of $2,175 was appropriated for the expenses of the investigation during this period. The office of the commission, 802 Franklin Bank Building, was officially opened on May 15th, at which time the work of investigation was actively begun under the direction of Miss Edith Hilles.

At a meeting of the commission held on July 19th, an additional $2,100 was appropriated for continuing the investigation after August 15th, and the Committee on Plan of Work and Investigation was designated as the finance committee to act with the treasurer.

The preliminary report was submitted as planned and has been used as the suggestive basis for the remainder of the investigation. In December it was agreed to devote the remaining funds of the commission toward the completion of the report.

The members of the Committee on Plan of Work and Investigation have conferred from time to time with authorities on the subject of Health Insurance, and have been in constant touch with the work of the investigation.

PART I.

Section II.

Pennsylvania as an Industrial State.

The importance of Pennsylvania as an industrial State serves to emphasize the importance of the health of her wage earners. Health is the greatest asset of the wage earner, and no single factor has so close a relation to his efficiency. We realize this strikingly at the time of a great epidemic, when suddenly with no warning industry after industry is crippled, and output seriously lowered, because employees are ill. Yet constantly, year in and year out, preventable illness goes on, lowering efficiency, and output, causing great social and economic waste, and we pay little attention because it is not spectacular.

According to the census of 1910, Pennsylvania ranked second only to New York in the total number of persons gainfully employed in her industries, and in the value of her manufactured products. Persons gainfully occupied numbered 3,130,681, or more than one-tenth of the total number in this group in the United States. (1)

These gainfully occupied persons constituted more than half of the total population in Pennsylvania over ten years of age; and included 81 per cent. of the men, and 21 per cent. of the women of the State.

The proportion of men and women gainfully occupied was approximately one woman to four men. The occupations where women were most numerous were trade, with 16.1 per cent., manufacturing and mechanical, with 17.3 per cent., clerical, with 30 per cent., the professional group, with 42.1 per cent., and domestic and personal service, where 68 per cent. were women. This was the only group where the number of women exceeded the number of men. (2)

Some 23 per cent. of these gainfully occupied persons were classified, in 1910, as "laborers." The next largest group belonged to the classification "manufacturing and mechanical," which comprised 19.3 per cent. Agriculture, extraction of minerals, trade and domestic service included 11.6 per cent., 10.4 per cent., 9.3 per cent., and 9.6 per cent., respectively, and the other 16 per cent. were divided between transportation, public service and professional and clerical work. (3).

It is interesting to note the geographical distribution of these groups.

Forty-two per cent. of the gainfully occupied were in the twenty cities in the State having a population of over 25,000. Fifty-eight per cent. were distributed among the smaller cities, towns and the rural district. Seven hundred and eleven thousand, one hundred and sixty-nine, or 23 per cent., were centered in Philadelphia, and 233,637, or seven per cent., were in Pittsburgh.

The proportion of "laborers" employed in the Pittsburgh district far exceeded the proportion in the State as a whole. Thirty-nine and four-tenths per cent. of the workers in this district were classified as "laborers," while the percentage for the whole State was 23.1 and for the Philadelphia district, but 13.3. The influence of the steel mills is obvious.

On the other hand, 36.7 per cent. of the workers in Philadelphia were in the "manufacturing and mechanical" group, while in the State as a whole there were but 19.3 per cent., and in Pittsburgh less than 10 per cent. so classified.

It would be difficult to over-emphasize the industrial importance of Pennsylvania or the diversified character of her industries.

(1) A list of the Pennsylvania industries employing more than 100,000 persons is given as table I at the end of Part I.

(2) See table II at end of Part I.

(3) See Table III at end of Part I.

In 1914, before war time expansion began, 293,370 persons were employed in the great steel works, rolling mills and other branches of the metal trades in the State, and 124,936 in the textile industry. Of the 1,065,000 workers employed in mining in the United States in 1910, nearly a third, or 357,671, were found in the coal mines of Pennsylvania. It is well known that Pennsylvania leads all the States of the Union in mining and that practically the entire anthracite coal supply of the country, including certain smokeless varieties required by the navy, is produced within this State. A third of the bituminous coal as well comes from Pennsylvania. When the influenza epidemic reduced the coal output suddenly the whole country felt it, and it was to Pennsylvania that the country looked for increased production later, to make up this loss.

Besides producing coal, steel, ships, chemical products, hosiery, knit and woolen goods, Pennsylvania is doing her full share in feeding the nation. Approximately 65 per cent. of her land is devoted to agriculture, and in 1910 she produced farm crops valued at $147,000,000 and gave employment to 362,000 agricultural workers, or 11.6 per cent. of the total number of persons ten years and over gainfully occupied in the State.

During the great war tremendous demands were made upon Pennsylvania; it became a center for war contracts and for "essential industries." A quarter of all the war contracts let during the first months of our participation were located in Pennsylvania and Ohio. Pittsburgh, long recognized as the greatest center for the iron and steel industry, became the site of heavy artillery plants. In the east, along the Delaware River, approximately 100,000 men were employed in ship building. (1) It has been suggested that the Delaware be called "The Clyde of America," but the reply was made that the Clyde was instead "the Delaware of England," for the magnitude of American construction far exceeds the British output.

If merely the rate of increase of the decade 1900 to 1910 had been maintained between 1910 and 1918, by the latter year the number of gainfully occupied persons would have risen to 3,827,257. In reality, owing to the wartime expansion of Pennsylvania industries, a considerably higher number of persons are probably at work in the State at the present time. It is usually estimated that not more than 25 per cent. of the workers are proprietors of their own farms or businesses, so that it may safely be said that there are now more than 2,800,000 employees in the State.

To investigate the health problems of these 2,800,000 employees has been the task of the commission. In an industrial State the cost of sickness to industry alone, is tremendous. Output depends very largely on the individual worker, and the efficiency of the wage earner depends in large measure upon his health, and the health of his family. The United States Public Health Service estimates that each wage earner in the United States loses on an average nine days' work each year because of sickness. Physicians and sanitary experts tell us that at least half of this loss is due to illness which could be prevented. The facts which we have collected lead us to believe that large numbers of Pennsylvania employees are each year rendered incapable of working with their highest efficiency because of a general lack of proper measures for the preservation of public health and because of the neglect of many minor ailments which, untreated, often develop into serious disabilities. We know the stimulus to preventive effort and to prompt treatment in cases of industrial accidents which has come because of the enactment of Workmen's Compensation laws. Mr. Harry A. Mackey, chairman of the Pennsylvania Workmen's Compensation Board, stated in January 1917, "No statistician can ever calculate the tremendous advantage to the industries of Pennsylvania or to society generally, because of the fact that this law has furnished to nearly 200,000 men free medication so successfully administered that they have been cured of all resulting complications or infection—and their injuries have not become compensable."

If the commission can suggest methods which will reduce the time lost by Pennsylvania workers through sickness, and which will make more nearly possible the maintenance of proper health standards, it will not only have given valuable help to the industrial world, but will have made a permanent contribution to the character of our citizenship.

PART I.

Section III

Work of the Investigating Staff.

The general scope of the investigation possible was determined on the one hand by the commission's requirement of a preliminary report on August 15th, to be used as a basis in deciding whether or not to continue the work beyond that date, and on the other hand by the five general lines of study outlined by the act creating the commission and used by the staff as a foundation for all work:

1. Sickness and accident of employees and their families not covered by workmen's compensation.
2. Loss resulting from sickness to individuals and the public.
3. Adequacy of the present methods of meeting the financial loss from illness and giving medical treatment and care.
4. Influence of working conditions on health.
5. Sickness prevention.

In view of the limited time and money at its disposal, the commission realized that material already in print must be utilized to the fullest possible extent and that the field work done in Pennsylvania must be in a large measure by means of free aid from existing organizations either co-operating independently with the commission or working under the direct supervision of the staff.

This policy has been adopted, and we believe it has produced more favorable results than might have been expected. In so far as the staff can learn of its existence, all printed matter bearing specifically on the Pennsylvania conditions about which the commission was required to report has been collected and studied, together with the more recent and significant general material. Unfortunately much of this local printed matter was found to be so superficial or inaccurate that it was impossible to use it.

For our field work we have been most fortunate in securing the co-operation of representative social and educational agencies in various parts of the State, and of several State and national departments. We have attempted so to plan our investigations that they would represent the different sections of the State, both industrially and geographically.

Money limitations have prevented special studies among the mining and rural population which could not have been made except through our own staff. However, seven organizations have undertaken special studies for us, and only one of these studies is unfinished; three of the seven are State-wide in scope. Seven other organizations have compiled or segregated special material, and in many instances unpublished studies of great value have been secured. In this connection we have especially appreciated the co-operation of the United States Bureau of Labor statistics, the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, the Pennsylvania Department of Health, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the Morris Plan Company of Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Old Age Pension's Commission and the Ohio Health and Old Age Insurance Commission.

Special thanks are due the Philadelphia Bureau of Municipal Research, and the sixteen volunteer workers who from time to time gave their services. In addition to these, the staff wishes to record its hearty appreciation of the services of the many persons, private organizations and official bureaus, whose help and co-operation have made this report possible.

A list of the special studies made for, or by the commission and used constantly in this report, follows:

- I. Kensington Sickness Survey, made by the students of the Pennsylvania School for Social Service in

(1) Authorized statement of Henry R. Seager of the Shipbuilding Labor Adjustment Board, May 28, 1918.

Philadelphia, in May and June, 1918. This was a house-to-house canvass of 743 families, containing 3,198 persons, in a census enumeration district in Kensington, carefully selected to insure its representative character. The primary purpose of the study was to get the illness history of these families for the year ending April 1, 1918, but the cases of sickness existing at the time of the survey were also noted. Disabling and slighter illnesses were not distinguished.

II. Sickness Histories of Special Groups.

- a. Sickness and Dependency. A study of 1,500 of the families in which illness was a problem, under the care of the Charity Organization Societies of seven cities in the State, during 1917. This study, made by the societies and tabulated by the commission and by the students of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, under the direction of Irene Farnam Conrad.
- b. Sickness History of Working Girls. A study of 502 members of Young Women's Christian Association Industrial Clubs in seventeen cities of the State. This covered the illness histories of these working girls for the period June, 1917—to June, 1918. Wage figures and occupations for 1914, before the war, were obtained for comparative purposes. This study was made by the Association Secretaries and tabulated by the Commission.
- c. Sickness History of Wage Earners' Families. A study of 500 families given nursing service in July, 1918, by the Philadelphia Visiting Nurse Society. The families were not limited to a particular group, but were chosen consecutively. The illness at the time of the visit was disregarded, but the sickness history for the preceding year was obtained. This study was made by the nurses of the society, and tabulated by the commission.
- d. Sickness History of Wage Earners. A study of the fatal illnesses of the fathers of families now under the care of the Mothers' Assistance Fund in Lancaster and Lackawanna Counties. This study was made by agents of the Mothers' Assistance Fund and tabulated in the office of the State Supervisor, Harrisburg.

III. Studies of Health Hazards in Industry.

- a. Occupational Diseases in Pennsylvania. An article prepared especially for the commission by Dr. Alice Hamilton, United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, November, 1918.
- b. Factory Health Conditions. A study of 100 factories in the Pittsburgh district, made during the summer and fall of 1918 by the women in industry division of the Council of National Defense of Allegheny County.

IV. Studies of Existing Insurance Facilities.

- a. Special study of the sick benefit funds of the Pennsylvania Railroad (lines east), J. G. Brill Company, J. B. Stetson Company, Nelson Valve Company and Tabor Manufacturing Company, made by the commission in co-operation with the Ohio Health and Old Age Insurance Commission.
- b. Brief study of existing commercial insurance companies, trade union and fraternal sick benefit funds in Pennsylvania; made by the commission.

In addition to these special studies, two sickness surveys are used so constantly in the report that a brief description of them here seemed advisable. Other sources are explained in the text.

A sickness survey of seven districts in Philadelphia was made in 1917 by nurses from the City Bureau of Health, under the direction of the Chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics. Five southern districts of the city were covered by a house-to-house canvass in August, and a district in Manayunk and one in Germantown were added in mid-September. The study included 12,019 individuals in 2,655 different families, and covered all sickness existing at the time of the survey, and duration to that date. The enumerators were instructed to work slowly and carefully and to win the confidence of the families whom they visited. When the information secured seemed to be incomplete, families were revisited, sometimes as often as three times. In view of the precautions taken, we may assume that the sickness rate is reasonably accurate, although the time of year, August and September, was one at which sickness is at the minimum. This survey will hereafter be referred to as the Philadelphia survey.

A study of sickness conditions in the principal cities of central and western Pennsylvania, including Pittsburgh, was carried on in 1917 among industrial policy-holders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The enumerators were the regular agents of the company, who gathered the survey facts in the course of their door-to-door collections. The study was made in March, "a time of year when physical disability on account of disease is probably at its maximum," and covered 328,051 persons, a much larger number than was reached by the Philadelphia survey, but only "serious cases of sickness" existing at the time of the survey were noted. This survey will hereafter be referred to as the Western Pennsylvania survey. As the figures for Pittsburgh have been tabulated separately, they will be referred to as the Pittsburgh Sickness survey.

PART I.

Section IV.

Conclusions and Recommendations.

CONCLUSIONS.

Extent of Sickness Among Employes.*

- I. More than 385,000 persons in the State are constantly suffering from illness; approximately 140,000 from severe, and 245,000 from slighter illnesses.
- II. The average loss of working time among employes in the State is at least six days each year because of sickness. In 1916, 3,025,071 working days were lost because of industrial accidents in the State; sickness causes approximately five to seven times as much loss as industrial accidents.
- III. Pennsylvania stood highest of any State in the Union in the percentage of men rejected for physical reasons in the draft of April, 1917. Of her young men between twenty-one and thirty-one years of age, 46.67 per cent. were rejected. The average for the country as a whole was 29.11 per cent., and one State had but 14.13 per cent. of her men rejected.
- IV. Death rates in Pennsylvania are higher than those for the registration area of the country as a whole. The infant death rate, "that most sensitive index to sanitary conditions," is highly excessive in many parts of the State. It was higher in 1917 in Philadelphia than in New York, Brooklyn, Boston or Chicago. Pittsburgh ranked second among cities of its size, having an infant death rate of 116 per 1,000. The State as a whole had an infant death rate in 1916 of 114 per 1,000, while that for the whole registration area was 101. In the State and in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, the infant death rate is increasing instead of decreasing.

Losses Due to Sickness of Employes.

- I. The losses to employes consist of (a) loss of wages (b) cost of care (c) reduced earning power and standards of living.

Averages do not measure the losses to individuals, because of the uneven distribution of the sickness burden. In one of the sickness surveys in an industrial district in Philadelphia each wage earner sick in 1917 lost thirty-eight days. In another sickness survey each sick wage earner lost sixty-seven days; one-third of the total time lost in this group was lost by nine men, and 53 per cent. of the total illness cost was borne by one-seventh of the entire number of families. In a study of working women one-fourth of the total cost of medical care was borne by ten of the women.

- a. At the nominal rate of $2 a day the wage loss to employes of this State every year because of illness is at least $33,000,000.
- b. The tendency to secure needed medical care is in direct relation to income of the family. As the family income increases, the amount spent on medical care increases. The average cost of medical care for every employe's family is between $30 and $50 a year. In the Visiting Nurse study this average was $47. Medical charity given in many instances cannot be considered as in any way in ultimate solution of the illness problem in a country claiming democratic ideals.
- c. Because most wage earners "cannot afford to be ill," many develop chronic illnesses and greatly reduce their future earning capacity; this reflects an inestimable loss to society in productive power, vigorous citizenship, and the possibility for maintaining family standards which permit proper nourishment, care, and opportunity for the children.

II. The losses to industry consist of (a) decrease in production due to the absence of sick wage earners or to the lessened efficiency of half-sick workers; (b) cost of labor turnover.

- a. Employes in the State lose at least 16,800,000 days' work annually because of sickness, and large numbers of actually sick men and women are at work every day. These facts, while not an exact measure of the loss to industry, give an indication of the extent to which production suffers. During the influenza epidemic anthracite coal production dropped behind 500,000 tons in a few days. A constant limiting of production exists at all times because of constant illness, not spectacular and therefore not seriously considered.
- b. Four large industrial establishments state that it costs on an average from $30 to $50 to hire and train a new workman. The greater the labor turnover, the greater the cost of production; the greater the amount of sickness, the greater the labor turnover. Some progressive employers are engaging industrial physicians and nurses, opening dispensaries and establishing sick benefit funds as a business principle; because it pays to see to it that sick workmen receive care.

III. The losses to the community consist of (a) money loss (b) social loss.

- a. The State spends over $6,000,000 every year directly for the treatment of sickness. In addition, $4,000,000 is spent for the maintenance of institutions for the care of defectives, a large part of which expenditure is undoubtedly made necessary by the neglect of sickness and its consequences. Besides the ten State Hospitals for miners, 175 other hospitals reported to the State Board of Charities in 1916 that 57 per cent. of their in-patients had been treated free and 40 per cent. of their hospital days had been free days.
- b. Illness is no less a burden upon private funds. Aside from the multitude of dispensaries, hospitals, convalescent homes, visiting nurse societies and other charitable and semi-charitable agencies, especially for the care of sickness, organized relief societies invariably report illness to be the most frequent disability in the families coming to them for aid.

- c. The loss from illness to the community is not only in money and in reduced efficiency of the employes themselves, but involves the citizenship of the future. Growing children, forced to endure periods of under nourishment because of straightened family resources when the breadwinners are ill—mothers who receive no prenatal care, working until the last minute before confinement and as soon thereafter as they can "stand on their feet"—babies who are not given a fair start in life—all these mean not only a present problem, but a serious and unjust handicap for the generations to come.

There is no more important problem today than safeguarding the health of the wage-earning woman; not only for her own sake, but for the sake of her children, whose task it will be to make real the ideals for which our men have been laying down their lives.

Present Methods for Meeting the Sickness Problem .

- I. Facilities for medical care among wage earners are not satisfactory, whether considered from the standpoint of extent, cost, or proportion of persons receiving care in time of sickness. Hospital accommodations in the State average little more than one-half the standard minimum of five beds per 1,000 of the population. Even if good medical care were available and adequate, most employes could not afford to pay for it. Fees are not large, but wages have not kept pace with the soaring cost of living, save in a few groups. Most employes are unable to save toward emergencies. The result is that many of them fail to receive medical care of any sort, and that many more do not receive medical care until the illness has passed the stage when it could be quickly remedied. Approximately a fourth of those actually disabled by illness never receive medical care, and a larger percentage of those ill but still trying to work, are without attention.

- II. One-half to three-fourths of the existing sickness insurance is carried through the sick benefit funds of the lodges or fraternals. In most of these, sickness insurance is secondary to life insurance. As a rule, no medical benefits are given, and the cash benefit is but $5 a week for thirteen weeks in any single year, payable only after a man has been ill more than two weeks.

Trade union funds rarely afford better protection. Commercial health insurance is costly and subject to many restrictive rules. Establishment funds afford better protection but are relatively few in number and exist only among progressive employers where health hazards are often reduced to the minimum.

The Influence of Working Conditions on Health.

- I. Investigations of the industries of Pennsylvania have shown that "no other State has so wide a variety of those industrial processes which carry with them danger to the workers either because of poison in the form of fumes, liquids, or dust, or because of mechanically irritating dusts which injure the throat and lungs.
- II. Seventy-nine per cent. of all the deaths of persons of working age in 1916 were from diseases whose connection with "important Pennsylvania industries has been established." Death rates among persons of working age in Pennsylvania from degenerative diseases due in large measure to certain kinds of occupation are steadily increasing.

Sickness Prevention.

- I. Fully one-half of existing sickness could be eliminated if proper preventive measures were taken.
- II. At present from 70 to 75 per cent. of the school children in Pennsylvania are physically defective, and for the most part the defects are correctable if treated in time.

III. A large number of communities in the State have no active health work, much less an adequate appropriation for health activities.

IV. Nothing so stimulates preventive effort as definite responsibility for the losses entailed. Preventive measures proved inadequate to meet the problems of industrial accidents until stimulated by the enactment of the Workmen's Compensation Law. This form of social insurance has steadily reduced the number of accidents and the appeals to charity from families affected and has proved practical in administration.

Our own and other investigations prove that the responsibility for illness rests on three groups: The community, industry and the individual. At present these three groups are meeting the losses from illness in wholly unequal shares; the burden on the individual is often disastrous and out of proportion to his individual responsibility. Some means of just distribution of this burden should be found. There is in Pennsylvania today urgent need for a program of health measures which will

(a) Provide for the efficient care of employees and their families when actually ill, and

(b) Institute preventive measures which will in so far as it is possible, prevent illness and increase the opportunity for health and vigor in the citizenship of the State.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Since investigation has shown that sickness among wage earners in Pennsylvania presents a serious problem of vital importance not only to employees, but to industry and to the State, your committee recommends:

1. A careful study of possible remedial legislation covering the following points:

a. Such adequate medical care for employees and their families during sickness as will materially improve health conditions, by reducing the frequency, duration and severity of illness and thus reduce time loss to industry, and prevent much needless suffering.

b. A means of meeting the wage loss ordinarily suffered by employees during periods of illness by methods which will apportion fairly the economic burden between the three elements responsible—the individual industry and the State.

c. A method for stimulating State-wide interest and active work in sickness prevention.

2. A special study of proposed and existing systems of health insurance in this and other countries, with special attention to problems concerning constitutionality and the administration of medical benefits.

3. That these studies be under the direction of a commission on which the medical, nursing and legal professions, organized employers and organized employees shall be represented.

PART II

SECTION I

THE NATURE AND EXTENT OF THE SICKNESS PROBLEM.

No part of the United States has as yet established adequate machinery for keeping complete sickness statistics. Pennsylvania is no exception to the rule. Our information then, must be based on more or less fragmentary material, covering certain selected groups, from which conclusions can be drawn and averages taken.

Averages and rates tell little of the human story.

The real nature and extent of the sickness problem among employes and their families is most clearly brought out by studies of conditions among groups of people for a considerable period. For this reason we have summarized briefly the results of three studies giving the sickness experience of three different groups for a year. In this way it is possible to see how sickness really affects the community, and to place it in its natural human relations.

The first study is of a typical wage earning group in a census enumeration district of an industrial section of Philadelphia; the second covers a group seeking medical care from the Philadelphia Visiting Nurse Society; the third is a study of a group of working women. The sickness experience of a dependent group is discussed in Section II.

THE KENSINGTON SURVEY. (1)

The Kensington Survey was a door-to-door investigation made for the Commission by the Pennsylvania School for Social Service. The area of the survey was chosen because it forms part of the industrial district of Kensington, because of the presence therein of numerous manufacturing establishments engaged in the production of a variety of goods, and also because of its proximity to the Cramp Shipbuilding Yards and the ease of access to the center of the city, thus assuring a diversity of industrial and commercial employment. From a study of the 1910 census figures for this area it was noted that various nationalities would be found and that the home life would be typical of the working population of the State. The district was chosen only after representatives of the school had not only studied the city atlas for the types of buildings, but had made a thorough canvass in the district itself so as to assure the school that the population was a normal working group.

Owing to the care with which this district was chosen, there is reason to feel that a fairly typical group of families of industrial wage-earners was selected. There were 743 families, including 3,198 individuals. The district presented some eight to ten nationalities, but 77.9 per cent. were native born Americans. The highest percentage of foreign-born were, in the order named, Germans, Austrians, Irish and Russians.

That the group was in no way a dependant group, or the district a "slum" district, is witnessed by the thrift of these families—189 of them owned their own houses, and 626, or 88 per cent. had purchased Liberty Bonds. The house-rent in over 80 per cent. of the rental cases was between $10.00 and $20.00.

While the average size of the families was only 4.3 persons, it is noteworthy that the number of wage-earners averaged 1.94 per family. In sixty-three cases, the mother of the family was at work as well as the father, and in another seventy cases, a working woman was the "head of the house." Eight per cent. of the families were in receipt of weekly incomes of less than $15.00 and 47 per cent. more had between $15.00 and $30.00, making more than half—55 per cent.—in receipt of weekly incomes of $30.00 or less. The largest single group received between $20.00 and $25.00. As there was an average of practically two wage-earners per family, this does not indicate an especially high wage-rate for individual wage-earners. The amount of the individual's wage-loss from illness, in cases where this could be learned, averaged in fact just about $2.00 a day.

Nearly half of the wage-earners were employed in "manufacturing and mechanical" occupations; that is to say, factory work and hand trades. The next largest group was "trade," with 18 per cent., and the third, "domestic and personal service," accounted for 11.5 per cent.; while "professional service" accounted for but 1.4 of the number, indicating an industrial group; "laborers" were only 7.3 per cent. of the total, showing that the group was above the average for industrial employees.

Undoubtedly, in going over a year's illness experience, many minor ailments were ignored, yet only 12.4 per cent. of the 734 families about whom these facts could be obtained had had no sickness during the year. One case of illness was reported in 179 families, two cases in 173, three or four in 162, and five or more in 126. Twenty-six families reported ten or more cases of illness. Of the 1994 cases reported, a comparatively high proportion, 42.5 per cent. were those of wage-earners, and 66 per cent. of them were illnesses either of wage-earners or of housekeepers, thus causing a serious wage or housekeeping loss. In 527 instances illness of the principal wage-earner was reported, 319 cases of illness of other wage-earners, 466 cases of illness of the housewife, and only 677 cases of illness of other members of the family.

In the 1472 cases where accurate information on duration was obtained, 57.6 per cent. lasted four weeks or under; the largest single number falling between one and two weeks, when 351 cases were recorded. Those lasting from one to three months comprised 19.2 per cent. and another 12.1 per cent. lasted more than a year. When over 42 per cent. of the illness registered lasted more than four weeks we begin to realize how disastrously illness may affect the families in a group such as this. The average days lost from work on account of sickness among the 421 cases of wage-earners' illness causing loss of time was thirty-eight. 367 of these workers had a wage loss of $28,823, or an approximate average of $79.00 for each case. In addition to the loss of wages, the families had to bear the cost of medical care. Eighty-five of these illnesses were treated free, 144 had only home treatment or patent medicines, and no treatment whatever was recorded for an additional 154 cases. A private doctor was most often consulted, and eighty-five cases had had hospital treatment. The families for the most part met the expenses of illness through their own resources. The employers helped by contributing wages or paying for medical care in a little over one per cent. of the cases of sick wage-earners. In 99 per cent. of the wage-earners' illnesses and in all cases of the illness of dependents, industry assumed no responsibility.

Seventy-seven per cent. of the 3,198 individuals covered had protected themselves against a pauper's burial by carrying industrial life insurance policies for small amounts; 17 per cent. had some form of "sickness and death" insurance. Thirty-four per cent. of the wage-earners were insured in this way, carrying the insurance through fraternal organizations in almost three-fourths of the cases. Less than three per cent. were insured against sickness in commercial insurance companies.

This general lack of insurance protection against sickness is not surprising. The average family of four or more, with a weekly income of $30.00 or less, will risk the somewhat uncertain chance of sickness, rather than pay the relatively heavy premiums necessary for adequate protection. Life insurance is much more frequently carried, for death is a certainty and the desire for decent burial is a part of the worker's self respect. And yet, among these Kensington families, the chance of avoiding illness was very slight—less than thirteen in a hundred families escaped at least one case during the year, and some had to meet the emergency many times.

VISITING NURSE SOCIETY STUDY.

The Staff of the Visiting Nurse Society of Philadelphia gathered, for the Commission, data covering a year's sickness experience in 500 of the families to which they were called during July, 1918. No attempt was made to confine the study to any particular kind of family; they were chosen consecutively, and the result was an ordinarily self-supporting industrial group, more than half of whom had been forced by sickness to appeal for nursing care which was wholly or partially free. The 500 families visited, about one-fourth of whom were colored, contained 2,588 individuals, or an average of five per family, although 1,420 or more than half the total number of persons in the group, belonged to families of six or more members. More than half the families were Americans by birth; Italians, Russians and Irish made up about a third; and the others were Austrians, Germans, English and Polish.

There is nothing particularly striking in the economic history of these families, compared with that of other wage-earning groups of our population. Only five families had no wage-earners. Of the 691 wage-earners in the group, 509 were heads of families, forty-five were housekeepers who went out to work, and 128 were other members of the family. Nine of these were under sixteen years of age. Only one wage-earner was found in each of 355, or 70.8 per cent. of the families, containing more than half the total number of individuals, while only forty-two families had more than two wage-earners. More than 69 per cent. of these workers were described as "steady," the others being "seasonal" or "casual," in many instances because of the nature of their occupations. Of the 615 wage-earners whose occupations were known, 243, or 36 per cent. were engaged in manufacturing and mechanical trades, and 139, or 20.5 per cent. in transportation and trade, leaving only 17.7 per cent. as laborers and 13.1 per cent. in domestic and personal service. Of these last 41 per cent. were the working housekeepers.

The incomes reported by these families tell a story strangely at variance with the popular rumors of wealth brought by the war to the working man. Of the 438 families whose incomes were known, with an average membership of more than five, one-third had incomes of less than $20.00 per week, and 353 families, or 80.6 per cent. containing more than 77 per cent. of the total number of individuals, had less than $30.00 per week. Only eighty-five families, or 19.4 per cent. had $30.00 or over. The largest single group, 127, or 28.9 per cent. containing about 28 per cent. of the total number of persons, had between $20.00 and $25.00 per week. In 13 per cent. of the households, the incomes had been augmented by lodgers, ranging in number from one to nine.

In spite of the size of their incomes, 238 families had been able to accumulate small savings; but it has been only too often demonstrated that under present living conditions, saving by families of five or six members on less than $30.00 per week usually means reducing the allowance for food, clothing, rent and recreation below the safety point.

All cases of illness which had occurred during the preceding year were recorded, exclusive of the illness for which the nurse had been called at the time of the survey. In addition, all cases of chronic illness were included, many of which were of more than a year's duration. There were 418 families, or more than 83 per cent. who had had at least one case of illness during the year, making a total of 1,043 cases. Each of 375, or 75 per cent. of the families reported two or more cases each, while fifty families reported five or more cases. In 561, or 53.7 per cent. of the cases, it was either a wage-earner or a housekeeper who was ill, in 200 cases it was the principal wage-earner, and in 316 the housekeeper. Typhoid fever, tuberculosis, respiratory diseases including pneumonia, and digestive diseases, accounted for 290, or 27.8 per cent. of the cases, children's diseases for 164 cases, diseases of the puerperal state for 89, and accidents for forty-eight.

During the year, 234 wage-earners, or 33.8 per cent. of the total number, were ill; 208, or 89 per cent. of these, or 30 per cent. of the total number of wage-earners, lost time from work because of sickness. The total length of time lost including that lost by those suffering from chronic illness, was known in the cases of 201 workers, and amounted to 13,528 working days, or an average of more than sixty-seven days for each of the 201, or more than nineteen days for each of the 691 wage-earners in the study.

Of this time, which is equivalent to more than forty-five working years, 4,590 days, or almost one-third, were lost by nine men. (1) Five men had lost an average of more than 525 consecutive days each, and one man had been at home sick for 720 days. He was suffering from tuberculosis, a curable disease if treated in its early stages, and because of his illness his two daughters, sixteen and seventeen years of age and both tubercular, were forced to work regularly, earning together about $29.00 per week for the support of the family of five.

(1) See Table III at end of this section.

Only forty of these 201 workers lost less than two weeks' time because of sickness, while ninety-three, or 46 per cent. lost from one to six months each. Of these last, only nineteen belonged to families whose incomes were as much as $30.00 per week.

Of the total time lost, 9,577 days were lost by families whose incomes were known, and of this loss more than half was suffered by 100 families with incomes of less than $25.00 per week. The average loss for these families was more than ninety-five working days each.

In addition to the suffering caused by suspension of the family income, illness in many cases made necessary expenditures for medical care for which the families were entirely unprepared. Medical and dental care were received by 412 families. This care was obtained free in twenty-two cases, and the cost was unknown in twenty-seven others. The 363 families whose expenditures were known spent $17,102.29, or an average of more than $47.00 each, or more than $34.00 for each of the 500 families in the whole group. The same unevenness of distribution is seen in this expense as in the loss of time.

Fifty-three per cent. of the entire cost, or $9,193.50, was borne by fifty families, less than one-seventh of the entire number. Of these fifty families, whose expenses ranged from $100.00 to $416.00 each, the incomes of twenty-six were less than $30.00, and of fifteen were less than $20.00 per week. Two families with incomes of $20.00 per week had doctors' bills of $202.00 and $400.00 respectively. More than 47 per cent. of the families spent over $25.00 each, while only 29 per cent. escaped with less than $10.00.

Sixteen families spent more than $200.00 each, and of these, ten spent more than $300.00 each; while thirteen families had medical and dental expenditures amounting to more than 20 per cent. of their total incomes.

As in the Kensington Survey the means of meeting these burdens were left for the worker and his family to devise, the employer helping in only three per cent. of the cases. In about a third of the cases, emergencies were met by reducing the usual outlays for living expenses, while in another third money was borrowed, credit obtained and help received from charity, friends and relatives. Savings were a help in about 20 per cent. of the families. The amount of health insurance carried was small; only seventeen families had complete insurance protection and eighty-five were partially insured.

Industrial policies of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, entitling the holder to nursing care, were held by 199, or 39.8 per cent. of the families; thirty-seven others, or 7.4 per cent. were classed as "pay" patients, 189, or 37.8 per cent. as "part pay," and seventy-four, or 14.8 per cent. as "free."

The very large proportion of instances in which an attempt was made to secure medical care is probably due, in part, to the fact that so many of the families carried industrial life insurance which secured nursing care for them and strongly encouraged medical treatment.

A private doctor was consulted in 650, or 64.3 per cent. of the 1,038 cases, where the nature of treatment was known; a visiting nurse was used in 130, or 12 per cent. of the cases, a hospital or convalescent home in 19 per cent. and no medical care at all, or medicine only, in 17 per cent.

The experience of these families brings out vividly the universal nature of the sickness risk, and the severity of the losses of time and money which may fall on the whole group, but which are sure to fall with crushing weight on a certain number, regardless of individual responsibility or resources.

When wages among comparatively skilled workers are insufficient to provide even the necessities for comfortable, healthful living; when there is at least an 80 per cent. chance that some one in each family will be ill every year; when in at least 30 per cent. of the families illness will cut off the family income and necessitate an additional expenditure for medical care, frequently amounting to a large part of a year's wages, it is apparent that industry and the state, both in part responsible, must share with the individual in the distribution of the sickness risk.

WORKING WOMEN'S RECORDS.

In August and September 1918, a study was made of 502 working women who were members of the Young Women's Christian Association Industrial Clubs in twenty-two different cities in seventeen counties of Pennsylvania. Because of the time of year in which the study was made, it was impossible to obtain records for a larger number, but all club members who could be reached by the Secretaries were included, and the study was not limited to a special occupation or group.

In all probability these girls had more education and advantages than many other working women. In age, 35 per cent. of them were under twenty, 45 per cent. between twenty and twenty-five, and only six per cent. were over thirty.

Nine-tenths of them were Americans, and almost three-fourths were native-born of native-born parents. Four-fifths of the girls were living at home, with their families. There were 100 who were living independently. Eleven of this 100 contributed to the support of their families, as well as supporting themselves, and 127 of the girls who lived at home were giving all, or part of their earnings towards the family budget. More than a third of the 368, about whom this fact was known, had one or more persons wholly dependent on their earnings. Forty-eight were married women, more than half of whom had dependents, and the percentage of these married women who had others wholly dependent upon them was double that of the unmarried women.

Of 439 of these girls, but fifty-five had entered work for the first time since the war. Sixty-six had changed the type of work they were doing, in forty-eight cases because of the possibility of making better wages. Over 70 per cent. had continued the same type of work which they had been doing before the war; and of these, 62 per cent. had had a wage increase.

Comparative wage statistics were obtained for 240 girls, showing the weekly amount received in 1916 and that received in 1917. Even in the latter year, with the supposed great increase in wages, 89 per cent. of them were earning less than $20.00 a week. In 1916, 99 per cent. had been earning less than this amount, the wages of 55 per cent. being under $10.00; in 1917 this percentage had dropped to include only a third; while the percentage earning between $10.00 and $15.00 had increased from 43 to 55 per cent.

The following table shows the changes in the numbers in the different wage groups.

Under
5	5.00	24
5	7.99	65
8	9.99	43
10	11.99	46
12	14.99	30
15	17.99	25
18	19.99	4
20	24.99	2

It was found that in 243 cases, 168 had had wage increases, seventy were receiving the same wage, and five had had their wages decreased.

More than half of the girls—56 per cent.—were doing work on a time basis. The piece workers were apparently somewhat better paid, for while only forty-two of the time workers were receiving over $15.00 a week, seventy-seven of the piece workers were earning over this amount. A large proportion of both—83 per cent. of time workers and 59 per cent. of piece workers—received less than $15.00 weekly.

Over 60 per cent. of the girls worked in factories, of these a large number in garment and textile factories. Forty-eight girls worked in stores, and forty-three in offices, thirty-five did housework, and the rest were scattered in various other occupations.

But 154 of these 502 girls had escaped illness expenditure during 1917. Three hundred and forty-eight, or over 69 per cent., had suffered financial loss in varying degrees because of accident or disease. The type of care and the cost of that care were known in 284 of the 348 cases. The average expenditure was $27.78 for each of the 284 girls, or $15.72 for each of the 502 girls in the group studied. This, however, gives no idea of the burden imposed upon the few who suffered severe illness. The total expenditure for the 284 girls was $7,890.02. Thirty-nine per cent. of this, over $3,000.00, was spent by nine per cent. (twenty-eight persons) of the group, and one-fourth of this total expenditure was paid out by only ten girls.

A doctor was called in by 199 of the girls, medicine was bought by 139, ten girls had hospital treatment, and three had nursing care. An unusually large proportion—256—had had some expenditure for dental care, due in part, no doubt, to the special talks which the clubs have had, laying emphasis on the care of the teeth. Every girl who had had some expenditure had spent more than $5.00. The largest number spent between $20.00 and $30.00.

One girl, making less than $5.00 a week in a factory, was trying to pay off a bill of $166.00. Another, earning $5.00 a week at housework, had been ill for six months, had had two operations, and was confronted with a bill of $685.00. She had managed to pay a part of this with some money she had saved, and was paying the remainder on the installment plan. A third girl, working in a restaurant, earning $12.50 a week, hurt her knee and was obliged to be away from work for six months and to spend over a hundred dollars. A fourth girl, a cotton winder, earning $14.00 a week, had a bill of $119.00 for weekly treatments of her nose and throat. Three of these girls were living away from home, and had to meet these bills as best they could. It is significant that two-thirds of the twenty-eight girls who had expenditures of over $50.00 were earning less than $15.00 a week.

The methods used to finance the cost of sickness were known in 383 cases. In many instances more than one method was used. Savings were used almost four times as often as any other method—210 times. The girl's family helped her in fifty-nine cases. In forty cases she belonged to a lodge, which was of some assistance, although the benefits were too small to be of great help, and often were not received. Eight girls carried commercial health insurance. In only three cases were wages continued while the girl was ill. In no case did a girl go to a charitable relief agency or to a money lender. Only one girl had a "gift" to help pay her doctor's bill. In several cases it was noted that the doctor made special rates.

No girl who must live on $12.00 a week can by herself save enough to meet the unusual expenses of illness, and this, too, when her regular income is suspended. Upon the health of the woman in industry depends not only her efficiency and the profit of her employer, but the welfare of the race and the vigor of our future citizenship. In the face of these obvious truths, it cannot be questioned that some method must be found by which the girl workers shall no longer have to bear 99 per cent. of the sickness burden alone, but that the industry and the community to which her well being is essential, and upon which rest a part of the responsibility for illness, shall also share the cost.

Extent of Sickness.

In studying sickness as a problem, one of the first questions to be considered is its extent. How many people are sick every year or every day, how long do their illness last, and how much do they lose on account of illness? The most common method of answering these questions and the one which will first be used, is by giving the "average sickness rate" (1) among large groups of people.

The facts are drawn mainly from the Kensington, Philadelphia, and Western Pennsylvania surveys, the Sickness and Dependency Study, and the establishment fund and Workmen's Circle statistics.

Limitations of Survey Figures.

The rates of sickness deduced from sickness surveys must not, of course, be taken as anything but a rough index of the actual amount of illness. Aside from differences in race, sex and age composition of the population, which are to be taken into account in all forms of social statistics, much depends upon the care with which the figures are collected. Other things being equal, nurses who were the enumerators in Philadelphia survey are probably able to secure more complete figures than lay investigators. Persons who have the confidence of the families interviews naturally obtain better information than of whom they feel suspicious.

The season of the survey is likely to have a decided effect on the sickness rate, as sickness is generally more prevalent in winter and in early spring, at the time when the Western Pennsylvania survey was taken. In August and September, the season of the Philadelphia survey, sickness is usually at the minimum.

Even the definition of "sickness" used, varies from survey to survey. For instance, only "serious" cases of sickness were enumerated in the Western Pennsylvania survey. In any enumeration of the illness occurring during a long period such as the illness histories in the Kensington survey, much sickness, especially that which is trivial, is forgotten. Serious illnesses, especially those of wage earners, are likely to be remembered, but slighter ailments and children's diseases are apt to be passed over.

The possibility of considerable variation in sickness rates is well illustrated by three sickness surveys made in Framingham, Mass., (1) in the spring of 1917. In the first special care was used to secure completeness and to include both disabling and less serious disabilities. The enumeration was made by nurses and insurance agents. The rate found was 6.2 per cent. for all sickness and 3.3 per cent. for persons unable to work. But by adopting the definition of sickness used in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company surveys, which was said to be "actual complete disability," the sickness rate fell to 1.8 per cent., while in a "patriotic census" taken among practically the same group a few weeks later, a sickness rate of 3.2 per cent. was reported.

Sickness Rates in Sickness Surveys.

The Philadelphia survey as has already been explained, included all illness existing on the day of the investigator's visit. Of the 12,019 persons covered, 514 were found to be actually ill at the time of the survey. This indicates an average daily sickness rate of 4.28 per cent. In other words, approximately forty-three persons in every one thousand in the district covered by the survey are ill every day in the year. Of these cases, however, only 36.7 per cent. were "unable to work," showing that on this basis an average of 1.57 per cent. or sixteen per thousand of the persons visited are afflicted each day with sickness which actually disables them. The Western Pennsylvania survey on the other hand, included only "serious" illnesses and showed a daily sickness rate of 1.96 per cent. Of the sick persons found, 94 per cent. were "sick, unable to work," indicating that an average of 1.87 per cent. or approximately nineteen persons out of every 1,000 were suffering from actually disabling illness every day in the year. The fact that the Philadelphia survey was made in August and September, and the Western Pennsylvania survey in March would easily account for the difference in the amount of sickness found. Of the 3,198 persons visited in the Kensington survey, 167 were ill at the time of the enumeration, making an average daily sickness rate of 5.22 per cent., or fifty-two per thousand.

In the Visiting Nurse Study the illness existing on the day of the visit were not recorded, and it was, therefore, impossible to secure the daily sickness rate. A total of 1,043 cases of illness were reported for the year among the 2,588 individuals covered, indicating that of this group 40 per cent. suffered illness during the year.

Some interesting calculations are suggested by the survey figures. The average daily sickness rates which we have quoted seem to show that in the district covered by the Philadelphia survey each person suffers on an average 5.7 days of actually disabling sickness each year, and that the corresponding rate in the Western Pennsylvania group

(1) Sickness rates are usually stated as follows:

1. Number of persons per 1,000 of the group or population under consideration disabled per year.
2. Average length of disability per disabled person.
3. Average number of days of disability per year per person included in group or population under consideration.
4. Number of persons per 1,000 of the group or population under consideration disabled per day.

(1) Framingham Community Health and Tuberculosis Demonstration of the National Tuberculosis Association. "The Sickness Census," Framingham Monograph No. 2, Medical Series No. 1.

is 6.8 days per person. (1) If we accept the rates of 1.57 per cent. for disabling sickness and 2.71 per cent. for slighter ailments established by this study as a fairly complete measure of sickness, an average of 140,000 persons in the State are constantly suffering from severe, and 245,000 more lesser, illnesses, making a total of 385,000 sick persons in the State every day in the year. (2)

The average number of days of disabling sickness of adults per year is probably over seven and the average number of days lost from work is about six. (3)

These figures we feel are undoubtedly lower than those which more complete investigations would yield. Considering the mortality rates in Pennsylvania, the comparative status of public health appropriations and the large proportion of the population engaged in industry, the days loss is probably much higher. The United States Public Health Service estimates that an average of 3,000,000 persons are ill in the United States at any given date, and that each of the Nation's 30,000,000 wage earners loses an average of nine working days each year because of sickness.

Sickness Rates in Establishment Funds.

Sickness rates, which are to a certain extent inaccurate, may be obtained from the records of societies paying sick benefits. As a rule these funds have a "waiting period" (4) and their records do not take into account illness of a shorter duration than that period, or that portion of illness cases continuing after the expiration of the benefit period.

Therefore, only benefit funds which have the same "waiting period" have comparable sickness rates. Seventeen of the twenty Pennsylvania funds studied by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, having a membership of 97,000 persons, had the same seven-day "waiting period." The figures compiled indicate that during each year about 30 per cent. of the members of these funds have illnesses for which they receive sickness benefit. (5)

The Pennsylvania funds (6) closely resemble those in other parts of the country in this respect, for the average number of illness cases per 100 members in all the funds studied is twenty-six. The average number of illness cases in the "Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund of America," covering a five year experience, was twenty-four per 100 members. The reports of the Workmen's Circle for the year 1916 show a slightly lower rate, twenty-three cases per 100 members per year. (7) A disproportionate number of its members, however, are clerks and "business men" (probably proprietors of small retail stores.) Persons in such occupations are subject to the health hazards of a sedentary life, but comparatively little exposed to the more definite occupational poisonings and hazards.

Duration of Illness.

Average rates of illness covering persons both sick and well indicate the magnitude of the sickness problem as a whole, but do not in any way show the burden of sickness to the individual. One man may escape illness altogether, and his neighbor lose two weeks from work, while a third is ill six months, uses up his savings and is left with a burden of debt.

Statistics on the duration of illness have been collected from two sources; Sickness Surveys, and the actual records of Establishment and Sick Benefit Funds.

(1) See Table IV at end of this section.

(2) On the basis of 1918 estimated population.

(3) See Table V at the end of this section.

(4) The "waiting period" is the time at the beginning of an illness before benefits are paid.

(5) See Table XIV at the end of this section.

(6) Information concerning twenty Pennsylvania "establishment funds" was included in a nation-wide investigation of such funds by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics in 1917. Through the kindness of Dr. Royal Meeker, the Chief of the Bureau, it was possible for the commission to secure this material, as well as figures on the "Workmen's Circle," a national mutual benefit society with about 40,000 members, in advance of publication.

(7) For the year 1916, the "Workmen's Circle" reported 6.9 per cent. of its membership ill in the first quarter; 5.9 per cent. in the second; 5.2 per cent. in the third; and 5 per cent. in the fourth, or a total, disregarding illnesses of more than one quarter, of twenty-three cases per 100 members, for the year.

Sickness Survey Figures. (1)

The Western Pennsylvania and the Philadelphia survey figures would seem to be on the most closely comparable basis, as both cover only diseases existing at the time of the survey and duration to that date.

But in the Philadelphia survey special effort was made to ferret out chronic illness, while the Western Pennsylvania survey dealt only with "serious illness." The results for Philadelphia are startling. Twenty-eight per cent. of the cases in this study were chronic, lasting three years or more, and an additional 25 per cent. lasted longer than one year. In other words, over half the cases where duration was known lasted more than a year, bearing out the conclusion that illness among employees is too often untreated in its early stages and that many half-sick men continue at work. Even the 25 per cent. of illness of more than a year's duration found in the Western Pennsylvania survey is significant of a situation which demands attention. (2)

In the latter study 56 per cent. lasted longer than a month, while this figure is raised to 76 per cent. in the Philadelphia survey. In both surveys, the number of very short illness, of less than one week duration, was relatively insignificant.

In the sickness and dependency study, (2) it was possible to tabulate the average length of the 386 cases of illness which had ended at the time of the survey. 75.0 per cent. of these lasted longer than one month, the largest proportion, or 22.2 per cent. falling in the one-to-three month group, while in the Kensington survey, 42.3 per cent. of the illness lasted longer than a month. In this survey, 421 cases of illness of wage-earners were reported with a total duration of 16,090 days, or more than thirty-eight days per case. In these two studies a small percentage of long illnesses of over a year's duration was found. But this is probably due to the relative incompleteness of these studies as compared to the Philadelphia and Western Pennsylvania surveys.

Establishment and Sick Benefit Fund Figures.

A study of twelve well organized establishment funds, four per cent. of which were in Pennsylvania, was made during the summer and fall of 1918 by the Connecticut, Ohio, Illinois and Pennsylvania Health Insurance Commissions with the help of Mr. Boris Emmet of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics. The results of this study were tabulated by the Ohio Commission in ten groupings. The benefit associations selected for study include employees in the following occupations; Railroad transportation, manufacture of iron and steel products, textiles, steel mill, general foundry work and letter carriers.

The most important facts to be gathered from this study relate to the duration of the illnesses for which benefit had been paid. As most of the funds had a seven day "waiting period," only cases of more than eight days duration were used in the combined experience tables. Because of differences in administration of benefits and hazards of the several occupations represented, the proportions of cases of long and short duration vary widely in the different funds. For instance, 55.73 per cent. of the sickness in Fund No. 1 lasted less than two weeks, while in Fund No. 10 only 16.1 per cent. were of this duration. In the "over-six months" group. Fund No. 1 had 1.39 per cent. of its cases, while Fund No. 10 had 5.24 per cent.

Taking the combined experience of these funds, however, it was found that 34.56 per cent. of the cases lasted less than two weeks; 34.68 lasted more than a month, and 3.26 per cent., more than six months. (3)

The illnesses of females seem to be of longer duration than those of males, according to the experience of one fund having both men and women in its membership; for while 40.98 per cent. of the illness cases among the men were of less than two weeks duration, only 27.73 per cent.

(1) The Western Pennsylvania figures do not include negroes.

(2) See Table X at end of this section.

(3) See Table XI at end of section.

of the women's illnesses were in that group. 30.06 per cent. of the men's illnesses and 42.65 per cent. of the women's, lasted longer than one month, raising the percentage of illnesses for the fund, of more than one month's duration, to 37.02 per cent., or slightly higher than the combined experience of the twelve funds. (1) We cannot be sure, however, that this higher rate is due to the inclusion of women, because in the United States Letter Carrier's Association, one of the twelve funds studied, 42.9 per cent. of the illnesses lasted more than one month.

One of the funds studied by the Pennsylvania Commission was the Pennsylvania Railroad (East) Voluntary Relief Department. Although, as is explained in the section on "Losses to Industry because of Sickness among Employees," this study is not complete, 64,849 of the completed cases of illness and non-industrial accidents which had occurred between 1913-1917 were tabulated. As this fund has a waiting period of only three days, a larger number of short illnesses are included than in the studies of the other funds. 74 per cent. of the cases lasted less than two weeks, and 15 per cent. from two to four weeks, leaving only 11 per cent. in the group which lasted longer than one month. (2) When we deduct the 27,234 cases of less than eight days duration, we find that the proportion of the remainder which lasted less than two weeks is reduced to 55.7 per cent. and that 18.11 per cent. lasted longer than one month. As this fund pays sick benefits during the entire period of illness, and as only completed cases were included in the study, there were undoubtedly a very large number of chronic and serious cases of more than one month's duration which were still receiving benefits and for that reason were not recorded.

It is clear that of course the shorter the "waiting period," the larger the percentage of short illness. Statistics from one fund which pays benefits from the first day of illness, were studied. (3) The results of five years' experience showed that 19.1 per cent. of the illnesses in this group were of less than one week's duration. 46.8 per cent. lasted less than two weeks, and a total of 71.5 per cent. lasted less than a month. Of the 28.5 lasting over one month, more than two-thirds were between one and four months, and 2.2 per cent., or 954 cases, were over six months in duration.

However we may interpret these varying figures, we are struck with the fact that in all different groups studied at least one-third of the illnesses are of relatively long duration, and when we realize that a large proportion of those who are ill, are the house-keepers or wage-earners whose sickness means not only expenditures for medical and hospital care, but also suspension of the family income, we begin to see the enormity of the burden which sickness is imposing.

Another index of health conditions among a considerable group of Pennsylvania employes is the proportion of rejections for physical causes in the draft of April, 1917. The men of draft age may be assumed to be at the height of their physical powers. Yet in Pennsylvania the proportion of those examined who were rejected for physical causes was 46.67 per cent. (5) This was the highest proportion found in any State in the Union, the average for the whole United States being but 29.11 per cent. It is unfortunate that the rejections by the various local boards are not given on the same basis so that variations in different localities can be discussed at this time. Individual boards and physicians may, of course, vary in the strictness of their examinations, but it would seem that over a whole State these differences would tend to balance each other.

(1) See Table XII at end of this section.

(2) See Table XIII at end of this section.

(3) Data for a five-year period, 1912 to 1916 inclusive, for approximately 47,000 persons in some forty-two different occupational groups, was made available to the commission in advance of publication through the kindness of the Hon. Royal Meeker, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

(4) A detailed study of the nature of disabilities causing rejection is now being made in the office of the Provost Marshal General.

(5) Report of the Provost Marshal General to the Secretary of War, November, 1917.

The years from twenty-one to thirty-one are those in which man should be vigorous and fit, in prime physical condition. The draft army represents a large proportion of our wage-earning population, and the figures in the Provost Marshal General's report are startling. When almost half the men examined are not in condition for military service, something is radically wrong.

The conclusion seems justified that Pennsylvania men between twenty-one and thirty-one years of age are in poorer physical condition than in any other State. (1) This fact is not surprising, however, when we consider that almost three-fourths of our school children who are examined are found to be physically defective. The nature of the defects found among both the school children and men of draft age are discussed in Section V.

Extent of Illness by Sex and Age.

The results of the Philadelphia, the Western Pennsylvania and the Pittsburgh sickness surveys have been tabulated to show the extent of sickness by sex and age groups. (2) The general experience under health insurance laws shows a higher sickness rate for females than for males. In contrast to this, both the Western Pennsylvania survey and the figures for Pittsburgh alone show a lower rate for females, where all ages are considered, but in the age groups fifteen to thirty-four the sickness rates for females are higher than the corresponding rates for males, both for all illnesses, and for disabling illness. In the Philadelphia survey, however, the rate for illnesses at all ages was slightly higher for females than for males, 4.3 per cent. instead of 4.2 per cent., but for disabling sickness it was 1.4 per cent. for females and 1.7 per cent. for males. The difference in favor of the female sex does not show itself clearly until the age period thirty-five to forty-four years is reached. In the earlier years, covering childhood and the principal periods of childbearing and wage earning for the sex, the sickness rate is slightly higher in most cases, bearing out the experience under Health Insurance. (3)

A possible explanation of these differences in the sickness rates of males and females suggests the responsibility of industry for a certain part of existing illness. The great majority of women between thirty-five and sixty-five years of age are housewives, whereas most men are gainfully employed during this age period. Not only the direct, but the cumulative effect of industrial conditions may begin to be felt in middle life, and thus appreciably raise the sickness rate of older men. The higher rate for women under Health Insurance applies only to working women, and most women workers are found in the age groups fifteen to thirty-five years.

Such an explanation is borne out by the statement of Dr. B. S. Warren and Mr. Edgar Sydenstricker, of the United States Public Health Service, that:

"In view of the generally accepted fact that in the population as a whole the female mortality rate is less than the male, it would seem reasonable to assume that, excluding confinements, the female morbidity rate is not greater than the male. Among women employed as wage workers, however, these conditions are apparently reversed." (4)

Variations in the sickness rate according to age are simpler than the sex differences. There is a steady rise in each case from the youngest to the oldest groups, with the exception of disabling sickness for females in the Philadelphia survey. In that case, the rate for the years thirty-five to forty-four is slightly lower than for the twenty years preceding. This again points to the possible influence of wage earning and child bearing in the Philadelphia group.

Extent of Sickness by Color, Race and Location.

The negro population has a higher sickness rate than the white, according to available evidence. Since negroes from the South are at present migrating to Pennsylvania in large numbers, this means the possibility of a great increase in the sickness problem of the State, particularly during the period of acclimation when pre-disposition to disease is markedly shown. The average daily sickness rate among white policy-holders in the Western Pennsylvania survey was 1.75 per cent.; among colored, 2.08.

In each city for which these comparative figures have been tabulated, negroes have the larger amount of sickness. In Pittsburgh the rates were 1.62 per cent. for whites and 1.78 for negroes; in Braddock, 1.56 and 2.34; in McKeesport, 1.95 and 2.41; in Uniontown, 2.22 and 2.79, respectively. (1)

Three of the seven districts covered by the Philadelphia survey were inhabited mainly by negroes, and, while the average sickness rate found in the survey was 4.28 per cent., the rates in these districts were 4.45, 9.30 and 3.87 per cent., respectively. The abnormal rate of 9.30 was in a district of negroes fresh from the South, receiving low wages and living under crowded, unsanitary conditions. Dr. Miller, who had the survey in charge, felt that unless drastic measures to improve health conditions were taken in this neighborhood, there was danger of an epidemic which might menace the city.

If we consider mortality statistics as an indication of the extent of sickness, the same high rate among negroes appears. In 1916 the death rate in Pennsylvania from all causes was 14.3 per 1,000 white persons as against 23.6 for the colored population. The rate among negroes in the cities was about 15 per cent. higher than among those in the rural districts. Analyzed by diseases, the greatest differences appear in organic heart diseases, pneumonia and tuberculosis in all its forms, where the rates for the colored are more than double those for the white population. Tuberculosis of the lungs, for instance, had a rate in 1916 of 105.0 per 100,000 for the white population, but a rate of 389.3 for the colored. Other forms of tuberculosis showed rates of 7.7 vs. 16.3 and 9.4 vs. 25.8, more than twice the rate for the white population in each case. Communicable diseases, diabetes, cancer and suicide are apparently slightly less frequent among the colored than among the white.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company made for the commission a special compilation of claim rate in Pennsylvania among industrial policy holders, classifying the insured by color, over a period of three years—1915, 1916 and 1917. (2) Rates are given for twenty-six localities in the State, in addition to fourteen districts in Philadelphia and four in Pittsburgh. In practically every instance, the rates are from 50 to 100 per cent. higher for the colored than for the white policy holders. For the entire State the claim rates were 12.4 for the white in 1917, and 15.7 for the colored. In Allentown, Erie, Johnstown, McKeesport and York, the rate for the colored was practically double that for the white, although in Bristol, Pottstown, Pottsville and Scranton, it was appreciably lower. There claim rates, of course, must be viewed in the light of varying sex and age characteristics of the several groups, and of the degree to which the company has developed its nursing service in the district.

Examining the claim rates by cause of death, the same differences appear as are evident from the general mortality statistics of the State. Deaths from typhoid fever, tuberculosis and pneumonia, show decidedly higher rates for the colored, while communicable diseases, cancer, cerebral hemorrhage and external causes are somewhat lower.

In 1910 there were 193,919 negroes in Pennsylvania, an increase of 23.6 per cent. over the number in 1900. The great majority of the 108,186 who were gainfully occupied, were unskilled laborers, servants, teamsters and laundresses—belonging to a group where standards of wages, housing and occupation subject them to special hazards. Philadelphia in 1910 ranked fifth among the cities of over 100,000 population in which lived more than 1,000 negroes, and the increase had been 34.9 per cent. over the number in 1900. In Pittsburgh the increase had been 25.9 per cent. It is probable that since 1910 the increase in the negro population has been much greater. As Dr. Miller says, unless drastic measures are taken to improve health conditions, the negro population may become a serious danger.

The newer immigrants from overseas appear in the Philadelphia survey to have a lower sickness rate than the whole area surveyed. The district inhabited by Jews, Poles and Austrians had a sickness rate of 3.88 per cent.; the Italian district, one of 3.23 per cent., (1) as against the average rate of 4.28 found in the survey.

Considerable variation in different localities is brought out by the sickness rates for various towns in the Western Pennsylvania survey (2) The highest rate for white persons is 2.22 per cent. in Uniontown, the lowest, 1.56 in Braddock, a difference of 42 per cent. What the main factors in producing such a difference may be, whether race, age distribution, epidemic, occupation, or general sanitary conditions, we have at present no means of knowing.

As a rule, however, it would seem that in the industrial communities of the State and the parts of large cities inhabited chiefly by wage earners, the sickness rates are much higher than in residential sections. In the Western Pennsylvania survey the six highest sickness rates in the fifteen districts enumerated were those for Uniontown, 2.22; Altoona, 2.16; Scranton, 2.10; Shamokin, 2.08; McKeesport, 1.95, and Shenandoah, 1.88. Death rates indicate the same tendency. For instance, the United States Public Health Service shows that the death rate throughout the United States registration area in 1913 was 14.1 per 1,000 of population, but in Johnstown it was 16.9, in McKees Rocks, 16.9; in Shenandoah, 18.9, and in Braddock, 23.2. (2) It is further stated that "As it is generally recognized that mortality returns in localities of this type are more or less incomplete, it is safe to say that the rates cited are lower than more thorough and complete vital statistics would show."

This fact is brought out particularly by studies of infant death rates, and of the death rates of the professional vs. the wage earning groups in various communities.

An interesting comparison is made by Dr. Hayhurst in his study of occupational diseases in Ohio, between the death rates among members of the professional class, and those in a wage earning group. Six preventable causes of death were taken and a higher death rate was found from each of the six, among the wage earning group. The death rates from "tuberculosis" and "accidents and injuries" for the wage earning group were more than double those for the professional group.

A comparison of rural and urban death rates indicates that while the urban death rate is higher than the rural, within the last ten years greater decreases in this rate have been effected in cities than in country districts. In Pennsylvania both the rural and the urban rates are higher than the corresponding rates for the registration area as a whole. From 1906 to 1916 the decrease of the urban death rate in the State was three times as great as the decrease in the rural districts.

Extent of Sickness as Shown by the General Death Rates in Pennsylvania.

The extent of sickness in the State can be roughly estimated by a study of death rates, since mortality statistics are considered to some extent an index of morbidity rates. Pennsylvania has been part of the United States registration area for death rates since 1906, and it is therefore possible to study the death rates in the State from that year. The last published rates are those for 1916, obtained from the census volume on Mortality Statistics. Unfortunately the last published report of the State Board of Health is for 1914.

In spite of a general decrease in the death rate, certain most alarming features are evident. In Pennsylvania the death rate as a whole fell from 16.0 per 1,000 of the population in 1906 to 14.6 in 1916, or 8.7 per cent. (1) But the rate in Pennsylvania from diseases of the circulatory system rose from 149.3 to 189.8 per 100,000, or 27.1 per cent., and for genito-urinary diseases (non-venereal) from 101.1 to 120.5 per 100,000, or 19.1 per cent.

In 1916, Pennsylvania showed a higher death rate in nine of the fourteen groups in the international classification of diseases than the rate for the registration area. The general death rate per 1,000 population in 1916 was 13.9 for the registration area, and 14.6 for Pennsylvania. The greatest difference was between the rates for deaths from diseases of the respiratory system, where Pennsylvania had a rate of 202.3 per 100,000 and the registration area 165.4. Between 1915 and 1916 in Pennsylvania marked increases in the death rates are noted in nine of the fourteen international disease classifications.

Marked increases were noted in Chester, the general death rate being 21.1 per thousand in 1916, whereas it had been 16.1 in 1915; in Philadelphia the rate increased from 15.6 in 1915 to 16.2 in 1916 and showed a further increase in 1917 to 17.1, higher than either the New York or the Chicago rate. In Pittsburgh the rate was higher and the increase more rapid. In 1915 it was 15.2; in 1916 it rose to 17.4 and in 1917 to 18.1.

The most significant decreases in the death rate in the last ten years have been made in those diseases which can be controlled in large measures by community action. Typhoid fever dropped from 54.8 per 100,000 in the State in 1906 to 13.6 per 100,000 in 1916. Most of this decrease has been in the urban rate. In Philadelphia the rate has fallen from 74.3 to 7.6, and in one year, 1914, it was reduced from 15.7 to 7.6. In Pittsburgh the rate from typhoid has fluctuated from 141.1 in 1906 to 9.0 in 1916.

In a study published in 1916, called "The Sanitary Index," (2) Dr. Batt expresses the opinion that the decline in the death rate during the last ten years is not satisfactory outside "those diseases that are the objects of sanitary attack." He enumerates among the latter the "acute communicable diseases of epidemic type," infant mortality, and tuberculosis. These diseases form "the adopted field of public health activities," and the death-rate from them is termed "the Sanitary Index." The death-rate from the other diseases, which make up about three-fifths of the total mortality, is called the "residual death-rate." Dr. Batt points out that while the "sanitary index" decreased from 6.5 to 4.5 per 1,000, or 30.8 per cent., between 1906 and 1915, the "residual death-rate" fell only from 9.5 to 9.3 or 2.1 per cent. It increased in second and third-class cities and in boroughs of less than 10,000 population. Dr. Batt concludes:

"It is therefore apparent that almost the entire reduction that has taken place in the general death rate has been due to the decline in the deaths from those diseases that are the objects of sanitary attack.

"By the segregation of the causes of death into two groups we are also bringing into due prominence through the residual death rate the necessity for safeguarding industrial workers and for personal hygiene on the part of individuals. . . . Old age should be the pre-eminent cause to be attained in this group." (3)

In other words, the death-rate gives direct evidence of the greatest need for discovering ways and means to protect the lives of industrial workers whose health now is the least carefully preserved and is subject to the greatest hazards.

In a study of death rates in the State from the four special causes which most emphasize the community's responsibility for health conditions, typhoid fever, tuberculosis of the lungs, diarrhea and enteritis, and accidents

we find that in Pennsylvania the rates are higher for three out of four of these causes than are the corresponding rates for the registration area. (1)

The rates for all four causes of death decreased materially during the ten year period, but in every case they increased alarmingly between 1915 and 1916; diarrhea and enteritis from 90.7 to 101.7, accidents from 92.6 to 107.8, typhoid fever from 12.3 to 13.6, tuberculosis of the lungs from 110.6 to 112.3 per 100,000. Although these four causes accounted for approximately one-fifth of the total number of deaths in the State in 1916, and the death-rate from diarrhea and enteritis is the most important factor in determining the infant death rate. In 1916 in the registration area this was the cause of almost 25 per cent. of the deaths under one year of age.

The possible power of control over these four causes of death is well illustrated by the reductions which individual districts have succeeded in making. Typhoid fever has been spoken of. Just as marked is the reduction in the rate from accidents which Pittsburgh and Scranton made in the ten year period 1906-1916, or the decrease in deaths from diarrhea and enteritis effected in Philadelphia, during the same period. (2) The rate from diseases of the puerperal State in Pennsylvania increased from 16.9 per 100,000 in 1906 to 18.0 in 1916. The figures of the Philadelphia Bureau of Vital Statistics show that in 1917 there were in the city 259 deaths of women from diseases of the puerperal state. Since the total number of births was 43,000, this makes a rate of over six per thousand—or over 600 per 100,000 births.

The crying necessity for improved maternity care is clearly illustrated by these figures. The United States Children's Bureau estimates that over half the deaths from causes connected with childbirth are preventable. The time of confinement is the most critical period in the lives of both mothers and babies, and every means should be used to provide protection for these lives at this crucial time. Not only may the future health of the particular child depend upon this care, but the lives and health of many more potential babies whose strength so often is permanently impaired through inadequate care of the mother at childbirth.

Infant Death-Rate.

Since infant mortality is truly, as it has been called by the great English authority, Sir Arthur Newsholme, "the most sensitive index we possess of social welfare and of sanitary administration," than, indeed, health conditions in Pennsylvania demand improvement, and never before so insistently. The war is teaching us conservation on every hand, but particularly the conservation of the lives of those who must carry on the ideals for which our soldiers went to death—the lives of little children, upon whom rest the future of the Nation. And in so far as Pennsylvania has been extraordinarily wasteful in the past, she must now make every effort to make good the loss, and allow no life to be needlessly sacrificed. What once might have been considered a humanitarian task now become a patriotic necessity. President Wilson, in approving the plan for "Children's Year" recently inaugurated by the Children's Bureau and the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense, said:

"Next to the duty of doing everything possible for the soldiers at the front, there could be, it seems to me, no more patriotic duty than that of protecting the children, who constitute one-third of our population."

"The success of the efforts made in England in behalf of the children is evidenced by the fact that the infant death rate in England for the second year of the war was the lowest in her history. Attention is now being given to education and labor conditions by the legislatures of both France and England, showing that the conviction among the Allies is that the protection of childhood is essential in winning the war."

The infant death rate in Pennsylvania in 1916 was 110 per 1,000 births; in 1916, 114 per 1,000. The county having the lowest rate in 1915 was Cameron, with 53 per 1,000 the highest, Fayette, with 160 per 1,000. (3) In 1917, the death rate for children less than a year old was higher in Philadelphia than in any other city of similar size (over 1,000,000) in the United States. The rate in Philadelphia was 101.0 per 1,000 living births in 1916. This increased

(1) Table XIX at the end of this section gives the death rates in Pennsylvania for the various classes of diseases between 1906 and 1916.

(2) Pennsylvania Health Bulletin, February, 1916.

(3) While Dr. Batt includes tuberculosis in the "sanitary index," Dr. Miller, of the Philadelphia Bureau of Health, states that "The tuberculosis death rate remains practically constant with little fluctuation from year to year."

to 110 in 1917. The rate in Brooklyn in 1917 was 84.9 and in New York 88.8. The rate for the registration area as a whole was 101. The Pittsburgh rate in 1917 was 116.2. This was the second highest rate for any city in the country of 150,000 population.

Every city in the United States with a population of over 500,000 had a material decrease in the infant mortality rate between 1916 and 1917 with the exception of Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Baltimore. The increases in both Philadelphia and Pittsburgh were much greater than in Baltimore, although the Baltimore rate was higher. In 1916 and 1917 the infant mortality rate in Pittsburgh formed 18 per cent. of the total mortality. Among cities having less than 50,000 population Norristown had the highest rate in the country in 1917—167.7 per 1,000. Five cities of similar size had infant death rates in 1917 of less than 50 per 1,000.

A comparison of these shamefully increasing Pennsylvania rates with those shown by countries where intelligent and patriotic measures are being taken to preserve the lives of children by adequate preventive measures is illuminating. The infant mortality rate in England in 1916 was only 91 per 1,000, the lowest in her whole history, while New Zealand succeeded in reducing her infant deaths from 80 per 1,000 in 1907 to 50 in 1915.

The differential death rate between industrial and residential localities is particularly marked in connection with infant mortality. For instance, in Pittsburgh, in the year ending April 1, 1916, the infant death rate in the crowded twenty-second ward was 135.9. In the fifteenth, along the river in a mill district, it was 121.9. In the seventh and the fourteenth wards, which are high-grade residential sections, it was 60.4 and 89.5 respectively. (1)

The United States Public Health Service found as marked an excess in the proportion of infant deaths in the iron and steel towns of the State as in the general death rate. In these towns, moreover, wage work by mothers of young children, to which high infant mortality is often attributed, was very infrequent; yet, while deaths of children under five formed 27 per cent. of all deaths in the United States registration area during the five-year period—1909-1913—10 per cent. and 17 per cent. in the residential towns of Brookline, Massachusetts and East Orange, New Jersey, they were 67 per cent. of all deaths in Monessen, 57 per cent. in Homestead, 55 per cent. in South Bethlehem, 51 per cent. in Braddock, 47 per cent. in Carnegie, 45 per cent. in Steelton, and 40 per cent. in Johnstown. (2)

The first of the well-known studies of infant mortality of the Federal Children's Bureau was made in Johnstown, and furnishes additional information on the dangerous state of Pennsylvania's infant death-rate. The investigation covered all of the Johnstown children born in 1911, who could be traced, and all death-rates are based on the number of this group who died within one year of birth.

There is a marked difference in that city also in the infant death-rates in residential and industrial sections. In the downtown section where the homes of many of the well-to-do are found, the rate of infant deaths was only 50 per 1,000. In Kernville, which also contained a large proportion of prosperous families, it was 57.7. The rate in Woodvale, among unskilled mill workers, was 271 per 1,000, and in Prospect, near one of the large steel plants, it was 200 per 1,000. The average rate for the city as a whole was 134 per 1,000. Other tabulations show the difference in the rate according to the kind of infant care. For mothers who were attended by physicians at confinement, the rate was 100.5, 93.2 for Americans and 139.7 for the foreign born, but the rate was 179.7 in all cases in which a midwife attended the birth, there being no appreciable difference in the rate between native and foreign-born. Most striking of all is the difference in the rate according to the income of the father. In cases where fathers had incomes of $521.00 a year or less, the rate of infant mortality was 197.3; it steadily declined in the higher income groups, reaching 102.2 in cases in which the father's annual income was $1,200.00 or more. (3)

The health problem then seems to be largely dependent upon the standards of living and the economic status of the family, and the responsibility for making these what they should be rests not only upon the individual effort but in a large measure upon the community.

The conclusion reached by the Children's Bureau is that:

"The Johnstown report shows a coincidence of underpaid fathers, overworked and ignorant mothers, and those hazards to the life of the offspring which individual parents cannot avoid or control because they must be remedied by community action."

A similar need exists in many other places besides Johnstown. The problem will no doubt be rendered more acute by the inevitable influx of married women into industry as the war continues. Even in the last year or two before the war, the rising cost of living caused many mothers to take up work outside their homes.

It is now especially imperative that the state increase its efforts to provide more adequate maternity care and to conserve the lives of mothers and babies.

KINDS OF SICKNESS.

Evidence as to the relative prevalence of various kinds of diseases may be drawn from facts in the various surveys and records and from the only official sickness statistics in the state, those of "reportable" diseases. Owing to differences in the way in which they are collected, the significance of these figures must not be exaggerated, but certain facts stand out in such a striking manner that they seem worthy of mention.

The first point of special interest is that apparently the beginnings of many chronic diseases receive no attention. One of these is tuberculosis of the lungs.

In the Western Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh Surveys no attempt was made to record any except serious and disabling ailments, but in the case of tuberculosis the investigators attempted to note not only all cases which involved incapacity for work or were receiving treatment away from home in a tuberculosis sanitarium, but all who were personally aware of their condition. Thus the chances are that practically all cases receiving treatment were recorded. Yet, although this disease caused 7.6 per cent. of the total deaths in the state in 1916, it accounted for only 4.0 per cent. of the illnesses found in the two surveys, apparently confirming the statement made in the report, that "it is evident that there must have been a large number of undiagnosed cases of tuberculosis among the groups surveyed by our agents."

According to Dr. Emery R. Hayhurst, of the Ohio State Board of Health, "investigations in Ohio show that there are seven cases of tuberculosis to every death," (1) and there is no reason to believe that conditions in Pennsylvania are radically different. In 1916, tuberculosis made up 22.1 per cent. of 52,306 cases of serious communicable diseases reported to the State Department of Health, (2) but during the same year it was responsible for 45.7 per cent. of the deaths from this same group of diseases. Among 1,200 widows and their families, cared for by the Mothers' Assistance Fund in 1914, tuberculosis had been responsible for the death of the father in 30 per cent. of the cases where the cause was known.

In the Philadelphia Survey, where a special effort was made to locate all tuberculosis suspects, the disease made up 7.4 per cent. of those reported; and over 2 per cent. of all the persons surveyed were noted as suspected cases; in the Visiting Nurse Society Study it accounted for 5.7 per cent. of the cases. In two of the negro districts in the Philadelphia Survey, the percentage of cases of tuberculosis were 14.7 and 8.3 per cent. of the whole population.

Organic heart disease and other diseases of the circulatory system seem also to escape recognition and early treatment. The first of these accounted for 9.9 per cent. of the deaths in Pennsylvania in 1916, but made up only 2.8 per cent. of the illnesses in the Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania Surveys and 4.2 per cent. of those in the Philadelphia

Survey. All diseases of the circulatory system accounted for only 3.67 per cent. of the illness cases in the surveys for which they were recorded, but made up more than 13 per cent. of the causes of death in the state on 1916.

The same evidence seems also to apply to cancer, which caused 5.2 per cent. of the deaths in 1916, but claimed only .86 per cent. of the diseases in the surveys where it was reported at all.

These ailments of course are not easily detected in their incipient stages and do not cause complete disability for work until well advanced. For this reason, some cases may have been receiving treatment, but may not have been considered serious enough to mention to the investigators. It is probable, however, that in most instances the diseases had not been recognized.

In a group of four surveys, the Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania, the Philadelphia, the Visiting Nurse Society and the Sickness and Dependency, twelve disabilities account for 66.4 per cent. of the total cases of illness. These are in the order named, accidents and injuries, tuberculosis, influenza, "other respiratory diseases," children's diseases, stomach and digestive disorder, diseases of the puerperal state, rheumatism, pneumonia, nervous disability, heart and circulatory diseases, and typhoid fever. Their relative importance in the four studies varies somewhat, but on the whole, accidents and injuries, tuberculosis, rheumatism and digestive diseases may be said to be the most frequent causes of disability among the employees themselves, diseases of the puerperal state, among the housekeepers, and "children's diseases," among the dependents. The comparatively small proportion disabled because of industrial accidents in the Sickness and Dependency Study bears out the statement of social workers that since the enactment of the Workmen's Compensation Law, the number of families suffering from such disability who come to seek charitable aid is much reduced.

Tuberculosis accounted for 18.2 per cent. of the illness in this study, and for more than 25 per cent. of the cases of disability of the wage-earner. 58 per cent. of all the cases of tuberculosis were wage-earners, and 21 per cent. were housekeepers.

Next in importance came diseases of the puerperal state, which covered 9.2 per cent. of the total illnesses of the group, and 31 per cent. of the housekeepers' disabilities. Within this dependent group these two ailments were more than three times as serious as in other surveys. This affords again confirmation of a well known fact, that tuberculosis and illness connected with child birth all too frequently drive wage-earners' families to seek charitable relief.

An application for charitable aid means, in practically every instance, a period of strain and struggle, and a decline in the standard of living before the appeal is made, conditions which in maternity cases are directly harmful to the health of both mother and child. Yet the crisis of child-birth is one of the periods when families are most likely to be forced into dependency, and the integrity of the family group to be threatened at a time when it is most important that it should be maintained.

The inability of many families to meet this crisis unaided is again emphasized by a special study of 418 illness cases cared for by two large relief organizations and studied by the Bureau for Social Research. In this study, 24 per cent. of the mothers were ill as a result of child-bearing, while in the Western Pennsylvania Survey less than one-tenth of one per cent. of the women of child-bearing age were disabled from this cause. The Bureau for Social Research found that the two main disabilities in the group studied were tuberculosis and child-birth; 28 per cent. of the mothers and 48 per cent. of the fathers were tubercular.

From the investigations made, it is evident that the sickness rate in the state and especially in the industrial centers and in the large cities, the striking evidence of lack of adequate maternity care, and the failure to prevent, by thorough public health measures, the beginnings and spread of well-known chronic degenerative diseases, all point to the existence of a sickness problem that Pennsylvania cannot afford to ignore.

PART II.—SECTION II.

Losses Due to Sickness.

Losses to Employes.

The chief losses to employes from sickness embrace their loss of time and, consequently, of wages during absence from work on account of sickness, the cost of medical care for themselves and their dependents, and the possible loss of future working power. To form any judgment on the seriousness of such losses, it is necessary first to get an idea of the economic status of the employes in Pennsylvania, their wage-rates, the amount of unemployment, and the minimum cost of healthful living.

The present is a peculiarly difficult time to secure any such facts. Wage readjustments, especially in the many war industries of Pennsylvania, are frequent, while the cost of living is rising to record heights. An attempt will be made to give very briefly the situation in 1914, just before the European war, which may be regarded as comparatively normal. The wage rates for 1916, compiled especially for the Commission by the Department of Labor and Industry have been used to suggest the earlier effects of the European war, and certain facts have been gathered on recent changes since America entered the conflict.

The 1914 wage statistics published by the Department of Labor and Industry covered 20,571 establishments in the various forms of manufacturing, the building trades, and "horticultural and floricultural products." A comparatively small number of "mines and quarries," excluding coal mines, were also included. The average yearly wage for all males was $720, or $14.40 a week. The lowest wage, $323, was found in "engineering and laboratory service," but this covered only a few establishments. Next came "mines" with $469—probably at this low level because of the amount of slack time—and "tobacco and its products," with $512. The highest annual wages, $1,002, were received in "liquors and beverages," and the "printing trades" were second with $865. The average annual wage for all females was $335, slightly over $6 a week, with somewhat less striking variations from trade to trade than was the case with males. For boys under sixteen it was $224 and for girls of the same age, $191. The average for all "salaried and office help" was $1,207. (1)

A joint investigation by the Consumers' League of Eastern Pennsylvania and the State Department of Labor and Industry, of the wages of women in five Philadelphia department stores, carried on between November 15, 1913, and June 15, 1914, showed that in this occupation 16.5 per cent. of the women received less than $5 a week, 63.8 per cent. more between $5 and $10 and only 3.2 per cent. $15 or over.

No figures could be obtained for the wages of farm help, but the present shortage of farm labor has emphasized the fact that they range lower than in the factories.

The "average annual wages" make allowance for reduction for unemployment which, it will be remembered, was especially prevalent in 1914. An unemployment census of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company policyholders in Philadelphia indicated that there were in the city at that time 79,000 persons out of work and 150,000 more on part time, or about 30 per cent. of all wage-earners. This was, of course, the result of "hard times," but Mr. Joseph H. Willitts, discussing these and other figures on the extent of unemployment in Philadelphia, stated that normally much unemployment and part-time employment were to be found in its principal industries such as textiles, clothing and railroad equipment, due to the increasing tendency to manufacture only on order. (2).

The same factor making for irregular employment is evident under ordinary peace-time conditions in the iron and steel industry in the western part of the State. The dependence of the coal miners on the supply of cars is likewise well-known. It is commonly estimated that they normally have work for about two-thirds of the time.

Food prices had not in 1914 begun their present rapid increase but had risen slowly about 25 per cent. since 1907, so that the average wage, $2.40 a day, in 1914 was, in terms of the cost of food, equivalent to less than $2 a day in 1907.

From figures supplied by the Department of Labor and Industry, a special compilation was made of the percentage of wage-earners in various wage-groups in 1915 for the following leading industries of the State—building and contracting, textiles, metal products (preparation of raw materials), metal products (finished products), and anthracite and bituminous coal. (1) In these industries, only a sixth of the males covered received less than $15. Wages seemed to be somewhat above the average in the bituminous coal industry, where 32.0 per cent. had weekly wages between $15 and $18. They were especially low in the textile industries, in which 50.2 per cent. of the males earned less than $12 a week. The latter was the only one of this group of industries in which large numbers of females were employed, five-eighths of whom received between $5 and $10 a week.

During 1915 and 1916, the industrial depression was succeeded by a boom in the many Pennsylvania establishments having war contracts for the Allies, and the average daily wage for males in the industries covered by the Production Report of the Department of Labor and Industry was slightly higher in 1916 than in 1914, $2.76 instead of $2.40. (2). For females the rise reported was from $1.11 to $1.30. In the latter year, "steam railways," and "street railways" were included in a "public service" classification which was added to the list of occupations covered. The average daily wage of males in this group was $2.56. Variations between the different trades were similar to those in 1914.

The entrance of the United States into the war, feverish activity in all war industries, many wage readjustments, including some by specially-formed government boards, along with a never-ceasing rise in the cost of living, are the chief features affecting the economic status of the employes of the state during the past year and a half. It is probable that any gain in the real wages of employes during the period is rather the result of steadier work and of overtime than of higher wage-rates. Wages in the shipbuilding yards were fixed by the Shipbuilding Labor Adjustment Board on March 1, 1918, at about sixty to seventy-five cents an hour for skilled craftsmen, forty-five cents for helpers, and thirty-five cents for common laborers, with time and a half for all overtime between forty-four and sixty hours a week. This means about $30 a week for the skilled man, $20 for the helper and $16 for common labor, with the possibility of $15, $10 or $8 more for overtime. The railway wage increase dating from January 1, 1918, applied to employes of railroads in Pennsylvania as well as in other sections, and provided graduated increases of from 43 per cent. for those earning $50 a month or less, to nothing for those earning $250 or more. In 1916 and 1917 five increases totalling 60.6 per cent. have been granted in the iron and steel industry. The organized anthracite coal miners sought and obtained a raise of 10 per cent. in the spring of 1917 on the ground of the increased cost of living. A previous per cent. increase in 1916, was the first since 1912.

No student of wages is surprised at these low figures. After a most exhaustive study of wealth distinction, Dr. Willford I. King estimated that in 1910, 95 per cent. of the families of the continental United States had incomes of less than $2,000 a year; that 82 per cent. had incomes of less than $1,200, and that 69 per cent. were living on less than $1,000. (3)

The wages found in the study of infant mortality in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, showed that in 63.5 per cent. of the 1,491 families, the father was earning less than $1,200 a year. In only 33 per cent. was the income designated as "ample." This study included rich and poor alike, and covered the homes of all babies born in 1911 in that city, with no regard for district or circumstances.

Wage statistics obtained in the various surveys (4) available showed figures at wide variance with the common statement that "all wages have increased 100 per cent."

In January and February, 1918, a study was made of four representative blocks in Manhattan, and wage figures for 377 self-supporting families were obtained. The incomes of these families in 40 per cent. of the cases had increased between January, 1917, and January, 1918. In another 40 per cent. no increase had come, and in 20 per cent. an actual decrease had been suffered. There were 574 wage earners in these families; the wages of 31 per cent. had increased; 57 per cent. had had no increase, and 12 per cent. had had their wages decreased. Yet in January, 1918, in New York the cost of living had so risen that a dollar had only four-fifths the purchasing power which it had in January, 1917.

In the Philadelphia survey which covered 1850 families in seven districts in Philadelphia the average family income was but $21.60 a week, and almost a third of these families contained over five persons—the normal standard.

In the Visiting Nurse study, 80.6 per cent. of the 438 families had incomes of less than $30.00 a week. In the Sickness and Dependency study 94.3 per cent. of the families had incomes of less than this amount.

Wages for women, proverbially lower than those for men, proved in the Working Women's study to be in 98.1 per cent. of the cases under $25.00 a week; in 92 per cent. of the cases, under $20.00.

In the Pittsburgh factory investigation, made in August-November, 1918, covering the work places of over 9,000 women, it was found that in 70 per cent. of the operation the wages were between $5.00 and $15.00 per week. In only two processes were the weekly wages over $25.00.

In a study made by the Consumers' League in New York in 1916-17, among 417 women working in steam laundries, it was found that 78.3 per cent. earned less than $10.00 a week, and almost half earned less than $8.00.

The Kensington survey, which covered the most representative industrial group, showed that more than half—56.5 per cent. of the 608 families—had incomes under $30.00 a week. Forty-two per cent. were living on less than $25.00 a week.

A very comprehensive statement of recent wage changes has just been published by Hugh S. Hanna and W. Jett Lauck. (1) As the result of an intensive study of the records and publications of various state and national departments, and several first-hand investigations, they find that the rise in wages between 1914-15 and December, 1917, or January, 1918, was only 18 per cent. for anthracite miners, 26 per cent. for machinists in the Philadelphia Navy Yard, 30 per cent. for bituminous miners working by hand, and 34.36 and 37 per cent. respectively for shipments, shipfitters and pipefitters in the Philadelphia Navy Yard. The rise in the building trades was but 12 to 20 per cent. Some industries had actual decreases, and some remained almost stationary. The chief industries in which exceptional gains occurred during this same period were bituminous mining by machine, 39 per cent. various occupations in the iron and steel industry, 60 to 67 per cent., and certain classes of labor in the shipyards on the Delaware River, 65 to 105 per cent. (2)

In commenting on "the Effect of the War on Wages" they state:

"During the past few years, and more particularly during the period of the war, there has been an increase in money wages in practically all branches of American industry. But there has been absolutely no uniformity in the rate of increase. In some trades there have been wage advances that a little while ago would have appeared wildly incredible. In others the advances have been very moderate—little, if any, greater than had occurred during a period of equal length in the preceding years of peace.

The great advances have taken place in those lines of industry for the products of which the war has created a special demand.—In some industries, such as printing, the war made no special demands; in still others it had a depressing effect. Many individual workers in these trades, of course, profited by transferring themselves to war industries,—but this is not always the case." (3)

In contrast to this wage situation, we find a steady increase in the prices of food, fuel and the other necessities of life. According to the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, retail food prices in Philadelphia were 68.09 per cent. higher in August, 1918 than in December, 1914. (1)

The greatest increases occurred in the items of clothing and house furnishing. These all increased over a hundred per cent.

Philadelphia was included in the studies of the increase in cost of living recently completed in shipbuilding centers by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The measurement of increase is based on a study of price fluctuations for five groups of expenditures—food, rent, fuel and light, clothing and sundries. The increased cost of living was found by combining the increased cost of each of these five classes, after this cost had been weighed according to its relative importance in the budget.

According to the figures for Philadelphia the cost of living for white families based on these necessities, had risen 67.17 per cent. in August, 1918, over the cost in December, 1914. (2)

In New York this increase was 62.07 per cent. The increase in New York has been computed up to December, 1918, and is 75 per cent. If Philadelphia costs increased in like manner, the cost of living was in December, 1918, 80.10 per cent. higher than in December, 1914. The cost of living in Philadelphia was found by the investigators to be higher than in New York, Boston or Chicago.

Wholesale figures tell a more startling story. From July 1, 1914, to April 1, 1918, the wholesale prices of forty-six commodities given in Bradstreet's Trade Journal showed a rise of 115 per cent.

The standard "Minimum of subsistence" budgets made in New York of $845, (3) $876 (4) and $900 (5) for a family of five, become in June, 1918, $1,320, $1,360, and $1,390, respectively.

The Philadelphia Bureau of Municipal Research stated in December, 1917, that the necessary minimum cost of healthful living for a family of two adults and three children was $1,200 a year. In the cost of living study which this bureau is now completing, the minimum budget will be between $1,625 and $1,650. (6)

The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates that in November, 1918, the minimum necessary for subsistence for an average family in a large eastern city is about $1,500, and the National War Labor Board drew up a "minimum comfort" budget in June, 1918, which amounted to $1,760 per year for a family of five. (7)

In spite of rumors of universally increased wages, in New York City, the percentage of undernourished school children had more than doubled in 1916-17 as compared with 1914. Five per cent. of the children studied in 1914 were "seriously" undernourished. In 1916-17, 12 per cent. were so affected. (8)

A few employers have made provision for periodic increases in wages, in accordance with the increase in the cost of living. For the most part, however, the wage increases have been wholly unstandardized, except when fixed by the government. On July 12, 1918, the National War Labor Board fixed a minimum of 40 cents an hour for unskilled laborers in a machine shop at Waynesboro, Pa., stating that this was the smallest sum for which a laborer could support a family.

On the 23rd of November, 1918, in Kensington, 2,000 carpet weavers went out on strike, claiming that they could not live on their pay, which averaged $25.00 a week, and asking for an increase of $15.00.

It is significant that in 76.5 per cent. of 1,156 strikes, occurring during the first six months of the war, and studied by the National Industrial Conference Board, the demand was for increased wages, and 38.5 per cent. of these strikes were called for this reason alone. The Conference

Board states first, among the causes responsible for these strikes, the "increased cost of living and failure of employers in many cases to anticipate this influence." The second cause of primary importance is the "widespread discontent due to a belief that undue profits had been made by employers out of war business," and the third is the "inequality between wages paid in plants engaged on private work and government or private plants engaged on war work." (1)

It is evident that the wages of Pennsylvania employees during the past four years have shown uneven fluctuations, varying from increases of 105 per cent. in certain war industries to less than 20 per cent. in a considerable number of others, to actual decreases in a few cases. Meanwhile the cost of the necessary articles which poor as well as rich must buy has steadily increased, until today, at the very least it is 75 per cent. higher than it was in December, 1914. The effect of such conditions on the ability of wage-earners to accumulate savings with which to meet periods of sickness needs no explanation. And yet, as every survey has shown, sickness with its accompanying losses is a risk certain in too many instances to bankrupt the family that has made no adequate provision for it.

Loss of Working Time on Account of Sickness.

An average of six days lost from work by each employee each year on account of sickness, which was the low figure reached in the first section on the extent of sickness, may not seem a particularly long period. It looms larger, perhaps, when it is realized that the 2,800,000 wage-earners (2) in the State are losing 16,800,000 days a year through sickness. The coal miners are losing 2,142,000 days, in which time four and one-half million tons of coal could be extracted.

In the study of the families coming to the Visiting Nurse Society, 13,528 working days were lost during the year by 201 wage-earners. This means an average of sixty-seven days for each of them, or nineteen days for each wage-earner in the study, sick or well. Of this lost time, almost one-third was lost by only nine men. Only 40 per cent. of the 201 wage-earners lost less than two weeks, and 46 per cent. of them lost from one to six months each.

In the Kensington survey, 411 cases of illness of wage-earners were noted. The average length per case was thirty-eight days, or over five weeks. According to the same survey, the average number of days illness per year for all persons was only 5.22 days. This comparatively short average period, together with the heavy burden of the actual illnesses would seem to indicate strongly that some method of equalizing and distributing the loss from illness would be desirable. Under present conditions, employees are either unable or unwilling to take time off for minor disabilities, so that illness when it does occur, is more serious and prolonged.

Loss of Money on Account of Sickness.

The figures on the duration of illnesses among employees give some indication of the wage loss. A total loss of wages almost always occurs during absence from work because of illness. Only the skilled workers and salaried employees are more fortunate; in fact, the average wage-earners may consider themselves fortunate if their places are saved for them until their return. In the study of Working Women, the wage was continued in only three instances, while in the 647 cases of the illness of a wage-earner among the families in the Sickness and Dependency study, the wage was continued in just one instance. In one other case a part of the wage was paid, and in thirty-three cases the employer gave some help as a matter of charity.

We may roughly reckon the total wage loss, therefore, for Pennsylvania employees for a year, as the average wage multiplied by the number of days lost. At 1916 rates this would average a little more than $14.00 per employee per year, or a total of $39,200,000 for the 2,800,000 employees in the State.

In the Kensington survey, the wage loss was reported in 367 cases of the illness of wage-earners. The average per case was $78.53, or more than a month's pay of a single wage-earner according to the family incomes found in the survey.

This is an average, giving no picture of the actual suffering of those who are sick for long periods. It tells little of the problem of Mr. R., a laborer earning $13.00 a week and supporting a wife and three little girls, eleven, nine and six, and a baby boy a year old. For more than two years, although suffering with tuberculosis, he kept on at work. But when his strength finally failed and he was sent to a State sanitarium, his family had no means of support, and although he was supposed to have contracted the disease in the course of his work, his employer gave but $10.00. For eight months the church and a relief society cared for the family, the latter contributing several hundred dollars.

It is easy to see that the average employee, unless he has other wage-earners in the family or relatives able to help him, may find the wage loss from illness alone an intolerable burden, eating up his savings, piling up debts and lowering his whole standard of living.

Cost of Medical Care.

Over and above the loss in wages must be reckoned the cost of medical care for employees and their families. Certain fee-schedules of the medical, dental and nursing professions and of hospitals are presented. Considering the professional skill and the responsibility involved, many of the fees are most moderate. They are given to show what employees in this State must pay, under present conditions, to receive medical care on an independent, full-cost basis. They cannot be taken to represent the actual charges made, but represent merely the standard minimum fee for regular professional services, exclusive of attention for specialists.

Physician's fee schedules, as published by various county medical societies, range from fifty cents to $5.00 for an office visit, and from $1 to $3 for a house call. Special rates are made for operations, and the lowest price for obstetrical services is $10.00. Many of these schedules are being revised and prices raised. In three counties a 40 to 50 per cent. increase has been announced. Rates are lower in the rural districts than in the cities. Dental rates throughout the State range from $3.00 to $5.00 an hour. When charges are determined by the nature of the work done, rather than by the time consumed, amalgam or cement fillings and treatments cost from $1.00 up; gold fillings, from $2.00; and bridge work, $8.00 to $12.00 per tooth. Trained nurses' fees are from $25.00 to $35.00 a week for ordinary cases, frequently with extra charges for nervous and obstetrical cases. Ward beds in hospitals cost from $10.00 to $14.00 a week, and a charge of $5.00 to $10.00 for the use of the operating room is customary. (1)

Naturally, many employees cannot pay these charges. As a result, we have physicians and hospitals giving service free, or at reduced rates, a host of medical or semi-medical charities, and throngs at the free dispensaries, as well as numerous cases of entire failure to receive medical care where it is sadly needed. Charity practice imposes an unjust burden upon the medical profession and undermines the self respect of the recipients to an extent which seems wholly inconsistent in a democracy.

What wage-earners and their families actually pay out for medical care in time of sickness has been ascertained from the available survey material.

Here again "average expenditures" give no idea of the real burden imposed. In the Visiting Nurse Society study for instance, more than half the expenditures for sickness was borne by less than one-seventh the number of families. While 29 per cent. of the families escaped with health expenditures of less than $10.00, fifty families spent over $100.00; ten spent over $300.00, and thirteen families had medical and dental expenditures amounting to more than 20 per cent. of their total incomes. In the study of Working Women's records, one-fourth of the total expenditures was made by only ten girls; the intolerable burden of the self-supporting working woman confronted with a bill of $685.00 for two operations needs no amplification.

Approximately one-third of the families studied in the various surveys had annual expenditures of more than $50.00. The largest single group spent between $20.00 and $30.00. (1)

Invariably the largest item of health expenditure was the cost of a physician's care. The following table classifying each detail, gives a fair idea of the proportion spent on different items by low-income families. The group of 260 families covered in the study were "self-supporting," but in no case was the principal wage-earner receiving an income of over $20.00:

AVERAGE ANNUAL HEALTH EXPENDITURES FOR VARIOUS OBJECTS. (2)

Objects of Expenditures.	Families Re- porting Expen- ditures.		All Fam- ilies (260).
	Number of families.	Average ex- penditure per family.

Dispensary charges	10	5.68	.22
Spectacles (and eye-glasses)	52	5.83	1.17
Unspecified	1	100.00	.38

This average expenditure of $32.50 per family, raised to 1918 figures, would become $37.00, if we may assume that health expenditures have risen in cost at the same rate as general household expenditures. (3) This is somewhat lower than average expenditures obtained in 1918 surveys. Among the Visiting Nurse Society families the average of the 363 reporting expenditures was over $47.00. For the Working Women the average for the 284 girls where expenditures were known was $27.78.

Special figures for the health expenditures of the Philadelphia and Chester families covered by the Cost of Living Study of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics were segregated for the commission. In Philadelphia 188 families out of 192 reported health expenditures—the average being $43.29. In Chester forty families reported an average of $48.93. The average cost of medical care alone was $36.23 in Philadelphia and $37.90 in Chester. Dental expenditures were much smaller—$13.83 and $16.98 respectively. In another study of the Cost of Living made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics the average annual health expenditure for 292 white families was $43.59; for 230 negro families the average was $20.19.

One of the most interesting items of expenditure is that for patent medicine. The large amount of patent medicine consumed by wage-earners and their families was one of the chief points which impressed the nurses who made the Visiting Nurse Society Study for the commission. Many families attempted to ward off the need and the expense of a physician by investing in patent medicines. In the Cost of Living Study of the Philadelphia Bureau of Municipal Research, 184 families out of 258 reported expenditures for medicine other than that prescribed by a physician. The average expenditure was over $5.00, and for all the families covered this average was $3.57, as against an average of $1.55 for the medicine which was prescribed. During the year ten families had spent over $20.00 on these patent medicines. Two families in the Sickness and Dependency Study reported that often $6.00 or $8.00 a month went for medicines, in the hope that cure would come and prevent further expense or an "out-of-work" period.

Especially interesting in this connection were the results of the survey of the Old Age Pensions Commission made in industrial districts of Pittsburgh, Reading and Philadelphia. Facts for men and women over fifty years of age were tabulated, and special items were secured for the Health Insurance Commission on expenditures for medicine. In the three cities figures on expenditures for medicine only were secured for 1,269 people. Three-fifths of these individuals had monthly expenditures for medicine. In 10.2 per cent. of the cases this monthly expenditure amounted to over $4.00, and in 3.6 per cent., to over $10.00. In Pittsburgh 16.5 per cent. of the 207 individuals for whom this information was secured, spent regularly an average of over $4.00 a month for "medicine only." In Reading, where information for 721 individuals was secured, the percentage spending over four dollars a month was 3.6; in Philadelphia it was 4.1 per cent. The injurious effect of the constant and haphazard use of medicines without medical advice is well known.

The average expenditures for health purposes in wage-earners' families seem to bear a direct relation to the amount of income. In a study in 1917 by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics health expenditures for a group of families in Washington were tabulated. The average expenditure increased as the income increased:

Number of Families.	Average Annual Income.	Average Expendi- ture for Medi- cal Care.
46	Less than $600.00	12.83
117	$600.00 to $900.00	25.52
167	$900.00 to $1,200.00	42.31
198	$1,200.00 to $1,500.00	43.16
191	$1,500.00 and over	59.57

The cost of medical care comes many times as an emergency and places upon the individual a burden out of all proportion to his responsibility. The problem is one of a just method of distribution.

Loss of Future Earning Power.

The possible loss of future earning power is the most important risk of the wage earner. Unless he is rehabilitated, he himself, his family and society all suffer irretrievably. The temporary loss of wages and the cost of medical care are indeed minor matters compared with the prospect of facing the future obliged to support himself and his dependents on reduced earning power, or unable to support them at all.

Any attempt to aid in the solution of the sickness problem must have as its goal the complete restoration of the sick man or woman to health. To this end, immediate and adequate medical, surgical and institutional care must be made available, and the contingency of suspension of earnings during the periods necessary for recovery must be met. This is but justice to the disabled person, to industry and to the community at large.

Losses to Industry Because of Sickness of Employees.

Industry has not generally counted among its costs of operation, the losses which it suffers because sickness daily keeps thousands of employees from work, sends others to their places in a partially disabled condition, and every year permanently unfits hundreds of men and women for productive effort. Because of the lack of accurate records, it is impossible to exactly measure the extent of this enormous industrial loss, but from our knowledge of the extent and seriousness of disease among wage earners, and from the testimony of those few employers who have come to realize that the good health of their work people is an essential to business success, we can draw some conclusions.

The fact that every year Pennsylvania's working men and women lose over sixteen million working days because of illness gives some indication of the coal that is not loaded,

(1) Table VII at end of section gives the exact distribution of medical and dental expenditures.

(3) Authorized statement of William C. Beyer, director of the study.

the rivets that are not driven, the seams that are not welded, because the workers are away, sick. The coal mines alone lose at this rate 2,142,000 working days—time enough to mine four and one-half million tons of coal, sufficient to supply the city of Philadelphia for a year and a half. And to that must be added the wastage and inefficient work of that large number of employees, who, although really sick, "cannot afford to lose the time." The work done by such half-sick or, as often happens, by seriously sick men, is almost certain to be inferior in quality and the danger of industrial accidents is greatly increased by their presence. In the majority of such cases, no medical care is secured, powers of resistance are weakened, and susceptibility to disease is increased. Often chronic disease develops from an illness which would have amounted to little if treated in its incipient stages.

The recent influenza epidemic reduced the anthracite coal output of the State 500,000 tons in the course of a few weeks. "It went raging through the mines, striking down thousands of men, killing some, leaving others so weak that they will not be themselves for months." (1) Because it was spectacular, this loss was widely appreciated and commented upon—but no attention is paid to the steady, never-ceasing inroads made on production of all kinds of non-epidemic sickness. We are so accustomed to it that we do not realize what could be accomplished without the hampering influence of that full half of it which could be entirely prevented.

In co-operation with the Ohio Health and Old Age Insurance Commission, the record cards of 115,648 members of the Voluntary Relief Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad (East) were examined by the commission, and all illnesses and industrial accidents for which benefits had been paid to these members during the five years, 1913-1917, were tabulated, as it was impossible to tell which men had been members of the department during the entire period, no sickness rate could be obtained from the study, but the duration of each of the 27,055 cases of industrial accident and 64,849 cases of sickness was recorded. For 1917 the cards examined showed 5,103 industrial accidents and 13,023 cases of sickness, each of which was of less than 100 days duration. The total number of working days lost through the accidents was 60,215, while the sickness cases caused a loss of 165,002 working days. In addition, there were tabulated 111 industrial accidents and 236 cases of sickness, each of which lasted longer than 100 days. When we see that the total number of sickness cases tabulated in the annual report of the Relief Fund for 1917 is 62,744, or more than four and one-half times the number which the commission studied for that year, we realize the tremendous loss to this one company alone through sickness among its employees.

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company of Pittsburgh also has a relief department, whose records show that for the month of August, 1915, members of the department lost 6,654 days because of sickness. This was not an abnormal month, but records for other months were not available.

Specifically, sickness has a close relation to several factors whose bearing on production and prosperity is important. Not only the casual laborer, but the skilled mechanic, engineer or miner is attacked by disease. The absence of such an employe, or the attempt to replace him with a new or inexperienced worker, causes serious loss through reduction in output, spoilage of material and incomplete use of machinery, lighting and heating equipment. In many industries it costs from $30 to $50 to hire and initiate a new employe, and in the case of a skilled mechanic the cost may be as high as $300.00. In both the Kensington and the Visiting Nurse Studies, covering largely skilled and semi-skilled industrial workers, the average time lost by disabled employes was thirty-eight and sixty-nine days respectively; approximately half the illnesses in every group studied lasted longer than one month. In many such cases, the employer is forced to fill the place of the absent worker, and "labor turnover," one of the most costly factors in industry, is increased. Thomas I. Read, of the New Jersey Zinc Company's Technical Department, after a careful study of working-time lost on account of both sickness and accident states that, "As in the case of accidents, when the man is absent another man must be supplied to take his place, and this increases both the labor turnover and the accident rate; in other words it is a source of considerable loss to the company as well as to the man."

(1) Time lost by employes of this company through illness amounts to four times the loss from accidents.

Realization of the seriousness of the situation is compelling some employers largely as a business proposition to institute more or less complete medical care for sick employes, and to encourage the formation of establishment funds for the payment of cash sick benefits. The Bell Telephone System maintains entirely at its own expense a system of sickness insurance providing for the payment of sick benefits to sick employes. The rate and the duration of payment are based on the wage rate and the length of service, and substantial death benefits and pensions are paid. Mr. Charles G. DuBois, Comptroller of the Bell System, says, "This plan is not in any sense a charity, and it is not so regarded by employes. It is an attempt to deal justly and practically with one of the problems arising under modern industrial conditions. As we see it, the men and women who give their working lives to furnishing telephone service are fairly entitled, as a part of their condition of employment, to know that they will not face destitution in sickness or in old age, and that if they die in the service their dependents will receive some financial provision for their immediate needs. If this is a fair and reasonable condition of employment, then its cost is rightfully a part of the cost of giving telephone service and we so regard it. * * * Just as the cost of accidents puts on the employer and manager an economic incentive to develop safety appliances, so the cost of sickness insurance directly stimulates an interest in the prevention of sickness—we feel that we are started on the right road, that the problems involved are not essentially different from other business problems which have to be worked out carefully and thoughtfully, that the advantages of sickness insurance from a business point of view are probably worth the cost, and that whatever the cost, the responsibility for healthful working conditions and the duty of providing financial aid for the workers when they are incapacitated rest squarely on the industry." (2)

Satisfaction with the results of attempts to reduce sickness losses seems to be general among employers who have tried them. A large Massachusetts company which has established a system of complete medical treatment, including hospital care, for its employes, finds that "the hours per year lost by employes who take advantage of its hospital facilities amount to only half as many as are lost by those who do not accept this care." (3) "It is to the direct interest of the company as well as the individual," declares a member of the famous silk firm of Cheney Brothers, "to bring about a re-establishment of health and consequently efficiency, by supplying the best conditions possible for recovery." (3) "The modern employer," according to the medical director of the Cincinnati Milling Machine Co., "has learned that the health of the worker is a definite asset in his business. Medical care in industry is not charity. It pays good dividends." (3)

Unfortunately, the employers who are taking effective steps to reduce this industrial loss are few in number, and the attempts are confined as a rule to the large and more progressive establishments. Moreover, scarcely any provision is being made for sickness among members of employes' families, which, next to the illness of the workers themselves, most reduces their efficiency. In the few cases where industrial nurses are being employed to visit the homes of employes and give needed care and public health instruction, marked improvements not only in general habits of living, but in the health of the workers are noted. The war, with its emphasis on production, has created a growing recognition of the need for a means of reducing sickness-losses which may be shared alike by large and small industrial concerns. January, 1919, issue of "The Nation's Business," published by the United States Chamber of Commerce, presents the matter from the point of view of industry. "If the casualty list from industry could be printed every day in our newspapers the people of this country would be appalled at its size. In one year from accidents alone it is over eight times as large as the entire casualties among our troops on the battlefields of Europe.

"We have no records to show the number who are killed or disabled as a result of occupational diseases and diseases partially traceable to working conditions, but these undoubtedly are even more shocking. Each year adds a quarter of a million men to the total number of incompetents who, on account of disease or accident are permanently thrown on the scrap heap because their handicaps prevent them from continuing at their old occupation.

This casting of valuable workers needlessly on the scrap heap must cease. Industry must blaze the trail in this conservation and reclamation of human life. The prevention of accidents, industrial hygiene and sanitation, adequate medical and surgical care for the sick or injured employees, adequate compensation during periods of disability, and better living and working conditions for all employees, are the proven methods which will stop this human wastage." (1).

LOSSES TO THE STATE BECAUSE OF SICKNESS OF EMPLOYEES.

"In the health of the people lies the wealth of the nation." Gladstone.

The direct financial loss to the state because of sickness represents for the most part public effort to reduce the social loss.

It would be impossible to estimate the social cost of sickness among wage earners in Pennsylvania. Serious reductions in efficiency and productive power, lowered morale and broken standards of living and of home-keeping, encouragement given to the growth of invalidism, economic dependency, and physical and moral degeneration—these evils, which can but result from the uneven and often losing fight that present conditions force upon the sick wage-earner, are clearly apparent; but because the toll which they annually collect is too vital to be calculated in dollars alone, it cannot be accurately measured.

In its effects upon the individual worker and his family, and through them upon the present and potential stamina of the nation, this social cost of sickness is far more important than the financial cost. The health and strength of our people are the real sources of our wealth, and our contemplation of money spent for sickness relief and prevention must be directed, not so much to the amount of expenditure, as to the results achieved thereby. "If, as alleged by way of criticism, the health service is costly, it can be proved to be the best possible investment to meet the cost." (2)

COST OF SICKNESS TO PUBLIC FUNDS.

Although no effort has been made by the state of Pennsylvania to equitably distribute the cost of sickness, state appropriations for the work of the State Department of Health, for medical charity and for relief to persons incapacitated on account of sickness, amount each year to millions of dollars. In 1916, the state spent in subsidies to hospitals, for its tuberculosis work, for the State Department of Health, the Mothers' Assistant Fund, institutions for the care of defectives, and for medical supplies in almshouses and out-door relief to sick persons, over $10,000,000. Of this sum, more than $6,000,000 was expended for the work of the State Department of Health and for hospitals, medical supplies and relief in individual cases of sickness, while a large proportion of the remaining $4,000,000 undoubtedly went to pay for the consequences of the prevalence or the neglect of disease.

The ten state hospitals for miners spent $439,428.92 during the calendar year, 1916. Of this amount $369,456.25 came from legislative appropriation. Out of 14,451 in-patients treated in that period, 12,617 or 87.3 per cent., received free treatment. In addition, there were 15,503 dispensary patients from whom but $53.50 was received for treatment. The total cost of free treatment was $366,955.60. (1).

In the year ending May 31, 1916, 175 other hospitals made statistical returns to the State Board of Charities. During the year they spent $7,937,055.10, of which $2,351,723.96 was received from the state and from counties and cities, and $3,268,287.16 from patients for board and treatment. In spite of state assistance, 102 of these hospitals reported deficits for the year amounting to $734,486.49. Of the 219,834 in-patients reported, 127,678, or more than 57 per cent, had been treated free. The total number of free hospital days was 1,627,346, or 40.6 per cent. of the total number of days of treatment, and cost almost three and a half million dollars. There were also 873,444 dispensary patients, whose payments for treatment amounted to but $83,727.81, or less than ten cents each. (2).

Two classes of tuberculosis sanatoria receive funds from the state. There is the state organization under the Department of Health which, in 1914, controlled 116 dispensaries scattered throughout the state and three sanatoria at Mont Alto, Cresson and Hamburg.

Every year more than 15,000 persons receive either free dispensary or sanatorium treatment at a cost which in 1916 amounted to $1,692,690—over half the expenditures of the Department of Health. In addition, the dispensaries secure charitable relief for the families under their care, which each year amounts to between $20,000 and $25,000. About half this sum is secured from the County Commissioners and the remainder from private agencies and individuals.

In addition, the Legislature appropriated, for the year ending May 31, 1916, subsidies amounting to $50,500 for nine smaller institutions for the treatment of tuberculosis under private control, whose total expenditures were $263,108.11. Altogether the nine treated 1,098 in-patients, of whom almost 60 per cent. received free treatment to the amount of 57,734 free hospital days. They also cared for 5,273 dispensary patients, practically all of whom received free treatment. (3)

Altogether these institutions for sickness-care, exclusive of the State Tuberculosis Sanatoria, spend annually over $8,000,000 of which almost one-third is supplied directly by state funds. They represent a real estate investment of over $36,000,000, endowments of almost $15,000,000, and fixed indebtedness of four and a half million. The potential annual income from this invested capital would amount to over two and a half million dollars. During 1916, of 1,124,330 patients treated, 140,944 were free in-patients, 91,439 paid for treatment, and 888,947 were dispensary patients. The receipts from patients for treatment, for the use of ambulance, laboratory facilities, etc., amounted to $3,804,159.67 while the total cost of the 1,925,921 free hospital days were $3,454,799.65.

Still another way in which public funds are spent for medical charity and for the care of sick employees is through almshouses and public relief in almshouse districts. (4) Even in years of great industrial depression, "temporary sickness and death" is the principal cause for which such relief is given. Over a five-year period it accounts for from one-third to nearly one-half of all the cases relieved. Such relief cost in 1916, $708,752.10. In addition, eighty almshouses reported the expenditure of $51,258.73 for medicines and medical supplies.

These heavy drains upon the charitable resources of the State indicate plainly that under present conditions many employees are not able to meet the expenses of sickness. Much of the relief that is given has little or no preventive or curative value, because the hospital, the dispensary, or the county almshouse has been resorted to only after a seemingly slight ailment has become a serious and often incurable disability, and the worker and his dependents have been forced from their rightful position of economic independence. Past experience has demonstrated that any plan for meeting the sickness problem satisfactorily must furnish a stimulus for prompt preventive effort on the part of all elements concerned, instead of providing merely institutional and charitable means of care.

Cost of Sickness to Private Funds.

While it has been impossible to obtain accurate and complete figures as to the burden imposed on private charity by the sickness of wage earners, it is obvious that it is a heavy one. There is a veritable network of medical charities in every large city, including dispensaries, hospitals, special clinics, convalescent homes and agencies for nursing care in the home. In a single year in twenty-seven representative hospital social service departments in the State, more than 37,000 families were treated. The situation in Philadelphia is typical. In the "Reference Book of Social Agencies," (1) which does not claim to be complete, there are listed the names of ten general dispensaries, in addition to the dispensaries and clinics for special kinds of treatment, and thirty-two general, and thirty special hospitals of various kinds, which contain free beds and in most cases dispensary facilities. The Visiting Nurse Society of Philadelphia alone spent in 1917 over $41,800, (2) receiving but $9,648.09 from patients in fees, leaving more than 77 per cent. of its budget as contributions from private charity. This percentage is over 75 in the budgets of the private dispensaries studied. In no case did the receipts from patients equal one-fourth of the total dispensary expenditures for one year.

At the present time there is no way of estimating the probable cost to physicians of medical care given by them either at reduced rates or wholly free, but we know that the proportion of charity practice among physicians is very large.

The problem of estimating the proportions of the budgets of general relief agencies expended because of sickness is even more difficult and subtle. The interplay of various factors, such as bad housing, low wages, under-nourishment, unemployment and ill health, often creates a state of dependency, in which it is impossible to single out any one as the principle cause. Social workers generally agree, however, that illness is the greatest single handicap in the families with whom they come in contact; and some go so far as to name the different portions of their budgets expended primarily on this account. For example, one relief agency states that nine-tenths of the sum expended for relief in 1917 was spent on account of sickness. Other societies claim lower proportions. A study of the yearly budgets of one large relief society in Philadelphia, which analyzes its expenditures according to the primary causes of dependency and the nature of relief given, shows that more than 55 per cent. of the actual expenditures during the last five years have been because of illness; and 57 per cent. of this amount because of tuberculosis.

YEAR.	Cash expenditures for relief due primarily to illness.	Per cent. of illness—expenditures due to tuberculosis.	Per cent. of total expenditures made because of illness.
1914-15	22,934.35	50	49
1915-16	23,877.98	50	57
1916-17	23,836.00	60	64
1917-18	23,539.21	65	65
Total for five year period	$112,100.23	57	55

It is because sickness plays such a large part in pulling down into dependency the family which can only be self-supporting while moderately healthy, that we have discussed sickness in its relation to family income at such length, in the section following.

(1) Published by Municipal Court, Philadelphia, 1916.

(2) This is eliminating the cost of nursing service to the policyholders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which is paid by the Company and amounted in 1917 to $19,332.50.

The cost of sickness to society is well illustrated by the case of Mr. Callahan. Mr. Callahan was a tailor, who had worked for a prominent Philadelphia firm for several years. He was the father of four small children. Living up to the level of his income, with small savings, he felt he could not afford to be sick. He contracted tuberculosis, due undoubtedly in part to the industrial conditions in which he worked. He denied that he was sick, and dosed himself continuously with a patent medicine, warranted to "cure all ills." Finally, after a bad hemorrhage, he gave up, and when examined he was diagnosed an advanced case of tuberculosis. The family, up to this time always self-supporting, became dependent upon charity. One of his former employers gave $1.00 as matter of charity; the others gave nothing. The children were all young, and Mrs. Callahan could not leave them to go out to work. Two of them were found to be tubercular. Mr. Callahan was only thirty-eight, and the family had no resources for the long future that loomed ahead. He was sent to Mount Alto, where little hope is given for his recovery; and for the past three years the family has been cared for entirely by private philanthropy, at an expense of many hundreds of dollars. The oldest child is now only eleven. Meantime the State supports Mr. Callahan in a public sanatorium. Has this been cheap for public or private funds, or for society at large? The community has lost a self-supporting, industrious citizen; industry has lost the productive energy of a good worker; Mr. Callahan has lost his earning power and his home, the children have suffered, the normal family unit has been permanently broken up.

The cost of adequate measures to protect health will be repaid a hundred fold. Society could make no better investment.

Sickness and Poverty.

The whole problem of sickness among wage earners' families hinges on the problem of poverty. Sickness is both a cause and a result of poverty. Too often it is at bottom the condition of poverty which has caused the initial sickness; fear of more poverty which prevents prompt treatment; continued sickness which produces more poverty, and so on. Jacob Hollander has said that poverty is applied indifferently to three distinct conditions: (first) economic inequality. (Second) economic insufficiency, and (third) economic dependence. "Economic inequality" has little significance for our purpose; but "economic insufficiency"—the problem of that group midway between those in comfortable circumstances; and the out-right dependent—the proportion which is inadequately fed, clad, and sheltered — and "economic dependence" both foster and are fostered by disease.

It is impossible to give exact "causes" for poverty. Schools of thought swing from theories of land and capital to the laissez-faire philosophy of individualism. So it is difficult to place the entire responsibility on the illness of any given family, for usually the interplay of various factors such as bad housing, low wages, undernourishment, unemployment and ill health, have worked together. One has often caused the other. For instance, in an unemployment survey in 1915 covering a million wage earners, 11 per cent. of the unemployment had been caused by sickness or accident. Yet sickness seems to be, without question, the principal single factor which serves as the "last straw," and more often than any thing else forces the ordinary wage earner's family to seek help outside his own resources.

The story of the Murphy family well illustrates the typical course of events:

The Murphys had lived in Philadelphia for seventeen years and there were six little Murphys, all under working age. Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Murphy had ever been strong, and their constant ill health was reflected in Mr. Murphy's work and Mrs. Murphy's housekeeping. The children were ailing, and did not have the proper nourishment. Mr. Murphy made about $20.00 a week when he could work full time, and Mrs. Murphy attempted to add to this by taking in two men boarders, as she could not go out for days' work, while the children were so young. She was advised that she needed an operation badly, but she thought it best to go on working and forget she felt so ill, as it would be utterly impossible for her to have this medical attention. For some time they managed to get along, but finally Mr. Murphy was threatened with tuberculosis and the bills increased. The doctor advised a change in work, but he had been with the same firm for fourteen years, had a good work record, and hoped he was near a promotion. This firm paid a sick benefit after a waiting period of three days, but it was only $40 a day, and what was that with six children? As long as he could possibly keep up, he felt he must. Besides this, he belonged to a fraternal paying a sick benefit, but this was paid only after a waiting period of two weeks, and there were many restrictive rules and assessments. They were anxious to keep this membership up, however, on account of the substantial death benefit. Mr. Murphy tried not to miss more than a day or two at a time from his work, and the family spent sometimes as much as $10.00 a week on patent medicines. Things seemed more expensive with the boarders than without, and they gave up this plan of eking out their income.

Then Mr. Murphy broke down, and was ill for five weeks. They borrowed some money from a sister and the doctor reduced his rates. In spite of this they found themselves with a rent bill of $18.00, a store bill of $155.00, a milk bill of $42.00, and a doctor's bill of over $70.00, and on top of this the advice that Mr. Murphy was to have "fresh eggs and plenty of milk every day."

Their savings were gone, they could not obtain more credit; relatives were unable to help them longer, and so they sought a money-lender, and borrowed $50.00 at 10 per cent. a month. This was only a drop in the bucket, and the interest was very difficult to meet. The loan agency took advantage of the situation and continued charging them for three months after they had paid the money back.

Mr. Murphy went back to work, far from well; he had not been able to secure the sick benefit from his lodge because he was a month behind in his dues. The family could never get ahead. Mrs. Murphy tried to take in extra work and do it at night after the children were in bed, but could not stand the strain. Things went from bad to worse, and finally Mrs. Murphy, worn out, discovered she could take the baby, who was ill, to the hospital dispensary and secure medical advice free for the child and for herself. The doctor there realized that she was in critical need of attention and that the whole family were suffering from a chronic struggle with ill health and inability to secure medical care or follow a physician's orders, and consequently referred her to a private organization from which she could secure help. (1)

The Murphys are not unlike hundreds of other families. Theirs was the typical road from independence to dependence. Wages at the present time, with the cost of living as it is, do not cover risks. Sickness is a risk, and the average wage earner trusts his lucky star that he may escape it. The problem is largely an economic one. The amount a man can save depends upon the amount of his income, far more than upon his personal volition. Saving toward an emergency is not only difficult, but impossible, if his income admits bare sufficiency. On the other hand, the amount of family income determines in large measure the standard of living possible, which in turn directly affects the susceptibility to disease and the power of resistance against it. "You can kill a man with a tenement as easily as with an axe," Jacob Riis says.

Over-crowding, foul air, lack of light, can but breed disease. Yet how is the average wage earner in an industrial community to obtain the room, light, air and nourishing food, essential to good health which is his greatest asset? And when he once becomes ill, how can he afford to obtain medical care quickly, and follow the doctor's orders?

Not only does the wage earner himself suffer, but the family, and particularly the children, bear the brunt of the strain. We know the lasting effects which a period of privation has on children. Undernourishment, coming in many instances from "economic insufficiency" due to a period of illness and an attempt to "make ends meet," is one of the "original and basic defects" found in the examination of school children. In a study of 171,691 children made in the borough of Manhattan in December, 1917, only 17.3 per cent. of these children were found to be in a normal condition, so far as nutrition was concerned. Sixty-one per cent. were "borderline cases;" 18.5 per cent. were definitely undernourished and needed immediate attention, and 3.1 per cent. were advanced cases of undernourishment needing immediate medical care.

In our own State, in Philadelphia, of 5,621 children between fourteen and sixteen years of age examined for employment certificates in the first six months of 1916, 20 per cent. had defects debarring them from immediate certificates.

How much of this is the result of privation coming because of illness in the family, it is impossible to estimate. Ignorance, community standards, working conditions, all play a large part, but the emergency of illness is one of the prime factors. Here then, is the gist of the problem—There are not adequate means in this country today by which the wage worker can safeguard himself and his family against a possible emergency, such as sickness.

A study of wage conditions show that the great majority of wage earners' families can be self-supporting only so long as they are moderately healthy. When sickness comes, they must have relief, if not from one source, from another, and the more prolonged the sickness, the greater the delay in securing care in the beginning, the greater must be the amount of relief.

Of the thousands of families who obtain sufficient help from their friends and relatives to see them through, or who live on credit or their own savings during illness, we have little knowledge. Surveys show that practically all families exhaust these resources before obtaining public or private aid. We do know, however, that sickness drives large numbers to borrow from loan societies of various sorts, and that this, as in the case of the Murphy family, is often one of the first steps toward dependency.

In a study of the loans made in one year by twenty-two remedial loan societies in as many different cities, an attempt was made to ascertain the proportion of the loans where sickness was given as the reason for borrowing. (1) In two cases the societies' records were kept in such a way that the actual percentage could be given—14 per cent. in one case, 37 per cent. in the other. In seventeen other cases an "estimated proportion" was given, which ranged from 10 per cent. to 75 per cent. The low percentages made because of sickness were in cases where the number of pledge loans made by the society was very large. The average percentage was apparently over 38. In one of the three cases where no estimate was given, the percentage due to sickness was termed "very large," in another case they reported: "Scarcely a day but what a loan is made to pay the expense of an operation, hospital bill, etc., and in most cases the failure to meet the contract is due to sickness." Another society says "sickness is the reason given for nonpayment of 95 per cent. of our defaults."

The average size of the 98,555 loans made by the nineteen of these societies for which figures were obtainable was only $49.30. This is considerably less than the average loan made by the Morris Plan Banks, which are established in 104 cities in the United States to meet the needs of the industrial worker who so seldom has banking connections. In the Morris Plan Company in New York, 44,866 loans were made between January 1, 1915, and June 30, 1917. Of these, 593 were under $25.00; 13,140 were between $25.00 and $50.00, 987 were between $50.00 and $75.00, and 17,367 were between $75.00 and $100.00. Thus some 70 per cent. of all the loans were under $100.00 and 30 per cent. were under $50.00.

The weekly income of the men and women borrowing from the Morris Plan Company averaged $26.00, bespeaking a group of wage earners a little above the ordinary; the largest numbers classified by occupations were clerks, salesmen, owners and partners, while factory hands, tailors, machinists, etc., were relatively few. From January 1, 1917, to June 30, 1918, 12,300 loans had been made where the reason given for borrowing was "illness and births." Seven hundred and seventy more loans were made because of death in the family. The "illness and births" classification outnumbered any other single classification by over 4,000 and formed almost 16 per cent. of the total loans made.

(1) In all cases of families whose stories are told the names and initials are assumed

(1) This study was made available through the kindness of the Ohio Health and Old Age Insurance Commission.

This classification did not by any means include all the loans made where illness was a factor, as other classifications include "Repay loan sharks," "Pawns and chattels," "Miscellaneous debts," "Help relatives," etc., where many of the first debts have doubtless been contracted because of illness. In connection with this it is interesting to note a letter from one of the Morris Plan Company borrowers. "A few years ago," he writes, "owing to sickness in my family, I was compelled to go to a loan shark to borrow money. From that time on things grew from bad to worse, and falling behind in my payments I was subjected to such unmerciful persecution that I was on the verge of committing suicide."

The only Morris Plan Company in Pennsylvania is in Philadelphia, and it is unfortunate that their records have not been kept in the same way as those in New York. Statistics for the past nine months, however, January 1, 1918, to September 30, 1918, were tabulated especially for the commission. During these nine months 135 loans had been made where the borrower gave illness as his reason for needing the money. Five more loans were made because of death. The borrowers in 119 cases had families dependent on them; in seventeen cases they were men or women with no dependents. The income of these borrowers was known in 133 cases. In eighty-six cases, or 64 per cent., the weekly income was between $15.00 and $25.00. In forty more cases, or 30 per cent., it was between $26.00 and $40.00. In only six cases was it over $40.00 a week, and in only one case was it under $15.00 a week. This is an interesting contrast to the incomes of the groups who have passed the stage of "borrowing" and have dropped into dependency. The company does not lend less than $50.00, and we find that twenty-nine of the loans were for that amount. Seventy, or exactly 50 per cent., were for $100.00 and only twelve exceeded the $200.00 mark. The largest loan made because of illness was one for $300.00.

So much for those who have tided over the emergency of sickness by borrowing money on a personal or business basis. Much more can be said of those who have passed to the next stage—that of economic dependence. In how many cases of the thousands coming to the general relief societies asking for help, has sickness been the determining factor in the application?

Edward T. Devine, the head of the New York Charity Organization Society says:

"Ill health is perhaps the most constant of the attendants of poverty. It has been customary to say that 25 per cent. of the distress known to charitable societies is caused by sickness. An inquiry into the physical condition of the members of the families that ask for aid, without for the moment taking any other complication into account, clearly indicates that whether it be the first cause or merely a complication from the effect of other causes, physical disability is at any rate a very serious disabling condition at the time of application in three-fourths—not one-fourth—of all the families that come under the care of the Charity Organization Society, who are probably in this respect in no degree exceptional among families in need of charitable aid." (1)

In special studies made by the Social Insurance Commissions of California and of New Jersey, sickness was the "primary cause of the dependency in 50 per cent. of the 5,000 cases studied in California and 42 per cent. of the 1,412 cases studied in New Jersey.

In a study made in 1909 of 31,481 dependent cases by the United States Immigration Commission, sickness was a factor in producing the dependency of over 38 per cent., whereas accident was a factor in but 3.9 per cent.

In our own State the same general conclusions are borne out. In considering sickness as a factor in producing public dependents, it is impossible even to estimate the number of almshouse inmates whose entrance may be traced to such a cause. The almshouses of the State do not, as a rule, however care why their inmates have come. The stewards are men who are not likely to be concerned with the economic and social causes underlying the application for admission. The Board of Public Charities, however, attempts to classify the outdoor relief given throughout the State, by the primary cause of destitution. The records for this administration of outdoor relief are enlightening. Over a period of five years "temporary sickness or death" has always stood first as a problem of dependency. The per cent. varies in each year from 35.70 to 47.33. Want of work comes next, accounting for from 8.70 to 25.86 per cent., and the remaining cases are attributed to old age, desertion, intemperance, insanity or feeble-mindedness, and miscellaneous causes. (1)

If this is true of the outdoor relief, it is probably even more true of almshouse inmates.

If we take the group coming to the private general relief societies, we find that here too, sickness has been by far the greatest single factor in producing the dependency. If we reverse our point of view and take the group seeking free medical aid we find that temporary financial dependency is the greatest single factor in driving them there. In a study made by one of the Hospital Social Service Departments of Philadelphia of 1,050 cases coming to them between January and June, 1918, the group of those "temporarily financially dependent" outnumbered all others by almost two to one, so that either way you look at it, the statement holds good.

In a letter to the commission, Mr. Karl de Schweinitz, the general secretary of the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity, says:

"Sickness is the greatest single handicap affecting the families under the care of the Society for Organizing Charity. Unemployment may vary in amount from season to season, but year in and year out ill health continues to undermine the working efficiency of wage earners, to prevent mothers from taking proper care of home and children, and to cause boys and girls to be irregular in school attendance and inferior in capacity to learn.

"Much of this sickness is preventable. Much more could be rendered comparatively unimportant if treatment were promptly available. Only too often, however the sick throw away their chances for speedy cure by continuing at work because they cannot afford to lose pay by staying at home. Again and again, also, we find that families have postponed sending for a doctor in the hope that the patient would recover without making necessary the incurring of an expense which they have not the money to meet. Nothing perhaps would help so much to reduce sickness among small wage workers as prompt medical treatment and cessation from work when the first symptoms of disease appear."

A study of the cases coming to the United Hebrew Charities of Philadelphia show that for the last five years, sickness has figured as the main problem in each year's work. In 1913-14, these cases formed 46 per cent. of the 760 cases handled; in 1914-15, 39 per cent. of the 1,189 cases; in 1915-16, 56 per cent. of the 870 cases; in 1916-17, 65 per cent. of the 557 cases; and in 1917-18, 63 per cent. of the 444 cases.

Even in 1914-15, the year of the unemployment panic when the sickness cases dropped to 39 per cent., unemployment was given as the main problem in but 22 per cent.

In the work of the Bureau for Jewish Children the illness of the parents was given as the reason for application in 49 per cent. of the 413 applications in 1915-16, and in 51 per cent. of the 472 applications in 1916-17; the number applying in this year because of sickness was six times as great as the number applying for any other of the twenty-six reasons given.

Through the kindness of the Bureau for Social Research two unpublished studies were placed at the disposal of the commission. Both studies covered the year January 1, 1916, to January 1, 1917.

The first study dealt with the condition of families coming to the four largest relief societies in Philadelphia; the total number of families covered by the smallest society was included, and a corresponding number was taken from each of the other three. The bureau classified these applications for help by the main problem involved, and it is interesting to note the proportion for which sickness was responsible in these four societies; 16.59 per cent., 29.65 per cent., 31.15 per cent., and 53.36 per cent. The bureau states: "Sickness is proved to be the greatest problem to be met by all of the agencies * * * That sickness is not only the largest contribution, but also the problem least easily solved is shown by the fact that it forms a larger percentage of the 'old and recurrent' cases, than it does of the new applications. For instance, in one society it found 42.28 per cent. of the new applications and 64.81 per cent. of the recurrent cases, during this year."

The second study by the bureau dealt with the problem of child care, when sickness in the family made outside help imperative. The first section of this study covered 208 families where children under sixteen were removed from home on account of illness in the family. The figures given seem to indicate that by far the greatest number of the children came from a normal group of rather low wage families. About 70 per cent. were from homes "where there was no disturbance of marital relation." In only 27.5 per cent of the cases was the mother the main breadwinner." The families did not seem to be of abnormal size, nor were they transients or recent immigrants, since 88 per cent. had lived in Philadelphia three years or more.

Sixty-two per cent. of the heads of these families, however, had weekly wages below the $11.00 which was the average weekly wage in the manufacturing industries of the State in 1916.

Regarding the exact relation of the existing illness to the dependency, the report states that "the temporary character of care given to children removed from their homes indicates the fact that illness in the cases studied was responsible for the dependency, and that a slight amount of assistance might have saved the children from removal. In fact, in 85 per cent. of the cases the sickness of one or both parents appeared as the sole cause of removal. Over a third of the children were away from their homes less than a month, and 214 out of 255, when discharged, were given back into the custody of their parents. Nine out of every ten of the children had never been removed from home before.

"In nine-tenths of the families one or both parents—the mother more often than the father—had been taken to a hospital or other institution for care a very short time before the children were removed. The report concludes that the result of the study shows, beyond a doubt, the "limited resources for emergencies in families both economically and socially normal." It would appear that some systematic method of meeting the wage loss of employees during illness and of providing medical care for them and their wives is needed to prevent the breaking up of homes which illness now causes.

The second section of the study deals with 418 families suffering from illness and applying to the Society for Organizing Charity or to the United Hebrew Charities "for relief in order to provide proper care for the children." Here again we find a group of normal families "with wages no different from the average, outside the highly skilled trades." In 71 per cent. of the families both parents were living together; 14.6 per cent. more were families of widows or widowers, and only 15.2 per cent. were cases of separation, desertion, or irregular union.

Many of the men were fairly steady workers, for 53 per cent. of those who were employed when disabled by illness had worked for the same employer more than a year. Of the 300 persons whose usual weekly income was known, the largest group, 42.23 per cent., received between $10.00 and $15.00 a week. But at the time charitable relief was given them, the incomes of nearly all were reduced to little or nothing. Only three per cent. had over $10.00 a week and 60 per cent. had $5.00 or less.

This bears out the truth of the fact that wages do not cover risks, and that savings are too soon exhausted to be relied upon to meet emergencies.

Since illness, year in and year out, forms the chief single factor in the creation of dependency, it has seemed wise to study closely a dependent group handicapped by illness. Who are the people in this group: what are their standards; are they employees of an ordinary type, or are they as often claimed, a special "pauper" class?

Seven cities in the State, through their Associated Charities, contributed to this study. Detailed information regarding the families where illness was a problem, was secured and tabulated. (1) In all, 1,584 families containing over 7,250 individuals, were studied. This does not pretend to represent the total number of families in which illness was a factor in the dependent group coming to these societies. They reported unanimously that illness was the greatest problem with which they had to deal. In Reading this was reported as the main factor in the dependency of 41 per cent. of the families; in Johnstown, 54 per cent.; in New Castle, 44 per cent.; in York, 86 per cent., and in Sewickley, 90 per cent. In Philadelphia more than a third of the families needing help in 1914-15, were suffering from illness, and some 42 per cent. in 1915-16. In 1914-15, the great year of unemployment, in the 10,488 families asking aid from the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity, the problems of unemployment numbered 4,237, while the illness problems were 3,867, a difference of but 870. This is another instance of the fact that even in a panic year, where one reason for dependency asserts itself so strongly, sickness is a steady factor.

As a result of the influenza epidemic 224 new families needed help from the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity, in October and November, 1918. One hundred and thirty-four were widows who had lost their husbands in the epidemic. Other families had exhausted their own resources and could not see through the sickness emergency.

Epidemics are spectacular and drive home truths. Sickness, however, is constant. The ranks of the dependent are recruited daily because of the burden imposed wholly on the individual, through it.

The group requiring charity, chiefly because of sickness, are in the majority of cases normal families, not particularly large. But in many instances the children are young and cannot work, so that if the breadwinner falls ill, as soon as their resources are exhausted—a longer or a shorter time according to whether they are skilled or unskilled, high paid or low paid—the almost inevitable result is destitution and an appeal to charity. This is particularly true if the wife expects a baby and so is unable to go out to work.

Much of the destitution caused by illness comes at a time when it threatens the health not only of the present but of future generations. We all know that expectant mothers must have proper nourishment and comparative freedom from anxiety to protect their own health and that of their babies, and that a period of privation cannot fail to leave a permanent mark on growing children. Some organized system of maternity benefit, providing prenatal and postnatal care and including adequate care at confinement for every working mother and the wife of every employee, is needed to prevent such suffering.

Mr. C. was a teamster, attempting to support his wife and four young children on his weekly wage of $13.50. He was badly poisoned and was away from work three weeks, having some free attention from a private physician. His wife who was pregnant and unable to go out to work, suffered a fall which disabled her for two weeks. She had had no prenatal care and was now attended by the district doctor while a relief society, together with relatives, supported the family.

One or two cases of pauperized families, begging and immoral, were found, while in a few instances the need was created by old age rather than illness, and occasionally the wife or children might not have needed charity when they became ill if the husband had not deserted; but the great majority of the families were not of such types.

Seventy and three-tenths per cent. of the Philadelphia families were "normal" in the sense that either the father and mother were living together and the father was the main support of the family, or that adult children (over eighteen) were supporting widowed parents. The latter group covered only a small number of cases, as the most distinctive feature about these families, and seemingly the most important in which they differed socially from a typical group of wage earners such as was covered by the Kensington survey, was the unusual proportion in which young children were found. This is further illustrated by the fact that the average number of wage earners per family, 1.75, was somewhat lower than in the Kensington survey.

Certainly the families could not be considered unusually large. The 1,549 families whose size was known averaged but 4.7 persons. The average size of the families in the Kensington survey was 4.3 persons, and the "typical family," according to "cost of living" investigators, is five persons. Two hundred and ninety-one families consisted of only one or two persons, and 793 of three to six, which ordinarily means father, mother and one to four children.

The following cases are typical of the many in which illness was the only apparent handicap.

Two attacks of gripe, each lasting two weeks, caused Mr. H. to have difficulty in meeting his family expenses. He was a clerk, earning about $18.00 a week, with a wife and six young children; the oldest, twins of ten years. His wife was not able to help the family by outside work, since she had a "weak heart," and was soon to have a baby. The family used their savings, but those were soon exhausted, and they were obliged not only to have help from relatives and their church, but to apply to a relief agency.

Ordinarily the D. family were quite comfortably off, with the father working as a fireman for $18.00 a week and the oldest child a winder in a textile mill at $6.00. But when Mr. D. had an attack of erysipelas and had to spend three months in a hospital, the earnings of the fifteen-year old were not sufficient to meet the needs of Mrs. D. and the three younger children. The family's savings were exhausted in two months and in spite of the fact that the firemen took up a collection for them, they had to get help from several different charitable sources.

Occasionally a man or woman living alone was reduced to dependency following an attack of sickness.

When Mrs. O. was well, she was able to support herself independently by doing house work. But nine weeks of disability caused by a broken leg rendered her dependent on charity. After five weeks in a hospital it was necessary for her to spend four weeks of convalescence in an almshouse under the care of the district "poor doctor."

Typically, the heads of the families were employed in the heavy hand work which lies at the foundation of the city's activities. In Philadelphia, about 35 per cent. were engaged in some sort of factory work or hand trade, 25 per cent. were "laborers," and nearly 20 per cent.—a large proportion of whom were women—in "domestic and personal service." There were about the same proportion of persons in manufacturing in this group, as there were in the whole city in 1910, more laborers and domestic workers and fewer in trade and the professional and clerical groups—more, in short, of the less skilled and more poorly paid workers. Outside Philadelphia, the percentage of laborers and domestic workers was even higher—31.7 per cent. and 27.2 per cent. respectively. Only ninety-three heads of the families were reported as being without occupation. In 139 cases women were both housekeepers and family wage earners.

With the proportion of unskilled workers in this group, it is not surprising that family incomes were found to be lower than in such a group as that surveyed in Kensington.

The largest group of families had incomes of between $12.00 and $15.00 a week; 75.3 per cent. of the 856 families where income figures were obtained had less than $20.00 a week, while 94.3 per cent. had less than $30.00 a week. A large number of the 149 families with incomes under $10.00 a week were the "broken" families supported by widows or young children, but comparatively high incomes in other families did not by any means act as a safeguard against the need for charity.

Although Mr. N. earned $25.00 a week as a "mechanic" and had only two dependents, a wife and baby boy, when he was ill with "throat trouble" for three weeks he was obliged to secure medical attention through a dispensary and to seek aid from his relatives and a relief society.

We have, then, a majority of cases in which the family group was normal, and the main handicap was sickness. The families were not particularly large but the children were generally young, and the number of wage earners per family, rather small.

There were 2,682 cases of illness reported in these families. Naturally enough, more often than in a sickness survey among employees in general, like the one in Kensington, the illness reported was that of the principal wage earner, for in such cases wage loss is added to the expense of sickness. Such illness was reported 1,104 times, or in 41 per cent. of the total number of cases. Illness of the housewife, an almost equally important member of the household, was reported 761 times.

Yet there were cases in which the illness of dependents alone, reported in 810 cases, proved a severe strain on the family resources.

Mrs. O. supported her aged mother and three small children by work in a hosiery mill. The family came to the attention of a relief society because of the illness of the grandmother. She had been treated by a private doctor, and the bills resulting left the family without sufficient food.

The two kinds of illnesses found in especially large numbers were tuberculosis and childbirth. Four hundred and eighty-eight cases of tuberculosis were noted, and 247 cases of disability from pregnancy or childbirth. These two diseases accounted respectively for 18 and 10 per cent. of all the illnesses recorded.

It was tuberculosis, the "captain of the men of death," which incapacitated Mr. M. for work for three months, and made it necessary for him to obtain help from a relief society. When he was able to work he was a laborer earning $15.00 a week. Besides his wife, his family was made up of a girl of five and a boy of two. A State tuberculosis sanitarium admitted Mr. M. for treatment. Mrs. M. took in lodgers to cover the rent, but was unable to keep up because of her expected confinement. A doctor gave free medical care, relatives helped and material relief was given by the charitable society.

Mr. R., a laborer whose pay averaged $18.00 a week, had a wife and a little boy twenty-two months old. He was stricken with tuberculosis, was sick and away from work for three months, at the end of which time he had recovered sufficiently to be able to go back to work. His wife was pregnant and a relief society was the main support of the family during his illness. The society was obliged to secure dispensary and hospital care for him, prenatal care for his wife through a dispensary, and a visiting nurse for her at the time of her confinement.

Certain of the cases pointed clearly to defects in community action for health or civic protection, for which individuals and the funds of private charity paid the price.

Mr. Y., a laborer in the early thirties earning $16.00 a week, was stricken with typhoid, which more than almost any other disease, indicates a weak link in the chain of public health measures. A wife and five children, the oldest ten, the youngest two, were dependent on Mr. Y. He was sick nearly ten weeks, receiving free care in a hospital and later dispensary treatment. His wife was at first aided by friends, but was later obliged to leave her young family and go out to work, and also to obtain charitable help.

Other cases were significant of the fact that the lack of adequate methods of dealing with illness may cause not only hardship to individuals, but may endanger the health of the general public, as when wage earners continue at work with disease in an acute communicable stage.

Outside Philadelphia data on the full duration of the illness was obtained in 386 cases. Of these 43 per cent. had lasted more than six months, and 31 per cent. more than a year. The largest single group of illness lasting less than a year were those of between one and three months' duration. Considering the illnesses of the wage earners alone in the total group of families, 32 per cent. lasted more than six months, and 19 per cent. more than one year. Twenty-eight per cent. of the ill wage earners were ill between one and three months.

A considerable tendency was noticeable for the time out of work to be shorter than the period of illness. For instance, although 107 wage earners had illnesses lasting over a year, but fifty-four were out of work for this period; while seventy-eight were ill over six months, but forty-nine were away from work an equal period of time.

Methods of Family Finance During Illness.

The strain and stress through which these families passed is best shown by considering the ways in which they maintained themselves during illness, and the methods used were secured for the Philadelphia families.

In one hundred and sixty-three cases, the present or future resources of the family were drawn on in the shape of savings, credit, or insurance. Savings were used in forty-five families, but usually as the illness continued, in spite of cutting expenditures to the lowest point, they were exhausted and other aid became necessary. Health insurance, although it was carried in 101 families, was only paid in sixty-nine cases; five cases of accidents, and sixty-four of sickness.

In forty-nine cases, the families borrowed money, obtained credit at the store, pawned their furniture, or ran into debt and were left with heavy bills at the end of the illness.

Mr. P's illness was rheumatism, from which he was ill seven weeks. He was a laborer employed at a wage of about $12.50 a week, and his family consisted of a wife and a baby girl. While he was at the hospital, they lived on a little money he had saved. Later they borrowed $30.00 or $40.00 from friends and received some help from a relief society. They owed two months' rent when Mr. P. returned to work. But even then he was able to work only three or four days a week, both because of his own health and because his own health and because his wife then fell sick and was not able to take care of the baby.

Mr. B. was a shoemaker, who received little more than $10.00 a week to support his wife and six little children, the oldest but nine years old. He was ill with an acute sickness for four months, but out of work for only two weeks. To meet the expenses of his illness, the family "pawned almost everything they owned," and a relief society secured hospital care for Mr. B., and gave help to tide them over.

Not his own illness, but an attack of diphtheria, suffered by his youngest child, kept Mr. I. quarantined and stopped his wages for nearly six weeks. He was an iron moulder, earning $15.00 a week or more, with a wife and two little girls of five and nine respectively. After the family had used up their small savings they borrowed money and were left at the end of the child's sickness with a doctor's bill of $100.00 in addition.

As has been previously stated only one case was found in which the wage of an employee was continued during the whole of his illness, and one in which it was paid during part of the period of disability. In thirty-three other cases, however, the employer gave some help as a matter of charity. A number of cases of sickness were noted in which, though working conditions seemed to be the direct cause of the illnesses, the employer gave little or no help.

In seventy-six instances of the illness of the head of the family, the mother was obliged to go out to work. The situation where the mother was unable to work because of an expected child has already been discussed. It is equally unfortunate from a social point of view when the mother of young children is obliged to leave them without proper care and seek outside employment.

Mr. J., a laborer earning $15.00 a week, was injured in an accident, suffering contusions of the hips and thighs. As the accident was not in the course of employment, it did not fall within the scope of the compensation law. Medical care through a dispensary was provided by the relief society. Mr. J. was away from work three months. During this time, the family obtained help from friends, and from a relief society, and Mrs. J. went to work to help support the family. She had three little children, the oldest four and the youngest one, and while she was at work the baby had convulsions and had to be taken to a hospital. There were 236 cases in which other wage earners continued work during illness of the head of the family. A case where the children's earnings proved insufficient follows:

All three of the C's contributed a share to the support of the little family. Mrs. C. and the fifteen-year-old earned $8.00 and $6.00 respectively in the mill and the fourteen-year-old made $4.00 outside school hours. When Mrs. C. was disabled by a broken finger for over six weeks, the wages of the children became the main support of the family, and their standard of living was lowered in consequence. The income was so inadequate that the society was called upon to help with the rent and the other expenses.

Assistance from relatives was secured for 177 families, from friends for 99, from the church for 114. The proverbial generosity "of the poor to the poor" was revealed in the aid given by those who had barely enough for themselves and in the collections so often taken up among workers in the same shop.

Mr. F., a boilermaker earning $15.00 a week, was ill for eight weeks with typhoid fever, which is, par excellence, the socially preventable disease. He had a private doctor and went to a hospital. He had some money saved and friends gave money toward the food and rent for his wife and little boy. A collection was also taken up among his fellow-workers.

Mr. B. was a bricklayer, whose wages averaged $15.00 a week. He had a wife and five children, whose ages ranged from fifteen years to twenty months. He contracted rheumatism from exposure while at work, but received no aid from his employer. The main support of the family during this time came from a fraternal organization composed of persons of the same nationality as the B's.

Though benefits under Pennsylvania's compensation law are lower than in many states, one can but contrast its systematic provision with the suffering under individualistic methods revealed by the sickness cases.

Mr. P's foot was crushed while at work, which disabled him for six weeks. He was a laborer with a wife and one child. He received a weekly wage of $13.00. Not understanding that he would receive benefits under the workmen's compensation law, he appealed to a charitable agency for help, but on account of the benefits to which the law entitled him, it was not necessary to give financial relief. The requirements of the law, moreover, insured him free treatment by the factory doctor.

This group of families brought to dependency by manifold causes, but chiefly because of a problem of illness, is not as a whole, very different from any group of ordinary wage earners' families. It is the group between the self-supporting and the totally dependent almshouse family; the group which had not been able to meet alone the emergency which has touched it. The "down and out pauper's family" is hard to find. Such families figure largely in our ideas and conversations about "dependency," but even in the almshouses where one might perhaps expect to find them, they are relatively few. The Old Age Pensions' Commission has made an intensive study of the inmates of our almshouses. Their conclusions confirm ours—the great majority of the dependent families today are simply those normal families who have not been able to weather the rising cost of living and increase their savings, and so, for a combination of reasons, have been resourceless when illness or the disability of old age dropped upon them. The Board of Public Charities states that "Persons in receipt of out-door relief for the most part are the deserving poor, or those who become destitute through old age or misfortune." There may always be a few individuals who will be chronic paupers, but dependency, as it is known today, can be in large measure eventually abolished. It is a social disease which is nine-tenths preventable; it is caused by maladjustments which should rightly be the concern of the new social order; disease is foremost among these causes, how then, can we prevent the disease wherever possible and adequately meet the losses from that portion which cannot be prevented?

Sidney and Beatrice Webb have very clearly summed up the hazards which are constantly at work, undermining independence, and recruiting new soldiers for the army of the destitute. They say:

"As a matter of fact, we find five well-trodden paths along one or the other of which the vast majority—we might almost say all—of the three or four millions have gone down into the morass of destitution. At least one-third of them are sick or prematurely broken down in strength, and would not be destitute but for their sickness or infirmity. Then we have the army of widows with young children on their hands, who have been suddenly plunged into destitution by the premature death of the breadwinner. Of the total, indeed, one-third are infants and children, who are destitute not on account of any characteristic of their own, but merely because their parents are dead, or for one reason or other unable or unwilling to fulfil their parental obligations. A large contingent have fallen into destitution merely as the result of the infirmities of old age; whilst another large contingent are in the same condition plainly because of their imbecility, lunacy, or congenital feeble-mindedness. Finally, we have to recognize the able-bodied person whose destitution comes obviously from his prolonged inability—it may be incapacity or unwillingness—to find sufficient employment at a sufficient rate of pay to provide him and his dependents with the necessities of life. All these roads run in and out of each other, creating what we may accurately describe as a vicious circle round about the morass of destitution—parents are led more and more to neglect their children's needs if they have neither work nor wages; it is the neglected child which becomes the 'unemployable' man; the quite unnecessary, preventable sickness to which the wage earners are now exposed withdraws even the skilled industrious worker from his job, or deprives the wife and children of their bread-winner; whilst mental defectiveness complicates the problem by a subtle deterioration of the population as a whole. And the four millions in the morass are not permanently the same individuals. Some, let us hope, escape and rise, to reach again the firm ground of adequate self-support. Many—possibly four or five per cent.—died in the course of a year. Yet the total remains at pretty nearly the same figure. It is plain, therefore, that there is a constant recruitment. Every year sees two or three hundred thousand separate individuals—perhaps more—pressed down into the morass of destitution, along one or other of these roads, for the first time. This, it is clear, is what we have to prevent." (1)

It is to find methods of preventing this constant recruitment that is our problem. Poverty cannot easily be cured, but can rapidly be prevented, once the supply of these new recruits is cut off. Since sickness is more than any other single thing a forerunner of poverty, how then can we prevent sickness, and justly distribute the sickness burden?

No scheme of health insurance can be expected to cure existing poverty. Health insurance is not a "cure-all" for dependency which has been already created. Its purpose is to prevent employees from becoming dependent; to cut off a large proportion of those who constantly fall into the dependent group. Mr. McFadden, speaking before the National Fraternal Congress of America said: "Pauperism has been reduced by life insurance 33.1-3 per cent., and saves, through its forms, the nation in its effort to maintain the poor, about $30,000,000 a year." In a special study made for the commission of 110 families now under the care of the Mothers' Assistance Fund in Lancaster and Lackawanna counties, 102 were found to have been self-supporting before the father was taken ill.

Of 1,200 families of dependent widows with children studied in 1916 by this same organization, it was found that before the illness which caused the death of the father, 947, or 79 per cent, of the families had been wholly self-supporting. Only 253, or 21 per cent., were in some way dependent, and but 15 per cent. were in receipt of what was termed "charity." During the illness of the father, the number in some way dependent upon outside resources increased to 36 per cent., and after the father's death it more than doubled placing 78 per cent. of the families in a group where self-support was impossible. Thus at the beginning of the illness almost four-fifths were independent; after the death of the father almost four-fifths were forced into the dependent group.

In the report of the Mothers' Assistant Fund, (1) it is stated that the two great causes of dependency in the families under their care are: (first) the untimely deaths of the fathers, due in large part to preventable accident and disease, and (second) the fathers inability to safeguard his family against the death hazard on account of low wages, and the lack of provision by the State of any form of social insurance.

On the whole, conditions in Pennsylvania correspond only too well to the description of Warren H. Pillsbury, of the California Industrial Accident Commission:

"The present method of handling illness of wage earners is as follows: The workman becoming ill, struggles to remain at work as long as possible to avoid loss of wages, and refuses to go to a physician until the last moment because of fear of expense, thus preventing treatment at the time it is most effective, the early stages of the illness. When finally obliged to leave work, the income of himself and his family is ended. His savings will seldom last for more than a week or two of idleness. He then becomes a charge upon relatives, friends, and public charity. Worry over his financial condition prolongs his illness. Inability to procure necessary medical and surgical appliances or to take proper rest or sanatorium treatment delays recovery. The children are taken from school prematurely and put to work without adequate preparation or allowed to go upon the streets. Eventually he may go to the country hospital for a long period of time, and his wife will be taken care of by the Associated Charities, or will undertake work beyond her strength and become ill. The employer has to break a new man into the work. The community, friends or relatives have to support the family, and the man is inefficiently and haphazardly taken care of because of lack of organized social endeavor to meet the problem presented." SECTION III.

ADEQUACY OF PRESENT METHODS OF CARE.

PHYSICIANS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The number of physicians in the State at the present time, because of the demands of the Army for medical service, is of course in no way representative of normal conditions.

According to the report of the Social Insurance Committee of the American Medical Association, however, there were in 1916, 11,502 legally qualified physicians in Pennsylvania, (1) or an average of one physician for each 729 persons. This corresponds fairly well to the standard of one physician for each 700 persons, considered adequate by the committee, but gives no idea of the unevenness of distribution. It is interesting to find that while Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Scranton have one physician for each 431.516; and 663 persons respectively. Hazleton and Shenandoah, both important mining communities, have 848 and 1,031 persons respectively, for each physician. The contrast between urban and rural communities is even more marked, for in the latter the number of persons per physician is 1,297 as compared with 524 in cities of 25,000 and over. Among the most important reasons for this are the economic conditions in the various communities, which determine their ability to offer fair or poor remuneration for medical work.

HOSPITAL FACILITIES IN PENNSYLVANIA.

From the medical directory issued annually by the American Medical Association, a list furnished to the Modern Hospital magazine, and the directory of the Board of Public Charities, the number of beds in public hospitals, special and general, in each county of the State was computed for the year 1916. This, of course, is an over-estimate of the facilities available to the average employe, for it includes a number of beds in private rooms, which are far beyond his means. No data is available, however, by which these can be deducted. There were a total of 20,118 beds in the public general hospitals of the State in 1916. Various classes of public special hospitals including those for epilepsy, tuberculosis, contagious diseases, cancer, maternity, surgical work, children's diseases, and eye and ear cases contained an additional 6,603 beds, and insane asylums contained 11,843. Exclusive of these asylums the total number of beds in public hospitals was 26,721, or 3.4 beds per 1,000 persons on the basis of the population of the State in 1910. On the basis of the estimated population in 1916 (8,522, 017) the number of beds per 1,000 population is 3.1. Either estimate is far below the five beds per 1,000 population which authorities tell us are necessary for adequate hospital accommodation.

Sixteen of the sixty-seven counties in Pennsylvania, some of them at considerable distances from better supplied areas, have no hospital beds whatever, and nine other counties have less than one per 1,000 persons. (1)

A division of the State into sections, as shown by the appended map, (2) illustrates the inadequacy of existing hospital facilities.

The nineteen counties included in Section I represent the bituminous coal region of Pennsylvania, and in 1916 produced 162,010,334 tons of coal, or more than 95 per cent. of the entire bituminous output of the State. This district with a population of 2,636,026 persons, or 34.38 per cent. of the total State population, has 8,276 hospital beds, or an average of 3.10 per 1,000 persons. More than two-thirds of these beds are located in Allegheny County, which has only 38.6 per cent. of the population of the entire district, and is not readily accessible to the most remote and most poorly equipped counties. Exclusive of Allegheny County, the average number of beds per 1,000 population for the district is only .14. Because of the highly industrial character of the population and the health and accident hazards involved in mining, this provision is shockingly inadequate. Two counties, nether of which is within easy reach of a well-supplied area, have no beds at all, and six have less than one bed per 1,000 persons.

Section II, the anthracite coal district, comprises eleven counties with a population of 1,132,035, or 14.76 per cent. of the total population of Pennsylvania. The 1916 coal production of these counties was 87,680,198 tons, or more than 98 per cent. of the anthracite output of the State. In this whole section there are only 1,872 beds, or 1.65 per 1,000 persons, and the distribution is still more uneven and unsatisfactory than in the bituminous district. Four of the eleven counties have no hospital beds, and are not accessible in adequately supplied districts.

Section III, which includes the northern and north central counties, thirteen in all, has an average of 2.72 beds per 1,000, or 1.792 for the population of 656,698. The distribution, exclusive of Erie County, which has almost one-third the total number of beds, is more even than in the anthracite and bituminous districts, although Cameron and Forest Counties are entirely lacking in hospital facilities. Forest lies next to Clarion County, one of the two bituminous counties which have no beds.

The twenty-three remaining counties of the State make up Section IV, which has 42.29 per cent. of the total State population. This section in comparison with the other three, stands slightly higher in the number of beds, having 12,545 for the population of 3,240, 353, or 3.87 per 1,000.

(1) Statistics Regarding the Medical Profession. Social Insurance Series, Pamphlet VII, American Medical Association.

(1) See Table II at end of this section

(2) See Table I at end of this section.

But, exclusive of Philadelphia County, with 9,659 beds, or 6.2 per 1,000, the average for the district is only .88, while eight counties have no beds at all. Of these eight counties, four, Union, Snyder, Juniata and Perry are adjacent. Perry is next to Cumberland, with an average of only .90 beds per 1,000, and south of Cumberland is Adams County, with no beds. Fulton, with no beds, joins Franklin with only 1.0 per 1,000, and Bedford, one of the bituminous counties with no hospital facilities.

This concentration of existing hospitals in the two large cities of the State is not surprising, and there is no evidence to show that these cities are over-supplied with hospital accommodations. The problem is not so much one of poor distribution as of inadequate supply.

But even if accommodations were adequate, it would not be possible to look with satisfaction on the hospital situation of the State. When the cost of ward beds is beyond the means of probably half the employes of the State; when in a single year, nearly 2,000,000 days of free hospital treatment are given and almost 900,000 persons patronize charity dispensaries, some change in method is called for which will make medical care available to the average employe as a matter of right, not charity.

MEDICAL CARE RECEIVED BY EMPLOYEES AND THEIR FAMILIES. (1)

The sickness surveys show a considerable number of sick persons who receive no medical attention at all, or receive it too late to prevent the illness from becoming serious. In Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania, 25.4 per cent. of the illnesses, including 49.9 per cent. of the persons sick but able to work, and 24.2 per cent. of those actually disabled, had no medical care. In the Philadelphia survey 21.7 per cent. of the 514 cases of illness were treated only by patent medicines and home remedies. In an additional 16.3 per cent. the kind of treatment was "unknown," and it is probable that the majority of these received no care. A physician had been consulted in only 60 per cent. of the total number of cases. Among the Kensington families, no care at all was received in 154 cases and home treatment or patent medicine only in an additional 144 cases, making a total of 14.9 per cent. of the 1,924 illnesses found in the survey.

The use of patent medicines, which is more fully discussed in the section on "The Cost of Medical Care," is a striking feature in every group. Of 348 girls in the study of Working Women who had expenditures for medical care, 39.9 had medicine only. Although 97.5 per cent. of the 1,360 cases of illness in the Visiting Nurse study were said to have had medical care, 11.4 per cent. of these had had only patent medicine. The nurses who made this study were impressed with the inadequate character of the care generally received.

In cases where medical care was reported, a private physician had most often been consulted. This was true in 86.6 per cent. of the treated illnesses in Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania, 48.9 per cent. of those in the Visiting Nurse group, 37.1 per cent. of those in Kensington, and 57.1 per cent. of the working women who had expenditures for medical care. In all except the Sickness and Dependency study, the use of the "district doctor," dispensary, hospital or convalescent home was infrequent, tuberculosis, accidents and mental diseases being the usual cause of institutional care. Nursing care was reported in less than 10 per cent. of the cases. This figure was highest in the Visiting Nurse Society study, where it was recorded for 11.1 per cent. of the cases under treatment.

About 10 per cent. of the nurses were described as "practical nurses."

The amount of free treatment cannot be accurately estimated, but there were many instances in which the fact of medical charity was beyond dispute. For instance in the Sickness and Dependency study, the Poor Boards' "district doctor" was called in 119 times and a dispensary was consulted 421 times. No doubt most of the 435 persons who went to a sanitarium and seventy-one who went to a convalescent home were also treated free of charge. (2)

Within the Visiting Nurse group, 37.8 per cent. of the nursing care was only partially paid for, and an additional 14.8 per cent. was given entirely free, while in the 324 cases treated by city doctors, "practical nurses," dispensaries, hospitals and convalescent homes, there were certainly many instances of medical charity.

A special study of maternity care in Pennsylvania would be highly desirable as certain facts on this subject which have been noted indicate that mothers too frequently fail to receive proper attention at this critical time. For instance the Federal Children's Bureau, in its study of infant mortality in Johnstown, states that 37.9 per cent. of the mothers of children born in 1911 in that city had only a midwife as attendant at the births of their babies, and 2.3 per cent. no attendant, or neighbors, relatives or friends. Out of 1,463 of these mothers, 401 took up all, and 626 others at least part, of their household duties in less than fourteen days after confinement. The infant death-rate was considerably lower in the cases having better attention and the longer period of rest. (1)

It is well known that every expectant mother requires special prenatal care and instruction to safeguard her own life and health and that of her child. Yet the Dispensary Aid Society of Pittsburgh reported that the district in which they carried on intensive child hygiene work during the year ending April 1, 1916, only ten out of 106 mothers had any prenatal care. (2)

The fact has been emphasized in connection with the Sickness and Dependency Study that the crisis of childbirth combined with the illness of the breadwinner, frequently exhausted family resources and required charitable aid. One or two cases were found in which the husband was obliged to stay at home from work and care for his wife because no other help was available.

The difficulties of the working mother, whose income stops just at the time she is most in need of it were often illustrated.

Mr. P. was a laborer, but his work was irregular, and his wife did washing to help support the five children. Olga, the oldest girl, was of working age but had never been able to work on account of tuberculosis, and during the time the relief society was interested in the family, she went to a State tuberculosis sanitarium, where she died. The record states that Mrs. P. "worked nearly up to the time of her confinement and as soon after as she could stand on her feet." She had no prenatal care.

MEDICAL CARE RECEIVED BY MINERS AND THEIR FAMILIES.

A special effort was made by the Commission to investigate the extent and nature of sickness care received by miners and their families. Although conditions vary widely, the following facts are generally true:

A great many companies, especially in the bituminous region, have organized systems of "contract practice" under which each employe pays a definite monthly sum, usually from $1.00 to $1.50 if he is married, and from fifty to seventy-five cents if he is single. These sums are paid by the employers to physicians who agree to care for illness among the miners and their families. Operations, maternity cases and long, serious illnesses are usually excluded from the list of ailments to be treated, and medicines, appliances, etc., are frequently charged for in addition. Although this practice seems to be proving satisfactory in some districts, it has been abandoned by practically all the anthracite operators and by two of the largest employers in the bituminous region. The objections to it seem to be the usual criticisms made of "contract" and "lodge" practice, with the additional complaint that in many cases too few doctors are employed. One company, for instance, had one doctor and one nurse to care for between 2,000 and 3,000 families living in nine different districts within a radius of several miles. As no records are kept by the doctors practicing under this contract system, it is almost impossible to get any clear idea of the extent of their work.

The state maintains ten hospitals for miners' whose work is described in Part III, Section 1 of this report. In addition, a few companies, mostly in the anthracite district maintain private hospitals where their employees and sometimes members of their families, may receive practically free treatment. The foreign workers, as a rule, appreciate the advantages of hospital care more keenly than the Americans and take advantage of the opportunity to secure it to greater extent. In some instances, the location of the hospitals makes it practically impossible for members of the family, or even the family physician, to visit the patient, in which case hospital care is less often received.

Employees of the large number of operators who do not maintain the "contract system" depend upon lodge doctors and private practitioners for treatment. In many communities physicians make a specialty of this kind of practice and the care given is very good, especially among Hungarian and Slovic families who are noted for their scrupulousness about paying for treatment. In the Western Pennsylvania Survey, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company found that 85.4 per cent of the bituminous miners' illnesses, and 77.4 per cent of those among anthracite miners received medical care. This was attributed partially to the large number of accident cases included in the survey. The report states:

"It must not be inferred from the higher ratios of medical attendance shown for the three occupational classes (anthracite and bituminous miners and iron and steel workers) that these special groups are better able financially to provide private medical care for themselves." (1)

As a rule, maternity cases receive less frequent and poorer treatment than any others. Midwives, frequently untrained, are generally employed, instead of physicians. Nursing care is very seldom available, and little is being done to encourage the improvement in sanitation and health knowledge that would do so much to decrease the amount of sickness, particularly among young children. Attempts have been made by some insurance companies to provide nursing service for their industrial policy-holders, but as yet this is in no way adequate. One company employed before the war two nurses to care for about eight thousand policy-holders living in a district with a ten-mile radius.

The experience of one bituminous mining company employing about 2,000 men is interesting. In their "contract system" they have four physicians and a visiting nurse, as well as facilities for giving instruction in hygiene, prenatal and infant care. They consider that the cost of maintaining this care is more than met by the improvement in the health and efficiency of their employees. This seems to have been the experience of the mining companies generally, so far as accidents are concerned, for most of them carry their own compensation insurance and provide immediate and adequate care for industrial accident cases. The health conditions, especially among the families of these miners would seem to make imperative some similar provision for sickness care.

MEDICAL CARE IN ALMSHOUSES.

Figures supplied to the Commission by the Board of Public Charities give a fair idea of facilities for medical care in seventy-nine almshouses in the state. Thirty-two of these institutions, or 40 per cent contain no hospital facilities whatever, and there are such great differences between the so-called "hospitals" in the others that it is impossible to consider many of them adequate. Over half the institutions have no hospital equipment or it is described as "poor." Only twenty-five have nurses in attendance, although practically all have "matrons" and "attendants." In fifty-six cases, a physician is said to be in charge, but as this is very often known to be the County Doctor who can be called, it is doubtful whether many places have a resident physician. No records are available showing the number of almshouse inmates who are ill during the year, the number of visits made by the attending physicians or the nature or length of the illnesses. The fact that so little is known by the Board of Public Charities which has charge of the seventy-nine institutions about the type of medical care given, is evidence of its casual and inadequate character.

EXISTING HEALTH INSURANCE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The carriers of health insurance at the present time in Pennsylvania may be roughly classified as commercial insurance companies, trade unions, fraternal orders, and establishment funds covering employees of individual establishments.

COMMERCIAL INSURANCE COMPANIES CARRYING HEALTH INSURANCE.

In the absence of any social organization by the state, certain commercial insurance companies have entered into competition with trade unions and mutual benefit societies to furnish the desired sickness insurance for wage earners. The reports from these companies are difficult to secure and do not classify their policy-holders so that the number of employees among them can be ascertained. The better paid, skilled employees may be able to pay for a fair amount of accident and sickness insurance, but the rates are prohibitive for the majority. It is only because the need for insurance is so widely felt and protection against sickness so necessary, that the business of these companies is growing. Most of them began by offering accident insurance, but the demand for sickness insurance became so great that this was included.

In the latest report of the Pennsylvania State Insurance Department, 1916, figures for sixteen Commercial insurance companies are given. These companies paid during that year, 4,924 claims for accidents and illnesses, amounting to $84,725.59. (1)

The larger part of this, in all probability, went to employers and professional men, rather than to the rank and file of employees.

To appreciate the slight extent to which commercial insurance companies have developed a health insurance business among the employees of the state, a comparison may be made between the $84,725.58 paid out for 4,924 health insurance and accident claims in 1916 by sixteen of these companies, with the business done by the three principal companies doing an industrial life insurance business. It will be found that the great majority of employees are insured in this way for sums of from $100.00 to $500.00, the premiums for which are paid weekly to agents making door-to-door collections. In the Kensington Survey, 77.4 per cent of the 3,198 persons covered and 53.3 per cent of the wage-earners, carried such insurance, practically all with the commercial companies. The sickness survey of Western Pennsylvania was made among such industrial policy-holders. This industrial life insurance is to guard against the dreaded Potter's Field and to provide for decent burial.

In 1916 these three companies, according to the annual report of the State Department of Insurance, issued 5,640,000 policies. The number of policies lapsing was nearly half as many, or 2,470,000. The total premiums paid these companies in 1916 amounted to $256,000,000. They paid out $78,000,000 in claims and their excess of income over expenditures was reported to be more than $119,000,000.

Of these 5,640,000 policies 669,998 were issued in Pennsylvania for industrial life insurance. Premiums paid for these during the year amounted to $22,526,043.05. More than twelve times as many policies were issued in the industrial branches as were issued in the "ordinary branches," although the amount of policies in the "ordinary branches" was 65 per cent of the amount of the industrial policies. The industrial policies which ceased to be in force during 1916 number over 400,000, leaving in force December 31, 1916 in the industrial branches of these three companies, 5,326,107 policies, amounting to $678,956,915.00. More than 59,000 industrial policies had been settled during the year, the settlements amounting to almost $7,000,000.00. (2)

The $84,725.58 paid out by commercial companies for sickness and accident claims in Pennsylvania is small indeed in comparison with these sums. It is frequently estimated by advocates of compulsory health insurance that the average employe, for the same sum he now pays for burial insurance, could receive, under a properly organized system of universal health insurance, adequate protection against sickness as well as a modest funeral benefit.

The purpose of commercial insurance companies, from the standpoint of the directors and stockholders, is profit, and the social purpose is secondary. As a result there is much room for mismanagement in writing sickness insurance and common complaints that the contracts are narrow, and the settlements uncertain. Many companies insure only diseases which rarely occur and many of the most common are excluded; or the technical clauses modifying the agreement are so many that apparently more is promised than paid. At any rate it is too often true of this type of carrier that the insured fails to receive his benefit when he most needs it.

Mr. H. who was a barber with a wife and five children between five and fifteen years of age, fell ill with tuberculosis. During his illness the family expenses were met by the irregular earnings of his two oldest children, but it was also necessary to obtain some help from a relief society. Mr. H. is not known to have received any medical care at all. He was insured against sickness in a commercial company, and was entitled to sick benefits of $10.00 a week for six weeks, but the company claimed that Mr. H. had chronic bronchitis, and had been ill with it when he took out his policy and they refused to pay any benefits.

Abuses to which health insurance by commercial companies has lent itself are indicated by the state law regulating such companies. (1)

The law expressly excludes "assessment associations," fraternal societies and establishment funds which non-commercial. But casualty companies insuring against sickness and accident are not allowed to issue policies until thirty days after their rates are filed with the Insurance Commissioner. All benefits payable and the dates at which the policy comes into force and expires are to be named. The minimum size of the printing is specified. All exceptions must be printed with the same prominence as the benefits, and any provisions for the reduction of benefits in certain cases, with greater prominence. The practices which these clauses are intended to prevent are obvious.

FRATERNALS CARRYING HEALTH INSURANCE.

By far the largest class of health insurance carriers in the state are the fraternal. Facts regarding health insurance carried by fraternal orders have been compiled from the report of the State Department of Insurance, (2) and from a study of sixty-eight of the most prominent and representative fraternal orders operating in Pennsylvania. Forty-three of these were maintaining sick benefit funds, about which detailed information was secured.

Each large fraternal order has a main or supreme law-making body to which all its locals must apply when desirous of amending a law. The local lodges are very independent, however, and are usually left free to regulate the details of administration.

There is marked similarity between these fraternal societies and the friendly societies of Great Britain which operate under the compulsory health insurance law established there in 1911, but unlike these friendly societies the membership of the fraternal in this country is not at all confined to the so-called working class. The Catholic orders in all probability are composed in large measure of wage earners, but as a general rule with the exception of these and certain of the foreign societies, unskilled and low paid workmen do not constitute any large part of the membership; for the most part the fraternal are made up of the skilled workmen and professional groups.

There are two general types into which the fraternal orders are divided—the social, or purely fraternal order, and the insurance fraternal. In the former, small irregular sick benefit provisions are made, largely by the local bodies, with slight minimum requirements from the main order. In the latter, more explicit regulations for the sick benefit funds are enforced, but the sick benefit is a matter of secondary importance, for the real offering of the insurance fraternal is life insurance.

In all fraternal much "brotherly assistance" is rendered which cannot be reported in statistical tables, or prescribed in the laws. Much of this is done as a matter of charity. Some fraternal have established old-age pensions, and it is not unusual to find that large homes are maintained for the aged members and for orphaned children.

The fraternal are organized on a basis of nationality, religion, or general fraternal rites. The fraternal of various nationalities, Lithuanian, Ukrainian, Slavonic, exist in large numbers in the mining regions of the state, where the foreign element in the population is large.

There are usually many membership qualifications. As a usual thing the members are restricted to an age group of from sixteen to fifty years. Occasionally others are admitted as "honorary or social" members, but are not eligible to the sick or death benefits. In addition to the age restrictions, approximately half the fraternal require a medical examination and a certificate signed by a physician; in other cases the member himself swears that he is physically sound and not suffering from any chronic ailment. Many specific diseases, varying with the requirements of the different fraternal, exclude applicants from membership. In almost every case venereal diseases, tuberculosis and any chronic trouble are excluded as well as men working in occupations in which there are special health hazards; consequently the group covered by such insurance as the fraternal is restricted to those who are comparatively physically fit and not subject to recognized occupational hazards.

Weekly lodge dues are paid in most cases, although some few orders have quarterly or, as was found in one instance, yearly dues. These dues are generally divided into four parts—one portion goes to the main body, one to the maintenance expenses of the local lodge, one to the funeral benefit fund and one to the sick benefit fund. In the case of these fraternal which have centralized sick benefit funds of which there are very few, the sick benefit tax is paid by the local to the main body.

The eligibility to sick benefit depends first on the member's standing. If he is behind in his dues, he cannot receive his benefit. Second, if he has not belonged to the fraternal a certain length of time, he is not eligible. The probation period is usually either six months or a year. Third, his illness must be of sufficient length to cover the waiting period, usually one or two weeks. In other words, no benefit is paid until the man is sick two weeks, if the waiting period is one week—or sick three weeks, if the waiting period is two weeks. In only one case was it found that benefits were paid by the day. Other fraternal paid by the week, disregarding any fraction of a week. In an order where the waiting period is seven days, and a member is ill for but thirteen days, he receives nothing—if he is ill for twenty-seven days he receives two weeks' benefits.

Only three of the fraternal orders studied had sick benefits which were extended to the dependents of a lodge member. These were medical, not cash benefits, and in two instances were for maternity care only. Many fraternal give a funeral benefit on the death of a member's wife, and the system of funeral benefits is much more comprehensive than any system of sick benefits.

The possible sick benefits are of two kinds—cash and medical. Four-fifths of the lodges have cash benefits only. Three fraternal had regular "lodge doctors" in every local. Others reported that the matter of a physician rested entirely with the local bodies—in one case 50 per cent of these local bodies had their doctors—in another case 25 per cent—and so on. The doctor is hired on a par capita basis. He usually receives $1.00 a year per member, and is then responsible for all illness except operations, maternity care, and certain "serious diseases" which vary in the different fraternal. In one instance an arrangement existed with a "lodge druggist" similar to the arrangement with the lodge doctor. Several lodges paid for nursing care upon occasion, but practically always as a matter of charity.

The prevailing cash benefit is $5.00 a week for thirteen weeks in any given year, after a waiting period of one week. Some few fraternal have a graded scale, and pay benefits after thirteen weeks, occasionally for the duration of the illness. Two fraternal reported a scale of graded membership, according to the amount of sick benefit desired, and the occupation of the member. The largest weekly benefit was for $10.00. This was paid for only ten weeks in one year, after a probation period of twelve months and a waiting period of seven days.

(1) Public Laws of Pennsylvania, 1911. No. 667.

(2) According to two statutes of April 6, 1893, certain beneficial societies are required to report to the State Insurance Commissioner and their funds are exempted from state taxation. This does not apply to societies formed by churches or corporations to which only their members or employes can belong, or to secret beneficial societies not accepting the provisions of the act.

Long waiting periods and special qualifications as to age and physical ability are necessary in order to fix risks. One large fraternal order in Pennsylvania has recently centralized its Sick Benefit Fund in order to distribute more evenly the sickness burden. Before this centralization the cost per member in the local lodges varied from $5.88 to $6.08 according to the ages and number of members, and the general condition of the local. Now, with a centralized system, a flat rate of $1.80 per year per member maintains the sick benefit fund and allows a surplus in the treasury as a guard against insolvency. In 1917, 938 members drew 4,613 weeks of sick benefits from this fund. This was about six per cent of the membership. The average duration of sickness was five weeks, but 184 of the 938 drew benefits for ten weeks, the maximum allowed in this fund. Of the many sicknesses of under two weeks' or over ten weeks' duration, we know nothing.

Isolating three of the sick benefit funds whose reports were fullest and whose waiting period was one week, we find that 830 out of 5,857 members were ill during one year, or approximately one out of every seven. The average length of the illness was five and a half weeks.

So far as wage-earners are concerned, this type of health insurance has several limitations. First, it reaches comparatively few in the wage-earning group. Second, it is bound by many restrictive rules; third, the benefits are usually inadequate, and seldom include medical care. Fourth, the lack of centralization and the age differences in the locals make the benefit funds often financially unsound.

TRADE UNION FUNDS CARRYING HEALTH INSURANCE.

Trade Union Sick Benefit Funds afford as a rule even less protection than the funds of the fraternal. In both types of insurance the sick benefit is secondary to the death benefit. For the most part the establishment of sick benefit funds is left entirely with the local unions, although nineteen of the international unions are known to have sick benefit systems. Based upon studies of union sick benefit funds in five industrial centers, made in 1917 by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor, it would seem that about one fourth of the local unions in existence have some scheme for the payment of sick benefits.

Practically all trade union funds limit the eligibility to sick benefits to members in good standing who have passed a probation period, usually of six months, and whose disability is not due to intemperance, debauchery, or other immoral conduct.

As a rule, the number of days of sickness which must elapse before the payment of cash benefits, is seven. In six of the large international unions it is fourteen. More than three-fourths of the funds studied provide a sick benefit of $5.00 a week, payable, in the majority of the cases, for thirteen weeks in a single year. The following table shows the waiting period, the maximum benefit period, the amount of the weekly benefit given, and the average annual number of days of disability per member, in sixteen of the international funds. (1) These regulations are typical of all the existing trade union funds.

(1) No waiting period in cases of disability due to accidents.

(3) Three dollars per week for female members.

* This organization is now paying a weekly benefit of $7.60.

The average number of days of disability varied from 4.5 to 1.1, and in the majority of cases was about three days. It must be remembered in considering these figures that the group is a selected one, and that only disabilities for which benefits were paid are included. Of the many illnesses lasting less than the waiting period or more than the maximum time for which benefits are paid, we know nothing.

Very few of the funds furnish their disabled members with any medical care or supplies. Occasionally a union like the International Typographical Union, maintains a sanatorium for its sick members, but in almost all cases the fund limits its benefits to small cash payments.

ESTABLISHMENT FUNDS CARRYING HEALTH INSURANCE.

The most complete protection seems to be that provided by some of the funds maintained within individual factories or establishments. These are of several kinds:

1. Funds financed and managed entirely by the employees.
2. Funds managed by the employees, to which the employer makes occasional gifts.
3. Funds financed jointly by employer and employees, and managed jointly or controlled entirely by the employer.
4. Funds financed wholly by the employer.

In the last two types membership in the fund is frequently a compulsory condition of employment.

It has been impossible to make a thorough study of all establishment funds in the state, but the experience of five representative funds in Philadelphia for a period of from three to five years was examined, and figures covering twenty Pennsylvania funds were taken from the Establishment Fund Study made by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics. According to this bureau, among the 671 establishments in the state employing more than 100 persons each, there were in December, 1916, seventy-two establishment funds.

The dues in these funds usually range between ten cents and a dollar per week, some funds having several membership classes in which both dues and benefits are graded according to the wage received. In many cases the employer's contribution takes the form of paying the cost of administration, including necessary salaries. In about one-half the funds studied by the Bureau of Labor Statistics the employers made contributions toward maintenance, but in two-thirds of the cases, this contribution was less than 50 per cent of the cost.

The "period before eligibility to benefits" is non-existent in some funds, but in others may be as long as three or four months, in order to exclude the casual employe and the malingerer. These long periods are often prescribed even in funds where membership is compulsory.

Benefits begin after waiting periods of from three days to a week, and usually consist only of cash benefits amounting to from $3.00 to $15.00 per week and payable for from five to thirteen weeks in each year. Some funds pay benefits at reduced rates from the end of the regular benefit period, during a longer specified period or as long as the illness lasts. Seventeen of the twenty Pennsylvania funds in the Bureau of Labor Statistics Study had the seven-day waiting period, which predominated among all the funds. Only three of the Pennsylvania funds, or 15 per cent and about 20 per cent of all the funds, supplied medical treatment. In all but some five per cent of the funds throughout the country, moreover, medical care as reported was confined to minor surgical operations, supplies and a single visit from a physician. The average weekly cash benefit paid by the Pennsylvania funds was $8.32. Death benefits of from $75.00 to $500.00 are usually paid.

This type of insurance, as would naturally be expected, is most often found in the larger, more progressive establishments, especially the railroads, telephone companies, department stores, and steel mills. One large group of workers, the miners, seem to be almost entirely untouched by it, only one company having been found to be maintaining such a fund, and one other company having taken out a group policy with a commercial company.

The members of the employe's family are rarely if ever included in such a fund, although occasionally medical and nursing care supplied to them at reduced rates.

In comparison with trade union, fraternal, and commercial health insurance, the establishment fund gives more adequate and certain cash benefits and is more simple in administration. Its weakness is its usual lack of provision for medical care and its common restriction to employes in the better managed establishments.

Results of the survey show conclusively the limitations of existing health insurance facilities.

A study of the existing insurance shows that it is carried mainly by the wage-earners of the family, that insurance in fraternal is most popular, and that most of it provides only a small weekly cash benefit, medical treatment being seldom supplied.

The tendency to insure only wage-earners is illustrated by the fact that in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, while 40.6 per cent of the iron and steel employes and about 39 per cent of the anthracite and bituminous miners were insured, only 17 per cent of the bituminous miners' families were insured and 12 per cent of the anthracite miners' families.

In the Kensington Survey, while 34 per cent of the wage-earners were insured against "sickness and death," only 17.4 per cent of the total number of persons covered were protected in that way. Twelve dependents, as against ninety-two wage-earners, carried sickness insurance in the 893 Sickness and Dependency families.

An analysis of the benefits provided by health insurance in the Sickness and Dependency Study shows that a cash benefit of $5.00, $6.00 or $7.00 a week was the usual return. The maximum period during which benefits were payable was between six and thirteen, and between thirteen and twenty-six weeks a year, in about an equal number of cases. Although the importance of adequate medical care in shortening the period of illness and improving health is universally recognized, medical benefits were provided by only a fifth of the policies. Except one establishment fund, which gave sanitarium treatment when needed; this took the form, in all cases, of medical treatment by the factory or "lodge" doctor.

The cost of insurance in this study was known in only thirty-one families. Although this number is too small for definite conclusions, it may be mentioned that in fifteen cases it was between ten and twenty-five cents a week, in nine, between twenty-five and fifty cents, and in five, between fifty and seventy-five cents. It would seem that by their unaided voluntary efforts, Pennsylvania employes are not at present able to purchase health insurance having adequate benefits.

Another serious limitation of health insurance as it exists in Pennsylvania to-day is found in the restrictive rules of many benefit societies, which often prevent the receipt of benefits in time of need. It is noteworthy that in the Sickness and Dependency Study, although some form of health insurance was carried in 101 families, only sixty-nine were in actual receipt of benefits. One woman was even refused benefits, though unable to work, because she went to the hospital to have her tubercular glands dressed, and was therefore "not confined to the house." Other and more legitimate reasons for refusal were arrears of dues, the initial waiting period, and the alleged existence of the disease at the time of joining the society.

Mr. B., a structural iron worker whose wage was $5.00 a day but whose work was irregular, was ill and out of work for four months on account of sciatica. The family soon exhausted their own resources. They then received help from a national society and from a relief agency, which secured free hospital care for Mr. B. and aided in the support of the family. Mr. B. belonged to a fraternal sick benefit society, to which he paid $10.00 a year, but he could obtain no benefits as he had fallen somewhat behind in dues.

In the study of the 110 Mothers' Assistance Fund Families, although there were thirty-two policies calling for health insurance during the father's illness, the benefits had been paid in but twenty cases. Because others were behind in their dues, or had excluded diseases, or had violated some rule of the insurance organization, benefits had been refused.

EXTENT OF HEALTH INSURANCE IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Sickness surveys show that while a considerable minority of wage-earners have already turned to health insurance as a means of protection from the effects of sickness, it has developed least among those who need it most. They show also that existing health insurance pays but small benefits and is limited in usefulness by the many restrictive rules which have been discussed.

The percentage of persons protected by some form of health insurance was considerably higher in the Kensington and the Western Pennsylvania Surveys than in the other surveys.

In Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, 30.7 per cent of the males fifteen years of age and over were in receipt of some form of sick benefits. (1) In Pittsburgh the figures was 29.4 per cent. However, benefits paid under the Workmen's Compensation law as well as under voluntary health insurance are included in these figures. Since disability from accident was very prevalent among the Western Pennsylvania workmen, to find the real extent of health insurance a considerable deduction from these figures should in all probability be made. In the Kensington district of Philadelphia, however, no less than 34.0 per cent. of all the wage-earners covered carried some form of insurance against sickness.

In the study of Mothers' Association Fund Families 29 per cent of the fathers carried some form of health insurance, in the Visiting Nurse Study, 18 per cent of the families had this protection; in the Working Women's Study but 12 per cent of the women carried health insurance.

In contrast to the extent of insurance among ordinary groups of employes, is the fact that of the 893 Philadelphia families in the Sickness and Dependency Study, of which an extensive study was made in the previous section, only 11 per cent carried health insurance of any kind; only ninety-two of the wage-earners were insured, while by no means all of the persons insured actually received insurance benefits among the 418 charity illness cases studied by the Bureau of Social Research, insurance was found in only 19 per cent of the 300 about which the fact was ascertained. Moreover, health insurance was least often carried by the wage-earners having low incomes, who are most likely to need additional resources in time of illness. While the numbers involved are small, so that conclusions should be guarded, the difference is striking. In thirty-seven families with incomes of over $15.00 a week, insurance was carried in eleven, or 30 per cent. In 179 receiving less than $15.00 a week, insurance was carried in only twenty-two, or 12 per cent. It has been pointed out in discussing sickness as a factor in destitution, that the majority of these families, containing a high proportion of young children and fewer wage-earners than the average, are living through the time when the strain on family expenses is heaviest and the fewest resources exist. In view of this fact and the small percentage of insurance among the low wage group, it can rightly be said that under present voluntary methods, those who most need health insurance are least likely to carry it.

The predominance of lodge and fraternal societies as the carriers of health insurance among employes was clear in each study. In Western Pennsylvania 52 per cent of the insurance was of that variety, in Pittsburgh alone, 53 per cent and in the Kensington Survey no less than 73 per cent. Sixty-seven of the 103 policies found in the 893 dependent families were with fraternal, and thirty-nine of fifty-four policies in the families studied by the Bureau of Social Research. In the Study of Working Women, forty out of forty-eight policies were with fraternal, and in the Mother's Assistance Fund Study over 50 per cent were held in these lodges. Doctors and employers in the mining districts reported that from 50 to 90 per cent of the miners were carrying fraternal health insurance. Besides this type of carrier, the number of trade union funds and other carriers found is insignificant.

Taking the figures found in the Western Pennsylvania Survey as the most representative for the state as a whole, we find that of the 685 cases in receipt of sick benefit, 365, or 52 per cent were being paid by fraternal societies or lodges. Establishment funds, or employers directly, were paying sick benefits in 11.4 per cent of the cases; commercial insurance companies in 8.0 per cent and trade unions in 8.6 per cent. Miscellaneous groups of other agencies, including Workmen's Compensation, provided for 20.5 per cent of the total number of persons in receipt of any kind of benefit. (1)

It can be concluded that not more than 30 per cent of the wage-earners carry any insurance protection against the sickness risk; that more than half the insurance carried is of the fraternal type; that trade union funds, commercial insurance companies, establishment funds and miscellaneous agencies account for the remaining half; that the insurance is carried by the better-paid and more highly skilled workmen, is seldom extended to dependents, and rarely affords either medical care or adequate cash benefits.

(1) Table VII at end of Section contrasts types of benefit received in the various surveys.

Figures in parenthesis indicate number of beds per 1,000 exclusive of state Tuberculosis Sanatoria. If we consider the population of Pennsylvania in 1918 as 8,991,175, number of beds taken from 1917-18 directors we may consider the present number per 1,000 population as 2.9. Total hospital beds not including insane—26,721.

SECTION IV.

INFLUENCE OF WORKING CONDITIONS ON HEALTH

Dr. Alice Hamilton, of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, has written for the Commission a report on the principal Pennsylvania industries in which abnormal hazards to health are present. The value of this work from so authoritative a source can hardly be over-emphasized, especially as existing material on local conditions is very scant, and time and money for first-hand investigations are lacking.

In addition to this study, which deals with the relation between specific industrial processes and certain definitely recognized occupational diseases, other facts have been collected which show the influence that conditions of occupation may and often do have upon the general health of the workers. Aside from the dangers presented by industrial poisons, there are innumerable other factors connected often with the place of employment and the methods of work, but not necessarily inherent in the industrial process—among them, ventilation, sanitation, temperature, posture, illumination, fatigue—over which the employe has little if any control, but which affect him in varying degrees, according to the nature of his occupation and the surroundings in which he works and lives. "The wage-earner sells to his employer, not merely so much muscular energy, or mechanical ingenuity, but practically his whole existence during the working day. An over-crowded or badly ventilated workshop may exhaust his energies, sewer gas or poisonous material may undermine his health, a badly constructed plant or imperfect machinery may maim him or even cut short his days; coarsening surroundings may brutalize his life and degrade his character; yet, when he accepts employment, he tacitly undertakes to mind whatever machinery, use whatever materials, breathe whatever atmosphere, and endure whatever sights, sounds and smells, he may find in the employer's workshop, however inimical they may be to health and safety." (1)

"Aside from family ways of living and bad places to live in, there are many conditions of labor which reduce the health and weaken the resistance of the individual, making him susceptible to infection and making him and his descendants less likely and able to bring into the world and rear healthy, robust children. The true significance of many bad conditions of labor relates to the demoralization of the health, morals and social status of the individual and to home conditions from inadequate wages." (2)

The effects of many such harmful conditions of employment are not generally appreciated or understood. In the absence of any sudden or spectacular illness, the slow development of premature old age, blindness, rheumatism, and degenerative diseases of the lungs, heart and kidneys may proceed without the attempt being made to seek their cause in the factory or workshop. In Pennsylvania, in 1916, of 58,703 deaths of persons of working age, between 20 and 70 years, 46,714, or 79.5 per cent. were from causes which, according to Dr. Emery R. Hayburst of the Ohio State Board of Health, "would not bear scrutiny as either timely or justifiable," and which in his study of Industrial Health Hazards in Ohio he considers to a certain extent indicative of the effects of occupation.

One-sixth of these deaths were due to diseases of the circulatory system, and one-eighth to organic heart disease alone. All diseases of the circulatory system, and particularly organic heart disease, are in the majority of cases preventable and worthy of investigation as to cause when found in persons below seventy years of age; and yet nearly one-third the total number of persons who died from these two causes in the state in 1916 were between twenty and fifty, and more than 60 per cent of them were under seventy years of age. Moreover, the increase in the state death rate from all causes between 1913 and 1916 was only 4.5 per cent, as compared with an increase of 10.5 per cent from organic heart disease. This disease is known to have a high rate among lead, iron and steel, tobacco and leather workers, of whom Pennsylvania has a very large number.

Both because of their own injurious effects and because of the encouragement which they afford to the growth of definite occupational diseases, a few of the more common health hazards in industry are being made the subject of investigation and attack by health departments and sanitarians. One of these is the problem of eye-strain, due to inadequate illumination, overwork or faulty posture.

(2) The underlying Factors in the Spread of Tuberculosis—Dr. Albert P. Francine, 9th Annual Report of Commissioner of Health—Penna., 1914, page 147.

"I know of no one factor that affects the earning capacity of the laboring classes to such an extent as eyestrain." (1)

"The importance of adequate lighting in industrial establishments in obvious, as a matter of fact, especially where dangerous processes are carried on, as bearing on health in many ways, directly or indirectly; and as a condition of efficient work. On the health side, it is hardly necessary to point out that inefficient illumination entails risk, strain and ultimate danger to the sight, even apart from interference with work, that it tends to the neglect of cleanliness, and adds to the risk of working in poisonous materials.

"From the standpoint of health, faulty illumination soon exerts damaging effects upon vision, by reason of varying intensities of light which produce sharp contrasts, glares and shadows."

"Sewing, engraving and printing, textile work, and watch-making frequently induce excessive strain to eyes. Objects close by are seen only by muscular effort. The constant effort to maintain distinct vision causes fatigue of the muscles, spasm of the ciliary muscle and deficient convergence, from which result headache, defective vision, nervous exhaustion, and various neuroses. Eventually, under these deleterious influences, the eye passes into a condition of myopia or chronic nearsightedness, which is a distinct occupational disease due to eyestrain. This disease runs a progressive course, the vision gradually fails, the eye is exceedingly prone to acquire all kinds of inflammations, and total blindness often results." (2)

Industrial fatigue is another danger which has been especially noticeable in the war industries of Pennsylvania. After two years' experience with "speeding-up" devices and over-time work, the British Home Office issued in August 1916, a report on an investigation of industrial fatigue by physiological methods. The investigation covered two factories, one making surgical dressings and the other an engineering works, and concludes:

"Overtime invariably produces the lowest output, and this may be traced to fatigue. When once an individual has through labor during ordinary hours, reached a certain degree of fatigue, and proceeds to further labor (overtime) without taking the repose necessary to dissipate the fatigue already produced, this further labor has a greater physiological effect and exhausts the organism more than would a similar amount of labor performed when fatigue was absent. This is a well-known fact in physiology; it is also a matter of ordinary experience. It is of importance in the present connection because it indicates that overtime labor is more harmful to the worker than labor performed during ordinary hours. It is therefore physiologically extravagant."

"Overtime," however, is not the only cause of industrial fatigue which is so commonly observed, especially among boot and shoe, textile, cannery, iron and steel, tobacco and laundry workers, and which is the result of laborious work, long hours, piece-work, speeding up, monotony, constant standing, constant strain, chairs or stools without backs, faulty postures, jarring processes, pressing or holding objects against the body, eyestrain, loud noises, irregular hours for sleep, and the absence of work variation or periods of relaxation and recreation, which, in the case of women workers, means also rest rooms. Such fatigue not only reduces efficiency, but opens the way for the development of many chronic, degenerative diseases, especially among women, and increases the hazard of industrial accidents. "Fatigue delays work, diminishes output, spoils goods, causes accidents and sickness, keeps workers at home, and in all these ways is an obstacle to efficiency. How fatigue can be kept down to its lowest reasonable limit. How the working power of the individual can be maintained from day to day and from week to week and be made to yield a maximum output without detriment to itself and to others—constitutes one of the great industrial problems of the day." (3)

The smoke-laden atmosphere in which thousands of employees not only work but live is believed also to have a serious effect upon their health. The Mellon Institute of Industrial Research of the University of Pittsburgh, as the result of extensive research in the Pittsburgh district, states:

"It does not seem an exaggeration to say that more persons are devitalized, disabled and poisoned by the impurities contained in smoke-polluted air, then by the noxious ingredients in food and water. Not only do the solid and vaporous ingredients of smoke-begrimed air, the noxious compounds of carbon, sulphur, nitrogen, chlorine, and arsenic—irritate the sensitive membranes of the eyes, nose, throat and lungs, and thus aggravate or cause inflammatory diseases of these organs or produce collapse of their sensitive tissues, or increase their susceptibility to such specific diseases as bronchitis, pneumonia and subacute forms of phthisis; but the poisonous compounds also enter the gastro-intestinal tract and this causes nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and systemic poisoning."

"In Pittsburgh a recent investigation by Dr. W. C. White shows that pneumonia increases with the density of population or of poverty. In late years pneumonia has assumed a very acute and fatal form in Pittsburgh." (1)

Faulty posture and strain due to improperly arranged chairs, stools or machinery may be responsible for serious physical harm to the worker. The Journal of the American Medical Association contains an account of how Dr. Datta, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Relief Association found that a surprisingly large number of locomotive engineers were suffering from Sciatica of the right leg, due to sitting on their benches sidewise, with the weight of the body resting on the right hip, while subjected to constant jolting. When the ends of the benches were cut off to enable the men to sit squarely while facing forward, further cases ceased to develop. (2) A telephone company in Philadelphia had constant trouble with back-ache among its switchboard operators until it was discovered that by changing the form of the switchboards the injuriously long reaches could be eliminated. Sedentary workers and all those whose work involves repetition and close application are particularly exposed to this hazard.

Specific dangers to the health of a large group of women workers were brought out in an investigation made during the summer of 1918 by the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense, covering 100 factories and other establishments employing about 9,000 women in Pittsburgh. Five hotels and four cigar factories were included in the survey, which covered also a large number of plants engaged in the manufacture of war materials. Women were employed at a wide variety of operations, including office work, elevator operating, riveting, inspecting, assembling, operating power-machines, press feeding, wire stitching, etc. The wages paid for the different operations were recorded in 144 instances, and over 70 per cent of them were between $5.00 and $15.00 per week. While this cannot be taken as an exact indication of the proportion of employees to be found in this wage group, the number of women employed at the more skilled and more highly paid types of work did not exceed one-fourth the total number. In only two instances was a wage of $25.00 per week or more mentioned and to thirty-three different groups of women less than $10.00 per week was paid.

In addition to data on the general sanitation of the establishments visited, special facts were obtained for the Commission on the facilities for the protection of the health of the workers, the equipment for the treatment of the sick, and the extent to which sick benefit or establishment funds were being maintained. More than one-third of the places of employment were found to be deficient in ventilation, light or general cleanliness, more than half of them had inadequate toilet facilities, and over two-thirds had no rest rooms. Only twelve establishments had hospitals or infirmaries. 35 had first-aid equipment only, and thirty-seven had made no provision for medical care whatever.

Conditions in hotels, printing establishments and cigar factories were particularly bad, and in twenty-three cases the investigator advised against placing women with the concerns visited. In one large machine shop, women were required to repeatedly lift weights of forty or fifty pounds. Twenty-five pounds is set as the maximum weight which women should be required to repeatedly lift, by the Women in Industry Section of the United States Department of Labor. In another plant, a foreman testified that "the labor turnover was 100 per cent. Men and women were sick all the time, due to overwork and strain. Much of the work that was not heavy was continuous, affording no chance to rest fatigued or untrained muscles." In one hotel, the chamber maids were constantly ill with strained and aching backs because too few girls were employed to care for the rooms. The housekeeper in this place had been dismissed just prior to the investigator's visit, because she complained of immoral conditions. Dangers to morals were mentioned in every hotel and restaurant visited. In a number of establishments the work was described as sufficiently noisy to have an effect on hearing. In one factory it was the practice of the women to lick the labels placed on large numbers of products every day. In an egg-candling plant, the work was done entirely in a damp, dark cellar, and the manager stated that men employed at this kind of work almost invariably drink heavily.

Few of the dangers to health mentioned in this study were inherent in the nature of the work to be performed. Most of them could be attributed to a lack of knowledge of health principles on the part of the employer, or of realization that the health of his employes bore a significant relation to his own success.

Several investigations made by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry reveal health hazards due to conditions of work which do not seem necessary to the carrying on of the particular process involved.

During the summer of 1918 the Division of Industrial Hygiene and Engineering made a study of the seven factories in the State engaged in making felt hats. (1) The chief health dangers found were the presence of nitrate of mercury particles and fumes in the air of the varnishing rooms; particles of fur and dust constantly flying about where fur was being sorted and cleaned; and steam and vapor in the sizing and dyeing rooms. All of these factors are dangerous in varying degrees to the health of the exposed workers, and could be corrected, in the opinion of the inspectors, by installing proper methods of ventilation, sweeping and cleaning. In several cases the floors were described as "filthy," and in some instances lack of drainage was responsible for several inches of water in which the men were obliged to stand while at work. "These health hazards are not myths * * * several of our largest insurance companies refuse to insure fur cutters, makers, starters and sizers at any premium, and workers in other departments are charged an extra heavy premium on ordinary policies." (2)

The principal investigation of health in relation to employment made by the Department in recent years deals with two groups of tobacco workers. Those employed in this industry in the State in 1914 numbered 37,000, and included a large proportion of women. In both groups studied certain physical defects due to occupation were found. The first investigation made in 1914 covered 111 factories and over 23,000 employes in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and elsewhere.

In most of the factories dirt, tobacco dust and poor ventilation were noticed. Many employes were undernourished, pale and stoop-shouldered. Dirty and decayed teeth were frequent. At least a part of the "tendency to ill health" was ascribed to the custom of "biting out" the ends of the cigars and licking the wrappers. But the most serious menace to health appeared to be the dust and waste which covered the floors and was stirred by "every movement of the workers." This was believed to be the source of the excessive death rate from tuberculosis found in the trade. Comparatively few children under sixteen were found, but these were in bad condition, pale, stooped and overtired. The investigators felt that these younger employes were most susceptible to the adverse conditions noted, and that the employment of all persons under sixteen should be forbidden.

The second investigation, made in 1917 in co-operation with the University of Pennsylvania Clinic, covered a smaller number of workers, ninety-eight males and 302 females in seven factories, but gave somewhat more exact information on the relation between the occupation and the diseased conditions found. Congestion of the pharynx and of the lining of the eyelid were abnormally frequent, and were held to be "at least in some measure due to the dust and fumes of the tobacco." The wearing away of the teeth noticed was caused by "biting out" the ends of the cigars, the gritty material acting like emery dust on the teeth. Other disabilities resulting from the occupation were a large amount of constipation, caused by lack of exercise and faulty posture while at work, and many headaches which were accounted for by eye-strain among the packers and by poor ventilation in other departments.

The most complete evidence as to health conditions among iron and steel workers is contained in a study made in 1908 by Mr. John A. Fitch, who after ten months' of intensive investigation in the Pittsburgh district, felt that the industry contained hazards to health. These included dust, great noise, nervous strain, extreme heat, and the twelve-hour day. A fine dust is always present in the air of a steel-mill, which steel workers declare gives rise to throat troubles. Due to the noise of the mills, a slight deafness is common among the employes. The noise, the vibration of the machinery, tremendous physical strain in some cases, and in others great responsibility for dangerous machinery combined to make excessive demands on nervous energy. The extreme heat in which many men were obliged to work was also considered a special health hazard, while the twelve-hour day, Mr. Fitch believed, intensified all the other hazards and made the men "chronically tired."

It is worthy of note that the standard American text on industrial hygiene (1) devotes a chapter to the iron and steel industry among the "occupations involving exposure to conditions injurious to health." Sir Thomas Oliver, the English authority on industrial hygiene, reports that English iron and steel workers, though the eight-hour day is much more common there than in the United States, have a death-rate 37 per cent. above the standard for occupied males.

COAL MINING IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Pennsylvania produces practically all the anthracite and by far the largest portion of the bituminous coal mined in the United States and employs one-third the coal miners of the country. The number of employes in and about the mines in 1916 was 333,473 and the total coal produced amounted to 256,804,012 tons. Because of the tremendous part which coal mining plays in the industrial life of the state, it was decided to devote special attention to its effect on health.

Health hazards involved in coal mining are briefly discussed in Dr. Hamilton's study, special emphasis being laid on the high-death rate among miners from non-tuberculous diseases of the lungs. This fact is confirmed by the results of the Western Pennsylvania Survey, which, besides finding that the total sickness rate among miners was eight per cent higher than the general rate for white adult males, states that "It is probable that the true rate for miners' asthma involving disability for work is not less than 400 per 100,000 exposed among anthracite and not less than 175 per 100,000 among bituminous miners. These figures for anthracite and for bituminous miners measure within certain limits of error, the incidence of anthracosis among the coal miners in the two groups, asthma being the most prominent symptom to the lay mind at least, of that condition." a study of health dangers among coal miners in Illinois which he made for the Illinois Health Insurance Commission during the summer of 1918. Extracts from this report follow, and show to a certain extent conditions in Pennsylvania coal mines:

THE CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH MINERS WORK.

"Coal Seams.—For convenience, coal seams, in mining parlance, are numbered upward from No. 1, or that at the lowest level (and therefore the earliest geologically) to that which constitutes the most recent deposit. Hence many seams are present in most districts, superimposed one above the other, often with hundreds of feet of rock strata separating them; but, because of upheavals, glacial action, erosions, etc., even the deepest seam, No. 1, may lie at the surface (or indeed be 'in the sky'—when there is, therefore, no coal to be found in that place). From a health point of view the particular seam has some significance as to whether (first) it is 'low coal,' thereby necessitating a great deal of kneeling at work; (second) whether it contains much sulphur and other impurities, especially tending to 'dust'; (third) whether the strata next above and below the coal are dust producing, and (fourth) whether mine gases are apt to be encountered. The same seam in different localities often varies, however, in these factors. In but a few instances in the state is more than one seam worked at a single mine. Working two seams means working at two or more levels unless seams are very close together.

"The work of the miner has gradually changed, through the introduction of machines and the use of powder, from that of pick work on the solid face of coal to that of breaking up large chunks of coal and loading them into the mine cars. Hence, workers 'at the face' have come to be called 'miners,' 'machine men,' 'loaders,' 'shot-firers,' etc., according to the nature of their duties. This is important to note since it means that many of the afflictions previously attributed to 'miners' have become relatively scarce or are no longer existent because of these changes in work methods.

"Blasting Substances.—Throughout the entire mining field, with the exception of long-wall mining, black powder is the explosive used.

"The time of use of blasting substances may constitute a serious menace to the health of coal miners. The principal point is whether 'shooting' is done during work hours so that the powder fumes and smoke are present during work hours.

"Mine Gases.—The gases encountered in coal mines are of three types—"natural" gas or methane, black damp or carbon dioxide, and white damp or carbon monoxide. Very exceptionally, hydrogen sulphide may be detected from old timbers, gob pile refuse and animal deposits.

"Of these three gases the one which the miner fears the most is methane (marsh gas, CH_4) because it is so easily exploded when lights come in contact with it. Methane gas is practically half the weight of air and hence tends to accumulate about the roof. It is especially to be feared in dry mines and in the vicinity of faults in the coal seam. Certain coal strata or seams are well known to be associated with it. For our purpose, however, it may be dismissed as it has a very limited, if any, influence upon health, at least in the amounts to which it accumulates in mines. It is the most common gas encountered in mines and is called 'natural gas' because it occurs naturally, i. e., comes out of the coal and rock strata. It is identified by the miner with his naked (carbide) lamp, which it causes to flame up brighter than usual and perhaps to pop in miniature explosions (the lighting of small pockets of gas). When seeking for minute traces of it the miner holds his lamp along the pockets in the roof. It has neither odor nor any sensible effect upon the human being.

"Black damp, or carbon dioxide, does not occur naturally in mines as a rule. There are some evidences that carbonaceous rock may disintegrate to an extent great enough to produce the gas, particularly if it is associated with sulphurous waters. In old mines, as in any deep pits, it accumulates because of the lack of ventilation and the tendency of this heavy gas to seek low levels. In poorly ventilated mines it accumulates to an extent to be noticeable upon the respiration, and more especially in the case of certain individuals suffering from acidosis from any cause (heart, kidney, or arterial diseases in particular). This gas is nearly half again the weight of air and accumulates, at first, along the floor of entryways and rooms. Its usual origin in mines is from old workings which have been shut off from the general ventilation scheme of the mine but in which the brattices or stoppings are leaky and the gas comes up through the nooks and crevices of its own pressure. It is also especially to be feared in the case of mine fires, because the regular ventilation does not remove the products of combustion fast enough. It is the typical asphyxiating gas and usually gives plenty of warning that it is accumulating, in the way of increased breathing, easy fatigue, headache and a heightened or dusky color of the face. It affects the miner's lamps, causing them to smoke and the flame to become rather bluish. It readily affects bird life, so that the canary is sometimes used in its detection. Should anything happen to the ventilating fan or other ventilation apparatus, it accumulates rapidly in the mine, and necessitates withdrawal of the miners at once. When necessary to enter strata of this gas, helmets with oxygen tanks are used.

"White damp, or carbon monoxide, is of very rare occurrence in mines and is always an accidental affair. It occurs principally from incomplete combustion of powder explosions, when it may pervade a considerable area of the mine before it is thinned out by the forced ventilation. It also occurs in the case of fires, through incomplete combustion, and may leak into workings from fires which are sealed off in sections of the mine. Carbon monoxide is a gas slightly lighter than the air and, therefore, tends to accumulate in the upper half of the stratum of air, although it is quite evenly distributed if there is much moving to and fro, or agitation of the air by mine car trains. It is called 'white damp' apparently for two reasons: One, because it causes the flame of the miner's lamp to burn up more brightly, and secondly, because it is usually associated with a fine vapor, the remnants perhaps of powder smoke. In mines where shooting is done in work hours it often produces its characteristic symptoms which the miners call the 'thumps,' due to the type of headache experienced. Cases of acute poisonings leading to death rarely occur among miners. It is probable that chronic or low grade poisonings are frequent where shooting is allowed during work hours.

"The hygienist has but to witness the operation of gasoline motors in a mine either at the bottom of the hoisting shaft or in the main entries, to become suspicious of their effects upon the mine air, particularly at the bottom where a certain small percentage of miners must work all day. Motors running overly rich and discharging smoke and very perceptible gasoline exhaust fumes, were witnessed. There was no reason to be surprised at complaints of miners in regard to these features. It is probably but a question of time before all gasoline motors will be done away with in the few mines in which they are now found. The question of investment seems to be the chief reason for their continuance at the present time. The likelihood of carbon monoxide and other exhaust fumes, which in degrees of poisoning may amount to anything from the sudden acute cases to the slow chronic effects, are the chief dangers. Furthermore, smoke from defective motors is often so pronounced as to obstruct vision and noise is so loud, in the absence of mufflers, as to interfere with signals and perhaps cause some permanent interference with hearing from the reverberations which take place in the entryways. In the mines where they are used, the hoisting shaft constitutes the 'upcast' for the air current. Hence these motor fumes do not affect the workers at the face but they travel with the air current from the face to the foot of the hoisting shaft, always increasing in concentration, also in velocity of movement. Hence the workers who run the cars on and off the cages are the ones chiefly affected by the fumes.

"Temperature.—The temperature of a coal mine is quite constant throughout all seasons of the year, usually varying not more than ten degrees after proceeding a few hundred feet from the foot of a shaft. Even at the foot of the downcast the air brought in on a hot day is generally reduced in temperature through its passage down the wet and dripping shaft. After the air has traveled a few hundred feet it has gained the 'temperature of the mine,' which it holds more or less constantly until it is returned to the upcast and out. Within the mine a number of factors tend to increase the temperature somewhat, such as the heat coming from the miner's bodies, from the animals, from the motor cars, from shooting, from the decomposition of timbers, etc.

"The temperature of mines vary, however, according to their depth. As a rule shallow mines are the coolest, due to the fact that they are usually wet mines, which, in turn, is due to their proximity to the ground waters which leak into them. In Illinois such mines run from fifty to sixty degrees in temperature. Mines which are from 300 to 600 feet deep have temperatures ranging from sixty to seventy degrees. Mines from 600 to 1,000 feet deep have temperatures which range from seventy to eighty degrees. Men working in the deeper mines often strip to the waist because of the effects of this higher temperature.

"Miners, therefore, as a group work under more admirable temperature conditions than practically any other class of workmen. In the hot seasons of the year they have a temperature which is cool, exhilarating and energizing and admirably adapted for the heavy work involved. In the frigid seasons their quarters are relatively nice and warm. When air-circulation is also satisfactory, ventilation conditions approach the ideal, except for one element, dust.

"Humidity.—The amount of water vapor in the air of coal mines varies directly according to the wet or dry condition of the mine. About the shafts it is probably near the point of saturation. Since evaporation is excessive at these points, however, the temperature is kept low and the total condition is therefore good for the type of active work performed. Within the interior of dry mines the dehydrating properties of the dry coal and coal dust are such as to render the air excessively dry. Dry air, itself, is irritating to the skin and mucous membranes and when combined with dust is apt to become much more so. This latter will depend upon whether activity is great enough to produce plenty of perspiration and secretion.

"Dust.—Because of the darkness and the lack of reflecting surfaces, one is easily misled as to the quantity of dust in the working atmosphere of a coal mine. In fact, one, at first, has the impression that there is very little. But, except where the coal dust is wet when mined, and this is very rarely the case, dust is present in large amounts, particularly in the work rooms, and about mining machines and also in the entries where rapidly moving mine trains keep it in the air. Naturally, in damp and dripping mines dust will be much reduced, but such conditions are usually limited to the passage ways rather than to the work rooms. Where mines are characterized by the dry type of work room, the chief defect in the working atmosphere is not a chemical one (of the amount of oxygen and carbon dioxide, or one of temperature extremes) but is this purely physical one of an excessive amount of dust particles.

"Where the rock, clay or earthy matter which occurs in connection with mining coal does not pulverize, it is of little health significance. Where, however, it tends to dust, its harmful characteristics are to be regarded as in proportion to its hardness or gritty character. For instance, sandstone and flint dusts are considered much more harmful than clay or soapstone dusts. Where irritating sulphur dusts occur with any frequency, this is to be considered, probably, the worst dust. Of the dangerous dusts in connection with coal mining, their harmful nature may be stated in descending order as follows; coal, clay, soapstone, shale, slate, sandstone, granite and sulphur.

"Absenteeism.—Absences from all causes were at ten per cent each day throughout the coal fields as a whole, with this percentage about doubled for a day or two following paydays, which occurred twice per month.

"An inquiry at the mines as to how much of the absenteeism was due to sickness failed to reveal any definite information. The usual replies were that 'there is no way of finding out,' 'they just want a day off,' 'most of the absences are due to drunkenness,' 'no records are kept nor has a practical way been devised for keeping such.' Certain large corporations were, however, beginning a study of this subject."

SUMMARY OF HEALTH HAZARDS IN MINES.

"For the principal operations in mines, the following may be given as a summary of the chief health hazards:

"Cagers.—These men push the cars on and off the hoisting shaft. They are doing active work. Those at the bottom are in a strong draft of moving air, since the hoisting shaft is usually the upcast for the air leaving the mine. Hence the entire mine air which is collected by the return entries constitutes their working and breathing atmosphere. It contains a certain amount of fine dust, practically imperceptible to the naked eye, which is the result of the activities within. Where the air contains smoke or gasoline motor fumes, these workers are especially concerned. Their work is laborious but, for selected men, not overly hazardous. They usually have little time for sitting around, so that the cool, damp, rapidly moving air should be no hazard.—Those men who work in the tipples at the top of the hoisting shaft are usually within buildings partially protected from the weather and high up in the air, where, however, the air within is loaded with coal dust of whatever dirt is brought out of the mine. A considerable number of laborers are employed about the foot of the hoisting shaft and the tippie, where they have the same hazards as just described.

"Drivers.—Using this term to include motormen, trip-riders and muledrivers, we find here processes concerned with more or less rapid transit through entryways, usually in strong drafts, and a considerable amount of dust produced from the coal carried and from the surroundings where these are not moist or wet. In addition, long rides seated on cars constitute a hazard for many. Consequently, the effects of cool, damp drafts have opportunity to be considerable. Boys or youths usually make up this class.

"Laborers.—Laborers are scattered about more or less all over the mine, depending upon the type of mine and the character of work. Their hazards are the same as those of the workers in whose vicinities they are, except that they are more apt to be changing from place to place; consequently, health hazards are less in duration, although more in number.

"Loaders.—Loaders work in the rooms, breaking up the coal and loading it into mine cars after machines and shootings have dislodged it from the face. They are subject to the total dust hazards of the mine, principally coal dust. Also, to the full extent of any bad ventilation or accumulation of black damp which may occur. Their work is laborious, all piece-work type and rather monotonous. They, however, have the advantage of considerable change in posture. When work is slack, or empty cars do not come frequently enough they are apt to sit around in cool damp places and thus expose themselves.

"Machine Men.—Probably the dustiest job in the mine is that carried on by the machine men. One of them is employed most of the time in shoveling back the fine dust (bug dust) created by the machine which is undercutting the coal seam and, many times, scouring the clay bottom or other substances beneath the seam. The shoveler works with his face about two feet from the dust heap and his exposure is inordinate. However, the other men in and about machines have but little less exposure, since the air of the work space is heavy with dust. Machine men are usually big, powerfully built individuals. About every ten to twenty minutes they are concerned in moving the machine along, which is very laborious and straining work. As with all men at the face, they have the same atmospheric hazards so far as ventilation is concerned.

"Miners.—In old days coal was mined directly off the face by pick, sledge, wedge and drill. With the introduction of powder, much of this slow, hand work disappeared. Miners are employed where machines are absent. After shooting down the coal more or less perfectly, they break it up with picks and sledges and load it into cars. The dust hazard for them is great and naturally is worse where other substances than pure coal are encountered in the course of their work. They have the same ventilation hazards as for all workers at the face. While their work is laborious, and all piece-work and rather monotonous, with considerable jar and vibrations from tools used, there is the advantage of a standard work day of eight hours which they very rarely ever exceed. Throughout the entire coal mining district the eight-hour day prevails and covers the vast majority of workers. Occasionally 'spurt' work prevails for both loaders and miners and others at the face. Here there is a shortage of mine cars and when a car is obtained, the man or men concerned work strenuously for twenty minutes or so in filling it, then wait for the next 'empty' to come along. In most mines there is enough 'dead work' to keep them occupied in the interval, which may last upwards of a half-hour or so. In many instances, however, they sit around in the cool atmosphere with sweat-soaked clothing and perhaps lunch a bit from their buckets. Undue exposures and liability to chilling naturally occur.

"Shot-Firers.—In bigger mines a few men are employed toward the quitting hour of the day to shoot down the coal for the next day's work. The powder or shot has usually been placed for them with fuse attached, so that their duty consists of shooting off the 'shoots.' They are employed for a couple of hours and their chief hazard is work in powder smoke and incompletely combusted powder gasses which fill the sections of the mine during this procedure. They usually go from place to place in a logical order calculated to keep them in the freshest air, but the force of the explosions disarrange the ventilation to some extent during this process. Breathing of white damp (CO) as well as black damp (CO₂) constitutes their chief health hazard. Dust is naturally a bad feature also.

"Timbermen.—These workers are employed mostly at the breast of the mine in and about the rooms and the terminal entries, and have dust and ventilation hazards as their chief concern. Wet roadways and other places involve them probably more than others in the mine.

"Trappers.—Trappers are usually boys or youths, sometimes old men, who stay at switch junctions or at doors and save the time of mine train drivers or motormen by operating switches or opening doors. They usually have a manhole or niche in the wall where they may sit between activities. A bench is almost always provided for them. They are naturally in good draft, breathe the entryway dusts and, because of long workless intervals, are subject to the hazard of chilling. There is often some strain in connection with their work as when assisting in the steering of cars across rough and uncertain switches.

"Tippie Men.—The chief hazards of the workmen in the coal tippie are the breathing of an excessive amount of dust, mostly coal dust, which arises in connection with the dumping and screening and, perhaps, crushing of coal in the vicinity. While more or less within doors, tippies are usually not protected much against the low temperatures of winter, and being high in the air, are cold places to work. The weighmen are usually located in a part of the tippie more or less partitioned off the nearly always provided with some form of heating appliance in the winter time. There are always two of them, except in the smallest mines, one of whom is the company weighman and the other the check weighman who represents the miners.

"Track Men.—Track men move, or assist in moving, the railroad cars slowly along as the coal chutes fill them. Their work is, very dusty and they have full weather exposure. They assist somewhat, also, in shoving the lumps of coal about when they tend to flow over the top of the cars. Some of them, also, keep the ground clean.

"Hoisting Engineers.—Where steam hoists are used, investigations of engine rooms showed that the hoisting engineer often worked under an unusual temperature exposure (110 to 140 F.) While buildings for hoisting-engines varied at different mines, the engineer was usually placed between two steam engines with steam pipes under foot and perhaps overhead. To a large extent, windows were depended upon for ventilation. Of all the men at the mine, he is the one required to be the most mentally alert, since he must be constantly watching the indicators on the dials to keep informed of the height and speed of the rapidly moving cages loaded with coal or men, which cages he controls with his hand-levers. He must also be mindful or whistle or bell signals by which he starts his levers.

"Coal Washers.—In the present great demand for coal, coal washers have largely been allowed to stand idle. However, at a considerable number of mines this process is still carried on and requires the presence of some ten to twenty men. As the term implies, the screened coal is washed with water, which frees it from much impurity, particularly of sulphur deposits and the finer dusts. The atmosphere about all coal washers is exceedingly dusty, due, principally, to the crashing process preceding the washing. While the process is within enclosures, there is no special protection from cold weather. The men have frequent periods of inactivity, and are, therefore, liable to chilling. Noise is also a marked feature.

"Housing Conditions.—The hygiene and sanitation of housing is important since it involves about one-third of the normal day for the worker and most of the time for his family. The typical mine town consists of rows of dingy houses, all built after one or two patterns, often located on hillsides, with rows of privies located often close to wells or draining toward the wells on the next street. Rarely any attempt at garbage collection exists. Often small ditches of water act as open sewers. Screens for the houses are usually provided by the occupant if present at all. Many mining towns are unincorporated. There is often no local health officer. The board of health consists of the mayor and two or more members of the council in the larger towns. In some places only the township supervisor arrangement prevails. Very often the health officer is not a physician and is entirely unskilled in matters of hygiene and sanitation. Very often he belongs to the old type of health officer, who lays great stress on garbage collection and ashes, and pays little attention to wells, outhouses, screening or milk supply."

According to the report of the Pennsylvania Department of Mines for 1916, "The mines of Illinois and Ohio cannot be compared with those of Pennsylvania for gas and dust." "During the past nineteen years the worst accidents have been due to gas and dust and could have been prevented by proper operation of the mines." In 1916, these two causes accounted for 8.74 per cent of the fatal accidents in bituminous mines and 8.65 per cent of those in anthracite mines. "Mining is now more difficult and hazardous than ever before. The miners are no longer the early type of trained British workers, but are largely agricultural laborers from Southern Europe, and recently negroes from the south are migrating to the Pittsburgh district in large numbers." "Moreover, housing conditions are generally poor. Little has been done to improve the houses built years ago, which in many cases are now most inconvenient and unsanitary."

"Greater attention is given to approved methods of mining, safety appliances, sanitary conditions and the general welfare of the miner while at work, but not so much to the home or social life of the community." (1)

Inquiries were made by the Commission of physicians practising in the anthracite and bituminous regions and of representative employers, to ascertain as far as possible general health conditions among miners and their families. The evidence gathered supports the finding of the Western Pennsylvania Survey. While the miners themselves do not seem to be a particularly unhealthy class of men, the high rate of non-tuberculous respiratory diseases among them probably raises their sickness rate slightly above that of the rest of the community. Among 1,208 families included in the report of the Mother's Assistance Fund for 1916, the death of the principal wage earner in 286 cases had been due to his occupation; although only 19 per cent of the total number of men had been miners, mining was responsible for 45 per cent of the deaths which were attributed to occupation. In a study of 110 families made for the Commission by the Mother's Assistance Fund in 1918, it was found that 91 per cent of the men were under forty years of age at the time of death, and that among seventy-three men who died in Lackawanna County, twenty-one had pneumonia, nine had tuberculosis, and ten were victims of industrial accidents.

Inquiry into conditions in the families of miners tells a far more striking story. Practically every physician consulted stated that the sickness rate, especially among children, was noticeably higher than among other families in the community. As it is necessary for the miners to live in the immediate vicinity of the mines, the occupation may be said to have as close a relation to the health of their families as to their own health. Insanitary, frequently filthy housing, the almost total absence of pre-natal or maternity care, the use of untrained midwives in confinement cases, the inaccessibility of many mining communities, the lack of facilities for public health education, have combined with the ignorance of the miners and their wives to produce a state of affairs that is often shocking. One physician practising in the bituminous district stated that the infant mortality among miners' children was fully 50 per cent higher than in the community as a whole. In fact, he considered it a question of the "survival of the fittest," and thought that the deaths of the weaker children might account for the comparative ruggedness of the adults!

Unfortunately the disregard for health which many mining companies showed when they built for their employees crowded rows of four-room houses, frequently full of the smoke and gas from the coke-ovens, and always without plumbing, is only too indicative of general housing conditions among wage-earners in many communities where industry is directly responsible for living conditions, and yet, "standards of health in industry cannot be effective unless decent living quarters are provided. Any benefit accruing from carefully equipped shops may be entirely dissipated by the workers' unwholesome environment in leisure hours—all investigation and experience tend to show a constant relationship between mortality, morbidity, and living conditions." (1) The extensive experiments made in industrial housing on a large scale by many employers during the war is a recognition of the importance of the problem and a step toward its solution.

Aside from the prevalence of health hazards in various occupations, another important feature in the relationship between work and disease is the problem of the worker himself. Some employees are very much more susceptible to certain hazards than others, so much so that hygiene as some industrial processes can possibly be made, still there are certain classes of persons who should not engage in them. While this is often settled by natural selection, such chance cannot always be relied upon, especially in the case of older workers who have been following hazardous occupations for years and who, although weakened, still endeavor to continue. An increasing number of employers are instituting physical examinations for applicants for employment as a means of meeting this difficulty. Among thirty-seven industrial plants in Pennsylvania studied by the United States Public Health Service in April and May, 1918, seventeen required applicants to submit to physical examination. In only four establishments, however, was the examination used as a basis for determining the exact nature of work to which the applicant should be assigned. In most cases, the examination was very superficial, communicable diseases and obvious defects being the only causes for rejection.

The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics has partially completed a study of forty years' experience of the "Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund of America." This study covers approximately 47,000 persons of all ages engaged in over 100 different occupations. As the fund has no waiting period, the benefit periods are an accurate measure of sickness among the members. The data for the five years period, 1912 to 1916, has been compiled and made available for the use of the Commission, by Dr. Royal Meeker, Chief of the Bureau. As shown in Table I, the occupations have been classified into forty-two groups, within which the proportion of members ill per year ranged from 12.2 per cent for professional workers, including musicians, draftsmen, chemists, opticians, physicians, dentists, artists, writers, reporters, teachers, lawyers and nurses, to 31.40 per cent for miners. Ten of the forty-two occupational groups, miners, drivers, liquor manufacturing employees, "laborers," freight handlers, molders, tobacco and cigar workers, railway employees, tanners, and blacksmiths, had over 25 per cent of their members ill annually, and in only nine groups was the percentage less than 20 per cent; in 54 per cent of the occupations the reports showed that on an average from 20 per cent to 25 per cent of the members were ill each year.

The foregoing facts indicate that, aside from specific occupational diseases, serious health hazards exist in industry today and make industry in large measure responsible for illness among employees and their families. Great improvement could be made by the universal institution of proper methods of work and the standardization of working conditions. The Industrial Board of Pennsylvania has taken a step in this direction of establishing the lighting code of 1916, to regulate factory illumination. Following a two-years' survey of the effect of industry on health, the Ohio State Board of Health declared that "until some direct incentive to improve factory sanitation is offered, little real progress can be hoped for." Any plan to raise health standards among wage earners must provide this much needed stimulus.

OCCUPATIONAL DISEASES IN PENNSYLVANIA.

By Alice Hamilton, M. D.

Bureau of Labor Statistics, Washington, D. C.

Pennsylvania is probably the most important industrial state in the Union. Certainly to the student of occupational diseases, it is much the most important. No state has so wide a variety of those industrial processes which carry with them danger to the workers either because of poison in the form of fumes, liquids, or dusts, or because of mechanically irritating dusts which injure the throat and lungs.

It would be impossible to describe in detail all the dangerous trades of Pennsylvania, impossible to more than mention those that are not classed as dangerous but that are known to have a sickness rate higher than the average for industry. Lead poisoning usually comes first in order, since it is considered by far the most important of the industrial poisons.

Lead Poisoning

A great deal of lead work is done in Pennsylvania. In the Pittsburgh region much molten lead is used in making machine parts and castings, plumbers' goods, in tempering steel, in manufacturing lead pipe, sheet lead and wire; lead compounds are used in enameling sanitary ware, and in grinding paint; white lead is corroded and oxides are roasted. The Philadelphia region has even larger white lead works and oxide roasters, and paint factories. Lead oxides are used in large quantities in the manufacture of storage batteries in Philadelphia, and the shipyards use great quantities of white lead and red lead paint. In several parts of the state, tile works use a lead glaze, and there are many brass foundries and factories in which lead poisoning occurs because of the presence of lead as an impurity in the brass. There are also factories in which molten lead is used, type metal, solder, babbitt. Rubber works use lead salts in compounding, small refineries work up lead scrap, dross, and lead refuse of all kinds.

No figures are available in Pennsylvania, or for that matter in any state, to show how much lead poisoning occurs in any of these industries. Studies made for the Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics have provided us with information concerning the chief lead industries throughout the country and at the time they were made the Pennsylvania plants did not differ in any important respect from those in the other states included in the investigations, nor was there any reason to suppose that there was less lead poisoning in them than in those of other states. The publications of the Bureau show that in 1910-11 the white lead industry had a rate of about 18 per cent yearly of lead poisoning. In enamelling sanitary ware, the yearly rate in 1911 was 21.4 per cent and in glazing tiles the rate during the same year was 13.9 per cent. In the smelting and refining of lead there was a little over 22 per cent of lead poisoning in 1912. Making storage batteries caused lead poisoning in almost 18 per cent of all those employed in 1913.

Since these figures were compiled, certain of the lead industries in Pennsylvania, notably the making of white lead and of lead oxides and the making of storage batteries, have improved very greatly and undoubtedly have a much lower rate of poisoning now. Not so much improvement has taken place in other lead trades, indeed it is doubtful whether there is much less plumbism in the smaller refineries and in the establishments using solder and casting lead than there was before general attention was called to this kind of danger to workmen. The notoriously dangerous lead trades have been made much safer, the less dangerous ones have hardly changed at all, and hospital records that used to carry many cases from white lead works and storage battery works, get the greater number of their cases from among solderers, lead burners, type-founders and makers of tin cans.

Printers and painters are too numerous for any complete investigation concerning their rate of lead poisoning. Both are notoriously unhealthy lead trades, the latter much more so than the former. The printing trade has always had more than its share of ill health, but it is impossible to be sure just how much is due to the presence of lead and how much to the fact that it is an indoor trade involving little muscular effort and much nervous strain. In the course of an investigation made for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, it was found that out of 200 working printers, 100 in Chicago and 100 in Boston, had 18 or 19 per cent lead poisoning. It is not clearly defined lead poisoning, however, that causes most of the ill health among printers, rather the lead acts in lowering the resistance to tuberculosis and in encouraging the progress of the so-called "old age" or degenerative diseases, Bright's, heart disease, general arteriosclerosis. Of late years the printers have succeeded in lowering their tuberculosis rate and in adding to the average duration of life, but an increasingly large number are now suffering from old age diseases during the middle years of life.

The most severe and crippling forms of lead poisoning are found among painters, for this is a skilled industry and men do not drop it easily even if they know it is ruining their health. The examination of a hundred painters in Chicago in 1913 showed that no less than 59 of them were suffering from some form of plumbism. If the same proportion holds good among the 1,400 journeymen painters in the state of Pennsylvania, there must be some 8,000 whose health is somewhat impaired as a result of their work. Lead poisoned painters often have very serious forms of plumbism. Among 100 lead poisoned painters in Chicago, there were 42 cases of palsy, 9 cases of brain disease, 11 cases of impaired sight and 11 of general hardening of the arteries. Painters are exposed to other injurious substances besides lead, to the benzene or naphtha in quick-drying paints, to benzol in coal tar paints, to turpentine, wood alcohol, carbon tetrachloride and to carbon monoxide gas which rises from the charcoal stoves placed in new buildings to dry out the walls.

Painting in factories is either much less dangerous than house and ship painting or rather more so. Instances of the safe branches are the painting of machinery and vehicles with leadless paints by dipping them in vats of paint. Instances of the dangerous forms are the painting and sandpapering of wheels and bodies of automobiles and carriages where a paint rich in lead is used. The most dangerous work for the journeyman painters' is interior decorating of houses, requiring many coats of white lead paint which must be sanded down, and ship painting where great quantities of white and red lead paints are used. Ship painting employs a large number of painters in Pennsylvania.

From records of hospitals in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh the following industries were shown to have caused lead poisoning severe enough to require hospital treatment. The well-known lead industries are not included here:

Grinding lead enamel for sanitary ware.
Sanitary ware enamelling.
Lead tempering.
Lead casting.
Sweeping up scrap and dross from lead casting.
Unloading lead bullion from cars.
Plumbing trade.
Making lead stoppers and perforated filters for washstands.
Pouring brass.
Polishing brass.
Making tin ware.
Soldering tin cans.
Chipping off old red lead paint.

Carbon Monoxide

This is probably the closest rival of lead as an occupational poison. Carbon monoxide poisoning is yearly on the increase as the use of producer gas for heat and power increases and as the automobile industry increases. All incomplete combustion of gas is accompanied by the production of carbon monoxide, but the gas is found more especially in the steel foundries, in smelters, brick kilns, enamelling furnaces, bakeries, laundries, and in coke by-products works. In testing automobiles many cases of carbon monoxide poisoning have occurred through the escape of exhaust gases which are composed largely of this compound. Acute carbon monoxide poisoning is far from rare in the great steel mills of the Pittsburgh region. It causes symptoms of dizziness, weakness, confusion or rapid loss of consciousness which may end in death in a very short time. If the man recovers from this attack there may be a more or less permanent loss of memory and mental powers, or pneumonia may develop, very likely to be fatal. Chronic carbon monoxide poisoning is found in steel workers and also in pressers in tailor shops and tailors who work in the same room with them, in printers working in shops where gas is used to keep lead melted and there are no pipes to carry off the fumes, in bakers who are exposed to gas fumes and in solderers of cans who use the heat of naked gas jets. This chronic poisoning causes an increasing anaemia with all its consequences, loss of nutrition, loss of strength, nervousness, indigestion, and a tendency to infectious diseases, especially tuberculosis.

Brass

The metallic poisons which are used in Pennsylvania industries are brass—an alloy of copper and zinc—mercury, arsenic and antimony. Brass poisoning as often described is really lead poisoning, for brass polishers and buffers do not become poisoned by the solid brass, if they are poisoned it is from the lead so often present in the alloy. Real brass poisoning is met with in brass founding or pouring, when the thick white fumes given off are allowed to escape and contaminate the air of the room. The sublimed zinc oxide is the element in these fumes that gives trouble, not any form of copper, and zinc smelters suffer from the same kind of symptoms, as do zinc welders. Brass founders' ague, as it is called is not considered a serious affection by either physicians or the workmen themselves. It resembles a short attack of chills and fever, but clears up rapidly. Nevertheless, brass workers do not have as good health as the average of men employed in manual work. Probably this is the result of exposure not only to brass, but to lead and sometimes arsenic, to heat and abrupt changes of temperature and heavy work, and to carbon monoxide from the furnaces.

Mercury

Mercury is used chiefly in the making of felt hats, a fairly large industry in this state. The rabbit fur used for felting is treated with nitrate of mercury and all who handle it after this preliminary "carrotting" are liable to mercurial poisoning. This is a notoriously unhealthful industry all over the civilized world. In addition to the presence of so powerful a poison as mercury there is the irritating effect on the lungs of the particles of fur in the air, the atmosphere of steam in certain departments, and the wood alcohol used in shellacking the felt. The felt hat industry has had more cases of industrial wood alcohol poisoning than has any other trade.

Arsenic

Arsenic is present as an impurity in much iron zinc and lead ore and also in much of the muriatic acid and sulphuric acid used in industry. When such an acid is brought in contact with such a metal, arsenic in the form of arseniuretted hydrogen is given off and poisons the workman. Lead burners get it from the hydrogen which they use for their oxy-hydrogen flame and which they make from muriatic acid and zinc. Makers of toy balloons get it from the hydrogen used to fill the balloons. Such cases are seldom rightly diagnosed, for there is nothing in the industry to suggest arsenic to the physician. The making of arsenical insecticides is not carried on in Pennsylvania.

Various Industrial Gases

Gaseous poisons less important than carbon monoxide are sulphur dioxide, nitrogen oxides, chlorine, ammonia, ether. Sulphur dioxide is believed by many practical men to be devoid of real danger, yet it was one of the poisons that Germans selected for experiment when they inaugurated gas warfare. It is given off chiefly in the making of sulphuric acid and in the making of carbolic acid, both of them carried on in this state. Chlorine is given off during the early stages of nitric acid manufacture. It is the gas that was used almost exclusively during the first year of gas warfare. Ammonia gas may cause so much irritation of the respiratory tract as to set up a fatal pneumonia. It is used in refrigerating plants and in the making of artificial ice, and to a less extent in making ammonium nitrate for the explosive industry.

Nitrogen oxides, are a danger wherever nitric acid is made or used. The manufacture of nitric acid has increased enormously since the war and so has its use in the making of explosives, all of which are nitrated products. There is nothing in the making or use of nitric acid that requires the escape of nitrous fumes, on the contrary, every effort should be made to prevent their escape in the interests of economy as well as to protect the workmen. Of recent years the handling of this dangerous acid has greatly improved and there is much less "fume poisoning" in nitric acid works and in the making of picric acid, nitro-cotton, trinitrotoluol, and celluloid than there was three years ago. Nevertheless it is impossible to altogether prevent the leaking of pipes or vats, for strong nitric acid is very corrosive, and there is still some poisoning from this gas among workers in Pennsylvania acid plants and in explosive manufacture.

Coal Tar Products

Since the beginning of the war, when supplies from Germany were shut off, there has been a great increase in Pennsylvania of industries involving exposure to coal tar products. Formerly a certain amount of benzol was imported from Germany but it was costly and did not find extensive use. The petroleum derivatives, naphtha and benzine, were cheaper and more abundant and they were used largely in rubber manufacture, making quick-drying paints, paint removers, varnishes, shellacs and so on, to be a better solvent than naphtha, but it was too expensive. Since the war benzol has been manufactured on a large scale in this country and some of the largest plants are in Pennsylvania. This benzol is used not only for its solvent properties but as a starting point for the manufacture of anilin. The latter is then used to make anilin dyes and also in compounding rubber, making type roller cleaners, shoe polishes, and one of the high explosives tetryl.

Closely related to benzol is toluol, extracted from illuminating gas and latterly used in large quantities to make the charge for high explosive shell, trinitro-toluol, commonly called T. N. T. Pennsylvania has not only important plants for the nitration of toluol and the purification of crude T. N. T., but also at least one large shell loading plant, where the T. N. T. is made into charges and loaded into shell, and also one in which detonators are made from T. N. T. and tetryl. Benzol and toluol and their derivatives are all poisons to the blood and to the nervous system, being absorbed largely through the skin. Benzol is the one most rapidly poisonous, a short exposure to heavy fumes being frequently fatal. Anilin is volatile and has a rapid effect but is not so serious a poison as T. N. T. which is more slowly absorbed but for that very reason has a more profound effect because it does not give prompt warning of danger as does anilin. Tetryl is, so far as is known, only slightly poisonous, producing an eruption on the skin which is distressing but not dangerous. Toluol is like benzol in its effects. The extraction of benzol from coal tar in Pennsylvania has been followed by several fatal cases of benzol poisoning.

The substitution of benzol for naphtha means that work in rubber manufacture, in making and using shellac and varnishes, using varnish removers and paint removers, using rubber cement for sealing cans and dry cleaning and dyeing, are probably more dangerous occupations now than they used to be. Benzol is also used in another new industry, the manufacture of carboic acid. Chronic benzol poisoning is not as yet very easy to recognize, but investigations now being made on the blood of benzol workers will probably make it easier to discover whether the ill health, the anaemia, loss of strength, nervous symptoms, and sometimes gastric symptoms, found among those who work with benzol are caused by the benzol or by other factors.

DISEASE CAUSED BY PHYSICAL AGENTS

This is fairly full list of occupational poisons used in Pennsylvania, but though they cause a good deal of industrial sickness, they are not by any means as important as are certain other disease producing factors in the industry in this state. One of the most important, if not the most important industry in Pennsylvania, is the manufacture of steel. No thorough study has been made of the occupational diseases of Pennsylvania steel workers, but we know that there are many things about the making of steel which are harmful to health. Steel workers are exposed to poisoning not only by carbon monoxide but sometimes also by lead, arsenic, sulphuretted hydrogen and the cyanides. They must use great physical strength, and if the strain is too great for the heart, there may be an acute dilatation which may be slow in recovery or may be permanent. Steel workers are also exposed to metallic dust and to sand, to great heat, to sudden changes of temperature, resulting in rheumatism, lumbago, bronchitis, and to light of such character and intensity as to injure the eyes if they are not protected. To all these injurious features must be added the fatigue of the long work-day and the seven day week.

TEXTILE INDUSTRY

Another very important industry in Pennsylvania is the textile, which is regarded as unhealthful in all civilized countries. The bad features in the textile trades are first the fluffy dust of cotton or wool, more rarely flax; the fatigue caused by the noise, jarring, and monotonous work which yet demands constant attention: the heat and humidity. These, together with a rather low wage scale, are all factors that go to bring about an abnormally high rate of tuberculosis, in the textile trades. The more immature the workers, the more tuberculosis, and the more fatiguing the work, the more tuberculosis. Many girls between the ages of sixteen and twenty-four are employed in the mills in and around Philadelphia and it is just in this age group that the incidence of industrial tuberculosis is heaviest.

COAL MINING

Another important industry in Pennsylvania is coal mining. Coal miners have a high accident rate and that fact affects their sickness rate. Accidents usually kill off or incapacitate men in the earlier age groups, the very groups in which tuberculosis is usually most prevalent. It is well known that coal miners do not have as much pulmonary tuberculosis as does the population at large and because of this fact there is a general impression that the coal mining industry is usually healthful. Coal miners more than make up for their low tuberculosis rate by their high rate of deaths from other respiratory diseases. This is shown by a recent analysis made of the mortality of the two coal mining cities of Scranton and Wilkes-Barre compared with the mortality for the whole State of Pennsylvania. The reason for the excessively high death rate from non-tuberculous diseases of the lungs is usually given as follows. Coal dust is not very irritating and does not cause the sort of injury to the lung tissue which is caused by steel or stone dust and which prepares the way for a tuberculous inflammation. The effect of coal dust is to cause a very slow hardening of the lung which may produce no symptoms or may cause asthma. If, however, the miner contracts pneumonia, the hardened state of his lungs diminishes his chance very much of recovery.

ANTHRAX.

Pennsylvania being a seaboard state with an important port at Philadelphia has had a comparatively large number of cases of that rather unusual industrial disease, anthrax or malignant pustule. Anthrax is caused by a very resistant bacillus which sets up a fatal disease in cattle. It is especially in hides that are shipped to this country from abroad that this infection is found. Even careful disinfection before shipping is not always enough to kill the germ of anthrax which may retain its vitality and weeks later infect the men who unload the hides or sorts them or carries them through the processes of washing and tanning.

Between January 1, 1913, and January 1, 1916, there were 49 cases of anthrax in Pennsylvania, eight of them women. Seven of the 27 cases reported during the first half of this period are known to have been out of 132 deaths from anthrax reported throughout the registration area of the United States in a period of five years, 1910-1915, 13 occurred in Pennsylvania.

The women who contracted anthrax were sorting hair and twisting hair or were working in tanneries; the men had occupations of great variety. They were hide and skin workers, wool and hair workers, longshoremen unloading hides, laborers in tanneries, and there was one representative of each of the following occupations, inspecting raw stock, sorting raw hides, fixing a haircloth loom, handling dirty rags for shoddy, handling hoofs in a glue factory, examining haircloth, making brushes, working in a livery stable. In addition there were two babies, one of the child of a tanner, the other the child of a coal miner, apparently infected from some unknown source.

There is no compensation for occupational disease in Pennsylvania. In this respect some states are more fortunate but it would be a great mistake to think that the passage of the law providing compensation for occupational diseases would do away with the poverty that is really attributable to sickness set up by or increased by the workers' occupation. It is true that we are learning each year more about the action of various poisons on the human body and also about such indirect factors in the production of disease as fatigue, heat and humidity. Nevertheless we connect occupational disease only in a small number of cases with that degree of positiveness that would be required under the law. It is only when the disease is caused by a poison whose symptoms are unmistakable or by acute infection with a germ that can be identified, or when it is caused by some physical agent such as excessive heat or the pressure of air in a caisson that we can actually prove the occupation to be responsible.

Nobody has any difficulty in deciding that lead colic or lead convulsion in a white lead worker should be charged up to his occupation, but it is a very different thing to prove that a general hardening of the arteries, with Bright's disease and perhaps softening of the brain in a lead caster who has never had lead colic, is caused by his occupation. Always there is far more doubt about the occupational factor when the poisoning is chronic than when it is acute, and yet industrial poisoning is typically chronic, exceptionally acute. There have been some very startling cases of acute benzol poisoning in Pennsylvania that attracted attention, were investigated by the State authorities, and were made the ground for orders ending to prevent such accidents in the future. But for every case of that kind there are probably twenty or more of slow, chronic poisoning with benzol in rubber works, in canneries, in straw hat manufacture, when rosin in benzol is used for sealing cans and in cleaning and drying. In the great rolling mills around Pittsburgh, every now and then a foundryman is overcome with the fumes of carbon monoxide, rendered unconscious perhaps, and when he recovers his senses, he is confused and mentally unsound for some time, or contracts pneumonia within a short time. Such a case is undoubtedly occupational, and nobody thinks of questioning it. But for every case of so-called "gassing" in the mills, there are probably a hundred cases of anaemia and malnutrition and neurasthenic troubles among pressers in tailor shops, bakers, metal casters, linotypists and electrotypers, all of whom work day after day in air slightly contaminated by the fumes of carbon monoxide from naked gas burners. So also a case of anthrax in a tannery worker, which develops into fatal blood poisoning is recognized as occupational, but tuberculosis developing slowly in a sandblaster of sanitary ware is not so recognized.

Many other instances could be cited to show that while acute industrial poisoning can be readily recognized, chronic poisoning constitutes a much harder problem, but even more difficult is the problem when we try to trace the connection between occupational and disease in those trades where dust is the danger, dust that is not poisonous or perhaps only slightly so. Felt hat makers have a high tuberculosis rate and the injurious effect of the fine particles of fur in the air they breathe is doubtless increased by the presence of the mercurial salt with which the fur has been treated, but if a hat maker shows no symptom of mercurial poisoning, only of consumption, it is not easy to prove that he contracted the disease in the course of his work. The same difficulty is seen in occupations where metallic lead dust is present. We know that lead poisoning and tuberculosis go hand in hand and that a lead trade in which men remain for many years always has a high tuberculosis rate, but if a consumptive printer does not give a history of lead colic, how are we to prove that his occupation has brought on his disease.

The dusty trades, undoubtedly responsible for more disease than any other class of occupations, because they employ so many more people than do the notoriously dangerous trades, are not adequately covered in any State by the laws designed to prevent disease or to compensate workmen suffering from such disease, for this very reason, the difficulty of providing the responsibility of the occupation. The dust that causes the harm is not the coarse, heavy dust that is easily seen and that the factory inspector can insist on having done away with. Such dust cannot reach the lungs and injure them. It is the fine almost invisible particles that do the real harm because they can pass in with the breath and be carried down to the lungs. The commonest form of injury caused by dust is a slowly developing fibrous change in the lungs which may become the seat of a tuberculosis if anything happens to lower the worker's vitality, or which may prevent his recovery if he contracts pneumonia. Obviously, no matter how positive we may feel that such results can follow long exposure to fine atmospheric dust, we shall always find it difficult to prove that any individual case of consumption or of death from pneumonia was caused by a dusty occupation. This means that no law, no matter how wide its application, will ever cover all cases of occupational disease.

PART II.

SECTION V.

SICKNESS PREVENTION.

It would be hard to over-estimate the importance of sickness prevention, the fifth subject assigned to the Commission for investigation. The Committee of One Hundred on National Health, in its "Report on National Vitality," stated that "at least fourteen years could be added to human life by the partial elimination of preventable diseases. * * * The actual economic saving annually possible in this country by preventing needless deaths, needless illness (serious and minor), and needless fatigue, is certainly far greater than one and a half billions and may be three or more times as great." (1)

"Prevention" has come to be the key note of health policies. It is being proved that science and care can produce a stronger race, and that a policy which not only cares for ills when they arrive, but uses every effort to prevent them, is a policy of real economy and efficiency.

Ideas of public health work have materially changed within the last few years. In its essence the change has been to place the emphasis on "people" as well as on "things." The old method of concentrating entirely on swamps, damp cellars, garbage collection and the disposal of sewage, was not effective in the largest sense, for disease continued to exist where things were all right, among the rich and the poor, in good houses and in bad.

In preventive work among people two methods have been used. Impersonal education, in the way of literature, meetings, exhibits, and the like; and personal education, carried to the individual largely through the public health nurse. "By public health nurse is meant not only a nurse employed by municipalities or public officials, such as schools, health departments, etc., but any graduate nurse who is doing some form of social work in which her training as a nurse comes into play and is recognized as a valuable part of her equipment. Her scope is not necessarily confined to districts, nor is her work limited to the early conception of the nurse's province—simply the bed-side care of the sick." This nurse attempts to teach the simple laws of health and hygiene in relation to the individual and the home; in other words, she tries to teach people how to get well, how to keep well, and how to keep sickness from others. Dr. C. A. E. Winslow, of Yale University, one of the leading sanitarians and public health authorities, says, "Among modern institutions for the protection of public health, the visiting nurse is the most important figure."

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has fully realized the value of the principle of prevention of the Visiting Nurse. In 1909 this company introduced Visiting Nurse Service for its industrial policy holders in New York City as an experimental means of diminishing claim-rates through reducing mortality among these policy-holders. The results were so satisfactory that the service was rapidly extended to other cities, and by 1916 was available to 90 per cent. of the holders of industrial policies in over 2,000 cities in the United States and Canada. In 1916, 221,566 patients received nursing care, at a cost to the company of over $600,000. However, the constant improvement in mortality experience of the company, during this period, has amply repaid them for such expenditures. From 1911-1915 the decline in the mortality rate among industrial policy holders was 9.7 per cent., while for the entire National Registration Area it was but 4.9 per cent. The following table shows this decline through 1916.

 Metropolitan exposure and deaths contain no persons under one year of age. Registration Area rates are on basis of estimated population and deaths at all ages.

* Per cent. increase in 5 years.

With the exception of "external causes," the rate among industrial policy-holders has decreased in every instance, in much greater proportion than the corresponding rate for the Registration Area. The greatest reductions in every instance appear in those diseases to which the company's nursing service is giving particular attention. The maternity service comprises one-fifth of the entire nursing service among industrial policy holders of the company; the decrease in the death rate from diseases relating to child birth has been over 12 per cent., while the population at large has suffered an increase of nearly two per cent. From 1911 to 1915, the death rate from diseases of the puerperal state fell from 72.9 per 100,000 to 65.3; a decline of 10.4 per cent. During this same time the decline in the Registration Area was but 4.5 per cent.

In explaining the remarkable improvement in the death rate of its policy holders, the company says, "It is impossible to dis-associate the effect of the nursing service from that of the other activities of the company and from the results of the public health work of the communities. The extensive distribution of the company's educational literature, the co-operation with health officers and the very excellent activities of so many of the local and state departments of health, have all played an important part in determining the favorable returns. But the country-wide extension of the nursing service to include over 200,000 patients annually, the intensive work done often in the nature of emergent relief, the education in personal hygiene which follows the more than a million visits made by the nurses to industrial homes, together must be credited with a large share in the mortality reduction. In no other way can we explain the more favorable condition which prevails among the insured than among the general population." (1)

Another evidence of what can be done by intensive preventive effort through personal education and early medical treatment in a restricted community is furnished by the attempts at group medicine now being made in the clinic systems of the University of Wisconsin and the University of California. In Wisconsin it is claimed that the work of the clinic has improved in a marked degree the health of the students by enabling them to have attention as soon as it is needed, and thus to escape long illnesses which they would have suffered had they not had early care. The percentage of students seeking medical advice has increased markedly each year owing to the fact that they have learned the value of this early treatment, which has, in turn, brought a decrease in the amount of serious illness. In 1910-1911 at no time more than 20 per cent. of the students sought medical advice, while in the three years following this proportion increased to 25, 29 and 37 per cent., respectively. In the last year, 1913-14, the increase was uniformly great throughout the months of the college year. The percentage of the student body seeking medical advice on February 1, 1914, was almost double the percentage at the corresponding time in 1911. The number reporting on October 1, 1913, was six times the corresponding number for 1910; the increase, in short, was felt throughout the entire college year, because of the educational effort to secure early reporting and prevent serious illnesses.

Owing to this early treatment the number of complications in cases of grip, for instance, has fallen steadily. In December, 1910, one-fifth of the student body reported grip, and 58 per cent. of the these "grip" cases developed complications such as inflammation of the ear, eye, etc. In December, 1913, when almost two-fifths of the student body reported the disease but four per cent. developed complications; the percentage of complications developing decreased as the percentage of students seeking medical advice increased.

The clinic claims that likewise the average time lost by students because of illness has been greatly reduced, from eight and one-half days in 1910-1911 to two and one-half days in 1913-14. Certainly nothing could speak more strongly for the results of preventive work and early treatment.

The statistics of the University of California compulsory clinic plan are even more striking. This clinic is financed by a compulsory fee of $3.00 a semester, which each student pays. As the student body increases, the medical staff increases. The primary purpose of the work is, according to Dr. Legge, to establish a place where "students can be scientifically treated before a serious condition develops, and through educational means taught how to live, thereby eliminating disease by every available measure." (1)

To accomplish this end every health measure deemed necessary is enforced among the students. Each student is given a medical examination on entrance, and in this way it is "possible to inform him correctly as to his abilities for physical exercises, class room work, college sports, etc. Numerous defects, local infections, and occasionally graver conditions which might also jeopardize the health of others, and be a menace to the community, are detected and treated. Often students are relieved of imaginary diseases. In 1915 we found that 64 per cent. of the freshmen had errors of sight refraction, and our oculist wrote 700 prescriptions for proper glasses. The dental examination revealed that only 82 men and 56 women out of 1,513 students had normal teeth. Numerous other illustrations could be cited, such as postural defects, diseased tonsils, chest diseases, etc." (2)

During the year 1915-16 the average number of daily dispensary cases was 126.3, with an average number of annual treatments per individual patient of 7.8. Throughout the college year, 4,516 students received medical treatment or advice. This was 71 per cent. of the total enrollment. "To the uninformed," says Dr. Legge, "it might appear that this large percentage of cases would indicate unusual morbidity, but as a matter of fact the purpose is to encourage early advice for incipient conditions, thereby avoiding graver complications and development,—the practical application of the 'stitch in time.'" (3)

It should not be necessary to emphasize the necessity of a further application of the "stitch in time" theory. In the tabulated causes of rejection in the report of the Provost Marshal General on the operation of the first selective draft, fully 50 per cent. of the rejections were shown to be due to causes which, if treated in time, would have been preventable or correctable. Twenty-two per cent. were attributed to eye conditions, six per cent. to ear, nine per cent. to teeth, and four per cent. to physical under-development.

When we turn to the actual work being done in Pennsylvania to reduce sickness and promote health, we find that it is carried on principally by State and local boards of health and by various private agencies.

Especially in the large cities, much of the work of sickness prevention is carried on by private agencies. In Philadelphia alone approximately $200,000 was spent in this way in 1917 by fifty or more organizations, including hospital social service departments, child-welfare, housing and visiting nurse societies. There are at work throughout the state some 630 public health nurses, only 274 of whom are paid from public funds. By spreading a knowledge of personal hygiene and child welfare, of community sanitation and of methods of disease prevention, those public health nurses are doing a work of inestimable value, and through their contact with the individuals they are able to interpret their health message in the language of that individual's needs. Approximately a third of all these nurses are in Philadelphia, and seventy-five more are centered in Pittsburgh; Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Erie, Harrisburg, York and Reading have from ten to fifteen nurses each, and the remainder are scattered through the state. Of the 630, approximately 260 are doing general visiting nursing; 130 are tuberculosis nurses, 100 are child welfare nurses, eighty are school nurses, and sixty are rendering nursing service in industrial plants. (4)

Much educational work is undertaken by the private organizations promoting health standards, as exemplified by such publicity work as that done by Housing Associations and by the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. Here educational health work has been carried into the schools, the moving pictures and the press, and bulletins are regularly issued in which health standards are set forth. Much preventive work is carried on indirectly by different types of social agencies emphasizing diet, cleanliness and carrying, as does the public health nurse, a message of hygiene to the individual family. The importance of work of this sort done by the hospital dispensaries and the hospital social service workers, as well as by private physicians, cannot be overestimated.

Certain progressive employers in all parts of the state have instituted measures for disease prevention, and many have employed factory doctors or industrial nurses, or both. Such work is of great value, but is, in the nature of things, confined to the larger, more progressive companies, where disease-producing conditions are likely to be reduced to the minimum. Like any voluntary health insurance, it covers least those who need it most. Far too often it is limited to industrial accidents, or to first aid measures and the treatment of obvious disabilities, in a dispensary. The work is therefore superficial and does not touch either the larger and more serious group of diseases of a non-accidental nature, or the more far-reaching field of prevention, which goes back to the causes of sickness within both the factory and the home.

Besides the multitude of private agencies, the state has recognized its responsibility for the preservation of health by the establishment of the State Department of Health, all the work of which is in reality largely preventive. In addition to its general work, the State Department of Health has direct control of all public health work in the 1,783 townships having a population of less than 250 to the square mile. Altogether these rural communities contain 2,225,000 persons, or about one quarter of the population of the state. Through educational publicity work of all sorts, the Department attempts to teach people how to keep from getting sick. The various divisions into which the department is organized indicate the range of its work.

The Bureau of Vital Statistics gives a knowledge of existing diseases which should and can be combated; it has a personnel of twenty-five to thirty, and a series of 1,070 local registrars, each with a deputy. The Division of Medical Inspection which carries on public health activities in the small towns has a personnel of approximately 800, in addition to 921 school medical inspectors, whose importance is later discussed. The Division of Sanitary Engineering advises on water and sewage systems and prevents pollution of water supplies, employing a staff of 106. The Division of Laboratories and the Distribution of Biological Products, makes analyses for physicians and supplies them with various serums. A recently created Bureau of Housing was inactive in 1913-1915 because no funds were appropriated for it, but since that time has been actively organized. The Divisions of Tuberculosis Sanatoria and Dispensaries do exceedingly important preventive work through the three State Tuberculosis Sanatoria at Cresson, Mont Alto and Hamburg, and through 119 tuberculosis dispensaries, employing 200 physicians and 119 nurses. The work of these nurses includes not only the prevention and care of tuberculosis, but also Child Welfare and Health Work in general in the homes of tuberculosis patients. Milk, eggs and other forms of charitable relief are furnished to needy patients, and follow-up systems are maintained. The tuberculosis work is perhaps the most important work of the State Department.

A similar chain of dispensaries for the treatment of venereal disease is now being established by the Division for the Treatment of Venereal Disease.

There is also a Division for the Control of the Sales of Narcotics, and a Division of Public Service, which attempts to maintain sanitary standards in hotels, restaurants, and other places where food is sold.

The Division of Child Hygiene is organized to work for the lowering of infant mortality in the state, and has a staff of five nurses for the state, exclusive of Philadelphia, to assist communities in establishing child welfare activities. The State Department of Health alone estimates that it saved 60,000 lives between 1906 and 1914.

Noteworthy as are these results, the Health Department itself would be the first to acknowledge that it does not touch the greater part of existing sickness or adequately meet the problem of its prevention. Dr. Wilmer R. Batt, chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, as has been previously stated, gives as "the adopted field of public health activities," "the acute communicable diseases of epidemic type" (including tuberculosis), and the diseases of infants. In 1915, these diseases accounted for somewhat less than a third of the deaths in Pennsylvania in that year. Even within the field of public health work, many local health departments are ineffective or fail to act, especially in the smaller towns. The State Health Department, in discussing the health work of the boroughs, in which live 2,225,000 of the population of the state, enumerated as handicaps the difficulty of getting competent citizens of good standing to serve, the jealousy of such other bodies as school boards and borough councils, failure to enforce quarantine according to the rules of the state, especially where there are only a few cases of disease, and laxity in attending to such nuisances as poor housing and the improper disposal of garbage and sewage. The difficulty of obtaining sufficient appropriations, also mentioned, is not confined to the boroughs.

All these limitations and many others were emphasized in recent surveys made under the supervision of the Division of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health. Of fourteen communities studied only three had active local boards of health or health officers. These communities ranged from 1,200 to 35,000 in population, and several of them were important industrial centers. The large percentage of foreigners in almost all of them made doubly necessary active health work and the enforcement of sanitary laws. Yet in only two of the communities were contagious diseases carefully reported. In eight of the fourteen, the housing and general sanitary conditions were reported as very serious. In one city of over 30,000 the garbage collection depended entirely upon volunteers, and children often gathered it in open express wagons. The housing conditions showed extreme over-crowding in the industrial centers, and in the rural communities many of the problems were even more serious—water standing in cellars, old houses in bad need of repair, and wholly improper facilities for the disposal of waste. In one mining community where more than two-thirds of the population of 16,000 were foreigners, the infant death rate in 1917 was 177 per 1,000. From one-third to one-half of the school children were undernourished, the number of premature and still births was above the average, yet there was no infant welfare or prenatal work, contagious diseases were not reported, garbage was deposited on a dump, sewage was carried off in an open sewer, and the Board of Health was purely a "nominal body."

In another instance where a still larger proportion of the community were foreigners, it was reported that from 1,100 to 1,300 children were born every year, and that three out of every five of these children died under five years of age. The housing conditions in this community were rated as the worst in Pennsylvania. No building, plumbing, or milk inspection was made. The appropriation for health work was $1,200, while the population was approximately 35,000. The percentage of illiteracy among the men of voting age in this community was 28.6, the highest vote for any city of similar size in the state.

In many instances what sanitary laws were found, were not enforced. A laxity in the enforcement of school attendance, bad sanitary and housing conditions, lack of nursing and hospital facilities, and high death rates, went hand in hand. Four communities had no appropriations whatsoever for health work. Several had health officers who were not in any way qualified. The salaries of these officers, sometimes as low as $500.00 a year, did not permit efficiency or enforcement. The State Department of Health attributes the high mortality rate in these communities to the (first) poor housing, (second) insanitary condition of streets and alleys, (third) failure to report contagious diseases, (fourth) lack of infant welfare and prenatal work, (fifth) improper feeding of infants, because of the poor milk supply and patent mixtures, (sixth) failure to call a physician, (especially among foreign families) except in extreme cases, and (seventh) very improper care at confinement because of unregistered midwives and inexperienced neighbors or friends.

For many of these conditions the community is directly responsible. Yet outside the largest cities it is the exceptional place which has even a full time health officer, much less an adequate health appropriation. The American Public Health Association claims that a dollar per person a year would be the desirable amount for public health work. The state's largest city, Philadelphia, had an appropriation in 1917 of $.46 per capita, and in 1918 of $.42. In attempting to save money lives are recklessly lost, for in the absence of adequate funds, public health work must fail to exercise its due preventive effect even within its adopted field.

Perhaps the most significant available material on sickness prevention in this state is the material on the medical inspection of school children. In considering prevention we instinctively turn to infant and child welfare work. The men rejected in the draft as physically unfit were the school children of yesterday, and if their defects had been treated earlier they might not have been disqualified. Dr. Frederick Peterson of the National Education Association said recently, "Authorities show us that there are physical defects in 75 per cent of the school children of to-day, most of them preventable and remediable, heart-and-lung-diseases, disorder of hearing and vision, malnutrition, diseased adenoids and tonsils, flatfoot, weak spines, imperfect teeth— * * * compulsory education we have—compulsory feeding and training of the mind. Compulsory health we must have—compulsory feeding and training of the body." (1)

In Pennsylvania medical inspection of school children is compulsory only for the first and second class districts. For the third and fourth class districts, that is for districts having a population of 5,000 to 30,000 and of 5,000 or less, inspection is optional, but a definite vote declining it is necessary, and few school boards take this action. The result is that in 1918 of 2,589 school districts in the state, there was medical inspection in 2,437 or almost 94 per cent. The districts were divided as follows:

4th class	2,382	Medical inspection in .	2,321
3rd class	191	Medical inspection in .	100
2nd class	14	Medical inspection in .	14
1st class	2	Medical inspection in .	2
Total	2,589	Medical inspection in .	2,437

When medical supervision in schools was first introduced into the United States some twenty years ago, the primary purpose was a desire to reduce the acute communicable diseases. Since then the conception of what preventive work may accomplish has greatly extended the field of this health activity. "Although lessening of communicable disease is necessary to be kept in mind while performing the work, by far the most important phases of medical supervision are those dealing with the broad problems of school hygiene by practical teaching and by medical inspection of the individual pupil and the giving of proper advice or treatment to those found defective; this may be carried even to the segregation of certain groups of diseased children while continuing their school work; to providing separate schools for the defective and incorrigible; to providing free medicine or dental care to the poor; to surrounding the child with proper sanitary precautions in buildings and grounds, with a safe water supply; and in some instances even to supply proper nourishment." (2)

From the time of the passage of the School Code in 1911, the growth of School Medical Inspection in the 4th class districts of the state is significant:

School Year.	Districts Inspected	School Buildings Inspected	Pupils Inspected.
1911-12	757	3,572	145,499
1912-13	1,469	7,375	305,372
1913-14	1,831	8,969	344,099
1914-15	2,159	11,036	469,199

During this four-year period in the 4th class districts about a million and a quarter children have been examined;

of the 469,199 examined in 1914-15, 335,427 or 71.5 per cent were found to be defective. Of these 44 per cent had multiple defects. In the third class districts where 48,787 pupils in 21 counties were inspected, 33,552, or 68.8 per cent were found to be defective. The National Education Association after a survey in 1914 of country school conditions, came to the conclusion that wherever urban and rural statistics were contrasted, the country child was found to be from five to 20 per cent more defective than the city child. In Pennsylvania they estimated that 75 per cent of the children were defective in the rural population of a given country. Among the school children in Altoona and Pittsburgh, the per cent of defectives for the same year was 69 and 72 per cent, respectively.

The powers exercised by the Health and School authorities are purely recommendatory, with the exception of the segregation of communicable diseases. Notes are sent through the teacher to the parents of defective children, giving advice as to treatment. In 4th class districts in 1914-15, 90.8 per cent of the children having defects received these letters of advice. More than 51 per cent of those examined had been followed through the year, but only 22 per cent of these were getting some sort of treatment. An examination of the nature of the defects in the pupils examined brought out the fact that the large majority are easily correctible if treated in time. Eyes, tonsils and teeth can all be remedied if the treatment is given early, and they account for the largest numbers of defects.

(1) Department of Health, 9th Annual Report, 1914, Part I.

Of those having more than one defect; 54,225, or more than 36 per cent had defective tonsils and teeth.

The result of treatment on these correctable defects is easily seen.

Of the 10,411 cases of defective vision treated, 6,899, or 68.7 per cent were improved.

Of the 1,321 cases of defective hearing treated, 762, or 57.6 per cent were improved.

Of the 1,190 cases of defective breathing treated, 724 or 60.8 per cent were improved.

Of the 45,119 cases of defective teeth treated, 45,119 or 100 per cent were improved.

Of the 6,844 cases of defective tonsils treated, 4,373 or 63.8 per cent were improved.

Of the 150 cases of defective skin diseases treated, 116 or 77.2 per cent were improved.

Of the 173 cases of malnutrition treated, 107 or 60.1 per cent were improved.

In spite of the fact that so small a proportion of the total number of defective children—only 16.3 per cent really secure treatment, the reduction in the number of defective pupils is decreasing materially every year. In 1911-12, 76.7 per cent of those examined were found to be defective. In 1914-15 this had fallen to 71.5 per cent. The number of pupils with defective tonsils has been reduced from 35.1 per cent to 26.2 per cent; with defective vision, from 29 per cent to 17.8 per cent.

Total number inspected	145,490	305,372	377,079	469,199
Per cent of defective pupils	76.7	74.9	72.7	71.5
Per cent of pupils with defective vision	29.0	27.0	24.2	17.8
Per cent of pupils with defective hearing	3.4	2.9	3.3	3.3
Per cent of pupils with defective nasal breathing	10.8	3.4	5.7	4.9
Per cent of pupils with enlarged cervical glands ...	8.7	6.9	5.9	4.9
Per cent of pupils with defective tonsils	35.1	28.5	28.0	25.2

A large part of this reduction, especially of defects of vision, is due to the educational work instigated by the State Department of Health and the various societies throughout these districts. Tooth-brush drills, health charts, and the proper teaching of hygiene, can but produce significant results.

The activities of the School Medical Inspectors in these 4th class districts have not been confined solely to the medical examination of the children. Sanitary inspection of the school buildings has been instituted, and by notifying school boards of bad conditions and suggesting possible remedies, insanitary conditions in these buildings have materially improved. In 1914-15, 2,353 out of the 2,377 4th class districts were inspected. The 12,525 buildings inspected contained 19,892 rooms. Ninety-eight and five-tenths per cent of these buildings were insanitary in one or more points.

No adjustable seats or foot stools	70.6% of the buildings
Unjacketed stoves	38.6% of the buildings
No thermometers	37.8% of the buildings
No provision to keep air moist	63.8% of the buildings
No fresh air inlets at stove or furnace .	67.8% of the buildings
Windows only ventilation	74.4% of the buildings
Ventilation shields not in use	56.1% of the buildings
Insanitary water container	25.1% of the buildings
Common drinking cup	37.2% of the buildings
Common towel	38.4% of the buildings
Privies unclean	22.5% of the buildings
Privies improperly built	51.2% of the buildings
Vaults insanitary	71.8% of the buildings
No disinfectant used	49.1% of the buildings

The light area in 42.1 per cent of the rooms was judged insufficient. The relation between this insanitary environment and the fact that almost three-fourths of our country school children have physical defects, is obvious.

Standards of inspection were raised with distinct improvements noted during the year. Insanitary sweeping was reduced from 60 to 51 per cent. Insanitary dusting was reduced from 43 to 32 per cent. Insanitary water containers were reduced from 37 to 25 per cent. Insanitary cleaning of the water containers was reduced from 50 to 44 per cent.

More recent figures on school medical inspection are available for Philadelphia. In 1916, 151,869 pupils were examined or about 75 per cent of the total number of school children. The city Department of Health has never had the necessary facilities for fully carrying out the law, and examining all school children. One hundred and sixty-seven thousand, two hundred and sixty-nine defects were recommended for treatment.

The majority of the defects found in these children, like those found in the school children of the 4th class districts of the state, are correctable.

"Poor nutrition and eye strain are the two basic and original defects, and the majority of the physical defects of later childhood are secondary defects resulting from neglect of these." (1) For example, chronic heart disease is often the result of acute infections like tonsillitis or influenza and defective hearing is often the result of adenoids, which in turn, can be traced in many cases to poor nutrition.

"Some of the figures given are too low, because in the poorer sections of the city the inspectors become dulled to the existence of poor nutrition in its moderate degree, and because care is possible only by impossible changes in the homes. The number of stoop-shouldered children recorded is likewise too small, because the lack of facilities for corrective work has tended to make the inspectors overlook mild cases. In 1917, with the institution of corrective gymnastics, there will be over 10,000 stoop-shouldered children nominated for corrective exercises by medical inspectors. The items chorea, constipation, appendicitis, etc., represent chance discoveries and emergency cases, rather than comprehensive and thorough examinations of parts of the body."

Many factors influence the correction of these defects. The most important are (First) the nature of the disease or defect. (Second) the use of the school nurse, and (Third) the attitude of the parents. In 1916 in Philadelphia 149 schools employed nurses, and fifty-two did not. The employment of a school nurse almost doubled the efficiency of the inspector and greatly increases the per cent of defects corrected. The percentage of physical defects corrected in 1916 varied from 33.1 per cent to 43.6 per cent in schools where no nurse was employed. Where a nurse was employed, the percentages were from 40.5 to 65—according to the social grade of the school.

During the last five-year period in Philadelphia the percentage of cases receiving treatment has constantly increased.

In 1912 only 45 per cent of the cases recommended for treatment received it, while in 1916 this percentage had increased to 54.9. In the treatment of "important defects" the increase has been from 31.4 to 43.8 per cent; in the treatment of "unimportant defects" from 85.5 to 95.3 per cent.

Of the 54.9 per cent receiving treatment, 33.9 per cent were treated through a private physician, 22.5 per cent through a dispensary, 12.1 per cent through a nurse, 31 per cent through the parents, and 0.5 per cent through the medical inspector. It is significant that in the analysis of the type of treatment received, the number of defects treated through a dispensary increases steadily and the number treated through a private physician decreases, as the social grade of the school is lowered. Thus in 1916 in schools of Social Grade A, 60.3 per cent of the defects were treated by a physician, and 17.2 by a free dispensary. In schools of Social Grade C, only 22 per cent were treated by private physicians while 25.6 per cent obtained care through free dispensaries.

In the case of the 45 per cent of the defective children who received no treatment, in 78 per cent of the cases, the non-treatment was due to the refusal of the parents. Poverty and ignorance play a large part here, as well as the lack of dispensary facilities. The results of the treatment, where it was secured, show without question the need for further and more complete medical inspection. Of some 76,045 cases of defects in schools employing nurses where the results of treatment were examined, it was found that in only 2.6 per cent there was no marked improvement. In 71.7 per cent the defect had been cured and in 25.8 per cent it had been materially improved. Considering the "important defects" separately, we find that more than 61 per cent were cured and more than 34 per cent were improved.

These figures speak for themselves. When we go behind the school children to the babies we find the need of measures for sickness prevention still more urgent. The startling infant mortality rates in this state have been discussed at length in Part II, Section 1. The need for maternity care was brought out in every survey made. "As the twig is bent, so is the tree inclined."

The question is, how to stimulate a more general and more extensive movement for disease prevention.

The state has a definite responsibility in seeing to it that some action is taken both to more adequately treat actual sickness and to prevent it by an attack upon its causes. The state alone has the power to act in a way which will be far reaching and democratic; which will not limit the solution to the chosen few of an individual group.

Among proposals for aiding in this solution stands State Health Insurance, claiming to provide care for employes when ill, and to stimulate sickness prevention and keep them well.

Any insurance plan, as a matter of business efficiency, must provide and further preventive measures; Health Insurance and programs for sickness prevention are not opposed in any way to each other. Neither takes the place of the other, and both are necessary.

Advocates of social insurance claim that nothing so quickly stimulates preventive effort as the enactment of insurance laws. Two reasons appear for this stimulus to prevention created by insurance. One is the desire of the insurance organization to reduce its losses. The other is the desire of the persons paying for insurance to reduce the cost.

Dr. I. M. Rubinow, one of the leading American students of social insurance, has recently given a clear description of these preventive forces, enumerating the different kinds of "preventive work carried on because of insurance."

"Not only have the insurance organizations of various types worked for prevention and reduction of losses, but they have also endeavored to obtain the co-operation of the insured in exercising better care, while relieving him of the fear of loss; they have introduced another motive through the mechanism of premium adjustment." (1) Fire insurance has resulted in stricter building laws, in better fire extinguishing facilities, in the development of automatic sprinklers; Commercial Life Insurance Companies have found it to their advantage to establish and encourage public health nursing and life-extension movements; compensation insurance has given a tremendous stimulus to industrial safety; health insurance in Europe has stimulated better care of the sick and convalescent; and unemployment insurance has stimulated better provision for public employment offices.

If State Health Insurance gives promise of stimulating adequate measures for sickness prevention, and so making possible the elimination of from 40 to 60 per cent of existing illness, while at the same time it makes provision for the treatment of that large part of the population which will continue to suffer from the burden of sickness, it is worthy of thorough study and careful consideration.

From all statistics gathered and special studies made it is startlingly evident that some far-reaching measures are needed in Pennsylvania, both for the efficient care of employes and their families when actually ill and also for the prevention of disease, if this state is to fulfill its great responsibility to the citizenship of the future.

Any constructive action which the Commission can take to meet these needs will be a direct contribution to the strength of the Commonwealth.

Part III

HEALTH INSURANCE

Section 1

SOCIAL INSURANCE

Insurance is a provision made by a group of persons for distributing among themselves the losses which may come to any one of them from hazards to which they are all subject. "Insurance in all its forms," says Thomas B. Love, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, "is the best expression in organized business terms of the great social principle of mutuality and co-operation." As a distributor of risk, all insurance is social in principle, even when conducted on a commercial basis. It removes from the individual the anxiety and responsibility of the burden of risk by allowing him to pay a very small share of every man's loss in order to have his own loss distributed in the same way. Owners of property, both large and small, as a rule, prefer the certain loss of relatively insignificant annual premiums, calculated to cover risk, cost of administration and business profit to the insurance carrier, to the chance of losing the entire value of their property. Fire and marine insurance, because of the obvious nature of the risks involved, were among the first types of such protection to develop. But gradually the seriousness of other hazards was recognized, and systems for insuring lives, property and business enterprises against every conceivable risk have been worked out.

Among the more recent hazards to be definitely recognized and distributed are those arising from ill health. The realization of the fact that few workers by hand or by brain can afford the more or less complete loss of earning power frequently suffered from entirely unforeseen attacks of illness has led to the practice among the more intelligent and prosperous workers of carrying health insurance in addition to life, accident, or fire insurance.

The term "social insurance" as contrasted with commercial insurance has come to have a special and distinct meaning, both in this country and abroad. It is recognized that while there are few individuals with sufficient resources to meet alone the numerous risks to which they are subject, the wage earning classes of the population are peculiarly subject to certain economic hazards. Sickness, permanent or temporary invalidity, accident, old age and unemployment all interfere with regular work and hence with the steady income necessary to maintain proper standards of living. Circumstances of work and of living for which industry and the state are in a certain sense responsible make these hazards greater for employed persons as a class than for others. Increased hazards mean higher premium rates for protection in companies operating on a commercial basis, and this fact, coupled with the frequent inadequacy of resources of the exposed persons, make commercial health, accident, old age, or unemployment insurance for them an impossibility.

Not only the workers themselves, but both industry and the state suffer severely as a result of the industrial hazards to which employed persons are subject.

Recognizing these facts, organized society in the form of state governments both in Europe and in America has in recent years begun to distribute the risk among the three factors responsible for and exposed to it, employes, employers and the state. This has been done by the regulation of insurance carriers and the elimination of profit, thus reducing the premium rate, by the assumption of a part of the cost of administration, by imposing upon the employing class a share in the cost, and by compelling the wage earner to contribute his share.

The only general experience with social insurance in the United States is in the field of Workmen's Compensation, but in Europe almost universal provision has been made to meet the problems of sickness, old age, invalidity and unemployment, as well as industrial accidents among wage workers, by systems of social insurance. In some cases these systems are voluntary, regulated and subsidized by the state, but they are rapidly being replaced by compulsory social insurance acts.

Part III. Section II.

HEALTH INSURANCE IN EUROPE.(1)

Health Insurance in some form or other has been in existence in Europe almost since the beginning of wage employment itself. Long before the political development of state insurance systems, mutual insurance against sickness was being administered by the many sick benefit societies originated by the wage-workers themselves as an attempt to distribute risks.

These original societies were of several kinds:

1. Private mutual societies composed of persons of various occupations. These were usually local in character and attempted to maintain more or less complete systems of insurance. In France and Belgium great emphasis was laid on annuities, but sick benefits gradually assumed importance in all countries. The chief features of these benefits were medical and hospital care, medicines, and cash benefits for members, medical care and sometimes cash benefits for the families of members, and lump sums paid at times of confinement.

Few of these societies accumulated a sufficient reserve to insure actuarial solvency, and almost none of them adjusted their dues to meet the increasing hazards due to the advancing age of their members. Consequently, financial ruin was a constant danger.

2. Federated or affiliated societies grew out of the combining of many of the local bodies. Meetings were held regularly, and rituals were gradually developed. This form of lodge organization exists to-day in thousands of fraternal societies all over the world. Some of these affiliated societies grew to enormous size, especially in England, and administered both life insurance and health insurance. Scarcely any of them however, were solvent, as a whole. In England in 1909, before the passage of the National Health Insurance Act, the Manchester Unity of Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of Foresters had each about 1,000,000 members, and a large number of lodges, but in both of them the insolvency of some of the branches more than offset the flourishing condition of others.
3. Establishment societies among the employees of individual establishments or businesses and frequently supported in part by the employers were also formed for the administration of sick benefits. Membership in some of these funds was required by the employer, while in other cases it was voluntary. The influence of the employer seems to have been the chief difficulty in these funds. Employers of course used their influence with varying motives. In some cases the organization of employees in the funds was used to prevent the formation of labor unions among them, and often the mobility of labor was interfered with, for employees were usually unwilling to leave funds to which they had contributed and from which they had not received benefits, unless their contributions could be refunded to them.
4. Trade Unions began at an early period to include the payment of sick benefits among their other activities. They almost invariably failed to provide for solvency, however, making no adjustment of rates to correspond to the increasing risks of advancing age, and not attempting to maintain reserves sufficient to assure the payment of claims permanently. The constant admission of young men to membership helped to stabilize the risk, but the rate of increase in membership was largely dependent on the ability of the Unions to improve industrial conditions, and showed wide fluctuations.

VOLUNTARY HEALTH INSURANCE SUBSIDIZED BY THE STATE

Realization of the benefits to be secured from these insurance schemes, and of the financial difficulties confronting them has led various European governments to encourage their growth by granting subsidies to certain societies which conform to specified standards. "It has been a noticeable feature in the subsidized state insurance schemes that the rapidity and energy of their growth seems to have been in ratio to the subsidies obtained from the state. Without state aid, only the more thrifty and well paid of the workers seem voluntarily to insure, and many of these often are unable to keep up their insurance. As long as the state held aloof and simply exercised control without giving assistance, the growth of this voluntary insurance has always been slow. The more the state has given assistance, the greater has been the number of workmen who have been able to secure the protection they seek." (1)

DENMARK.

The system of voluntary subsidized health insurance in operation in Denmark has remained practically unchanged for more than twenty-five years, and is an interesting example of this method.

After thirty years of investigation and discussion, the present law was adopted on April 12, 1892.

Four investigations of sick benefit societies by governmental Commissions had revealed the fact that the 1,000 societies in existence just before the passage of the law had a combined membership not exceeding eight per cent of the population, that less than one third of the societies furnished both money benefits and medical aid, and that the amount of benefit was usually very small, in some districts as low as one-quarter krone (less than seven cents) a day.

As first drafted, the law of 1892 provided for compulsory health insurance, but, after prolonged discussion, the principle of subsidies, combined with regulation, was substituted for the compulsory principle. The regulations to which the societies must conform in order to secure the subsidy are very simple. Each society must contain at least fifty members, the maximum age limit being forty years, and may be organized either by locality or by industry. The membership must consist of workmen receiving small incomes or of other persons of similar economic condition. No person may belong to more than one society. No medical examination is required for admission, but no benefits are provided for chronic diseases existing at the time of entrance.

Certain minimum benefits must be given by the societies, and certain extensions are permitted within prescribed limits. The required benefits are:

1. Free medical and hospital care for members and for their children under fifteen who live at home.
2. A cash sick benefit determined on the basis of the sick person's average wage for the entire membership. This benefit must not exceed two-thirds of the normal wage of the sick person or fall below 40 or (9.50 cents) per day. The usual range is from 11 cents per day for employees in the country to 54 cents for those in the city.

No benefit is paid for illness lasting less than three days, and no benefits are required for normal confinement or pregnancy, although these may be included voluntarily by the society. Funeral benefits are not allowed and the furnishing of drugs and supplies is optional. Societies may increase the waiting period from three to seven days, and benefits to women and minors may be decreased, while diseases resulting from immorality or intemperance may be excluded. The minimum period during which benefits must be furnished is thirteen weeks.

The operation of the law has tended to increase materially the membership in sick benefit societies. In 1893 there were 457 registered societies with a membership of 116,763, while in 1914 the 1,547 registered societies had 843,244 members, or about 30 per cent. of the population.

(1) American Medical Association—Social Insurance Series, Pamphlet 11, page 10.

(1) See Tables I and II at end of Part II

Women have for the past several years constituted the majority of those insured.

Less than 30 per cent. of the societies pay more than 16 cents per day to male members, and less than 15 per cent. pay as much as 16 cents per day to women. About 23 per cent. pay benefits for more than thirteen weeks, 17 per cent. having a twenty-six week period, and three funds having a longer period. Only about 40 per cent. supply any drugs at all, and only 18 per cent. pay for the entire cost of ordinary medicine.

The State subsidy is apportioned among the societies in two ways; one-half is determined by the membership at a rate not to exceed two kroner per member, and one-half by the amount of dues collected from members. This portion cannot exceed one-fifth of the members' contributions.

Several communal governments also give subsidies to the societies in their districts. In 1914 these subsidies amounted to 28 per cent. of the total income of the societies.

In addition to these money grants, the societies also receive other subsidies. The communes are required by the law to treat members of registered societies in hospitals at half the regular rates and to provide free transportation for physicians and midwives to the homes of members in rural districts.

The cost of operation of the whole system increased from $258,079, in 1893, to $2,604,400, in 1914, or more than nine fold, but so great was the increase in the membership of the funds that the average cost per member advanced only thirty-eight per cent., the largest increase being in the cost of hospital and medical service.

The experience of Denmark with state subsidized health insurance seems to indicate that to produce satisfactory results the subsidy must be very substantial in amount.

SWITZERLAND.

Efforts to establish a comprehensive insurance system in Switzerland have covered a period of forty years. After several careful surveys had been made, a constitutional amendment was passed by the council and approved by a referendum vote on October 26, 1890, authorizing the passage of compulsory insurance acts. A law providing for compulsory insurance against both sickness and accident was passed by the council on October 2, 1899, but rejected by a popular referendum on May 20, 1900. In 1906, after further investigation, an act providing for compulsory accident insurance and a heavily subsidized system of sickness insurance was introduced into the council. It was finally passed on June 13, 1911, and approved by referendum vote on February 4, 1912.

This law recognized the principle of compulsory health insurance by authorizing the different cantons and communes to declare the insurance compulsory either generally or for certain classes of persons, to establish public funds in case they are needed, and to compel employers to attend to the collection of the contributions of their employes compulsorily insured in the public funds, without, however, binding the employers themselves to the payment of the contributions, in case the cantons or communes assume the responsibility of the payment of all or a part of the contributions of indigent insured persons, the confederation agrees to grant special subsidies to them equal to one-third of their disbursements.

As in Denmark, subsidies are granted to mutual aid associations under certain conditions. They must not operate for profit, must have their headquarters in Switzerland, and must admit to membership any Swiss citizen who conforms to their provisions for admission. Swiss citizens must not be treated less favorably than persons of other nationalities. Women shall be admitted on the same terms as men, except to funds of a trade union or establishment fund where only men are employed. Insurance benefits shall not vary according to sex unless the contributions show a corresponding variation. No person shall be excluded from membership for religious or political causes. Swiss funds, unlike those in Denmark, are required only to insure to their members either medical care and medicines or a daily cash benefit of not less than one franc (19.3 cents), beginning at least with the fourth day of sickness. Benefits must be paid for at least 180 days during a period of 360 consecutive days. Childbirth must be regarded as an illness and, provided the insured person has been a member of the funds for nine months, both cash and medical benefits shall be provided for at least six weeks, and if the mother nurses the child an additional benefit of 20 francs ($3.86) must be paid.

The choice of physician or druggist is left to the patient unless the fund contracts for these services. Payment for medical and pharmaceutical aid is made according to a schedule fixed by the cantonal governments in conference with representatives of the funds and with the professional associations of physicians and pharmacists.

Recognized societies receive the following annual subsidies:

1. For children up to fourteen years, 3.50 francs (67.5 cents).
2. When the fund insures either medical care or cash benefit, 3.50 francs (67.5 cents) for each adult male, and four francs (77.2 cents) for each adult female.
3. If the fund insures both medical care and cash benefits, five francs (96.5 cents), for both sexes.
4. If the fund increases the benefit period from 180 to 360 days, an additional 50 centimes (9.7 cents).
5. For each confinement, an additional 20 francs ($3.86).
6. For each nursing benefit, an additional 20 francs ($3.86).
7. In mountainous districts where communication is difficult and the population spares, an additional subsidy of seven francs ($1.35).

The systems went into effect on January 1, 1914, and since that time ten cantons, including Zurich, have declared the insurance compulsory.

FRANCE.

The French act of June 29, 1894, established compulsory sickness insurance for seamen and railway employes, and for miners earning up to 2,500 francs ($482.50) per year. Under this system, employes contribute not more than two per cent. of their wages, or $9.65 per year, employers pay a sum equal to one-half the contributions from employes, and subsidies are received from the state and from charitably inclined persons. Medical attendance, medicines and cash benefits are paid to sick members, and death benefits and annuities may also be paid to dependents.

Since 1910 very small state subsidies have been paid to recognized voluntary sick benefit societies to which other employes might belong. Only one-half the activity of these societies is in the field of sickness insurance, however, as funeral benefits, and aid to widows, orphans, invalids, and old persons are also included. It is impossible to tell exactly how many members of the funds are insured against sickness, but the proportion seems to be very low and the protection afforded far from adequate.

COMPULSORY HEALTH INSURANCE.

The experience of these various countries has emphasized several serious faults in voluntary health insurance systems. The most apparent of these is the impossibility of reaching the most needy class without compulsion. In all voluntary systems the proportion of insured is in inverse ratio to the economic status. The willingness and the ability to insure presuppose a degree of education and the existence of a surplus which are impossible among a large proportion of employes under present industrial conditions. Moreover, little or no account is taken in voluntary systems of the responsibility of industry and of society in general for a large part of existing sickness among employes. The economic burden cannot be equitably divided so as to give the employer and the state their full share, but is left to be borne by those whose resources are least adequate to meet it. Standardization of service and economy of administration are almost impossible in a system of voluntary insurance. Standards are invariably lower in some societies than in others, as is shown by the great difference in the character and amounts of medical and cash benefits provided and by the varying degrees of solvency among the funds.

The rapid growth of compulsory health insurance within the past decade has been striking. Since 1900, nine countries, Luxemburg, Norway, Serbia, Great Britain, Russia, Roumania, the Netherlands, Sweden and Belgium have established compulsory systems.

GERMANY.

Germany was the first nation to adopt the principle of compulsory health insurance. The sickness insurance law of 1883, passed after years of experiment with varying degrees of compulsory insurance in different parts of the Empire, made no attempt to centralize control. Existing agencies were utilized to the fullest possible extent, the aim sought being mutual insurance with self-administration. Insurance was made compulsory for all workmen and technical employes in mines, quarries, factories and other industrial concerns, and eight kinds of societies were recognized, the only common requirement being that they should make annual reports and conform to provisions regarding minimum benefits and methods of investing funds.

1. Commercial societies (Gemeindekrankenkassen) were established under the law to provide insurance for all persons of whatever occupation, who were obliged to insure but did not belong to any other sick benefit society.

2. Local societies (Ortskrankenkassen) were established by townships for the various trades, two or more townships often uniting to form one society. At present these are the most popular of all the societies.

3. Factory societies (Betriebskrankenkassen), created by proprietors of factories in which more than 50 workers were employed, particularly in trades where the risk of sickness or accident was high. Management was under the joint control of employes and employers.

4. Builders' societies (Baukrankenkassen), which were practically establishment funds, founded by contractors in building operations and in public works, because of the great risks of these trades.

5. Guilds, sick-clubs, or trade societies (Innungskrankenkassen), authorized by the national trades regulation law. These did not possess legal personality, but were considered a mere function of the guilds or trade unions.

6. Miners' societies (Knappschaftskassen), formed in accordance with the mining laws of the several kingdoms.

7. Voluntary mutual aid societies (Hilfskassen). These were the friendly societies supported and controlled solely by the members without any participation from employers. Membership was usually without regard to trade. They were not under the control of authorities except that they must grant the minimum benefits required by law.

8. Independent state societies (Landesrechtliche Hilfskassen). These were voluntary associations, organized under the auspices of certain kingdoms of the empire. (1)

In 1884 an act was passed providing for compulsory accident insurance and in 1889 old age and invalidity were also included in the insurance system. These acts, and the sickness insurance law with numerous amendments and additions, were embodied in the present social insurance code of Germany, in 1911. This act added the two large groups of domestic and farm hands to those already insured as well as various minor groups of professional and semi-professional employes. The first 13 weeks of accident benefits are also taken care of by the sickness insurance system.

The fundamental features of the sickness insurance law may be outlined as follows:

I. Insured Persons.

a. All workmen, helpers, journeymen, apprentices, persons engaged in home-working industries, and servants are compelled without regard to income to be insured, as well as all other persons employed and earning 2,500 marks ($595) a year or less. This second group includes about 250,000 persons in commercial and professional pursuits, such as druggists, teachers, and members of theatrical companies and orchestras.

b. Voluntary members: All employes whose income does not exceed 2,500 marks ($595) and who are not under compulsion to insure; members of an employer's family working for him without remuneration, tradesmen who do not have regular employes, or at the most two. In these cases the fund may impose an age limit and may require applicants to submit to medical examination. It was estimated that the total number of persons who would be insured under the law from July, 1912, would be 12,918,000, made up as follows:

Compulsory contributors, 13,089,000 or 94 per cent; voluntary contributors, 829,000 or six per cent. This number would be equal to about 31 per cent. of the total population, and 77 per cent. of the occupied population, of the Empire. (1) It has been, of course, because of the war, impossible to get any data on the actual number of those insured since the law went into effect.

II. Organization and Administration of Insurance.

The machinery for carrying out the provisions of the health insurance law is entirely of a mutual character. The funds recognized under the law of 1883 are still used as insurance carriers, with some changes made by the 1911 insurance code. The local and factory societies have been recognized as the standard, as they are the most efficient types; the mutual aid societies have been discouraged by a minimum membership requirement of 1,000; the commercial societies have been eliminated and in their stead a new type of so-called rural fund has been established to include domestic, farm hands, and low-wage workers. It is estimated that approximately 37 per cent. of those insured are in local funds, 37 per cent. in rural funds and 15 per cent. in establishment funds, leaving only about 10 per cent. for all the other types of funds. (2)

The funds are practically self-governing, each fund having a general and an executive committee. Two-thirds of the members of the general committee are elected by the insured employes and one-third by the employers, and the members of the executive committee are chosen in the same proportion by the two groups of the general committee.

Supervision is exercised through a state administrative machinery consisting of the Imperial Insurance Office, the Superior Insurance Offices, for districts roughly corresponding to our judicial districts, and the Local Insurance Offices for districts corresponding to our counties or large cities. In each of these offices the Government, the employers and the employes are represented.

III. Contributions.

These are managed on an assessment basis.

- a. If the employee is insured through a mutual aid society, which is entirely under the control of its members, no contribution is made by the employer. This is also true in the case of those who are voluntarily insured.
- b. Employees insured in any other form of society pay two-thirds the cost and the employers pay one-third. The actual amounts are not fixed by law, but vary with different funds and different years. However, the normal maximum rate is four and one-half per cent. of the basic wage. An increase beyond this rate requires the consent of both employers and employees as represented in the management of the fund, unless the increase is necessary to provide the regular minimum benefits. In the latter case, such consent is necessary to raise the rate above six per cent. In 1912 the usual rate of contribution was from two to three per cent. of the wage rate.

- c. Employers are held responsible for the collections of payments from their employees, and are permitted to deduct such amounts from wages. They are also required to see that their employees are insured, under penalty of fine and liability for the cost of treatment.
- d. The imperial, state and commercial authorities assume a certain part of the cost of the system, by paying for the supervision and giving treatment to insured persons in public hospitals at special rates.

The following table shows the financial details of the operation of the German Sickness Insurance System, from 1911 to 1913.

IV. Benefits.

- a. The law specifically states that the benefits are not public charities. The right to benefits begins with membership.
- b. Medical benefits include medical, hospital and nursing care, medicines, and all necessary appliances, trusses, glasses, etc., from the beginning of illness regardless of whether it causes inability to continue working, up to 26 weeks in one year.
- c. Cash benefits equal to 50 per cent. of the standard wage, begin with the fourth day of illness, are paid for each working day lost up to 26 weeks in one year. The insured are classified into different wage groups, but the basic wage in any group cannot exceed five marks ($1.19) per day. The maximum normal sick benefit therefore is 60 cents per day. When the patient is sent to a hospital, the cash benefit is stopped unless needed for the support of the dependents.
- d. Maternity benefits equal to the cash benefits described above are provided for insured women for a period of eight weeks, of which six must be after delivery. Instead of this benefit, home treatment or hospital care with half cash benefit may be given. The same cash benefits are provided for six weeks for disability due to pregnancy.
- e. Funeral benefit in case of death of the insured equals twenty times the basic daily wage.

"But while these four forms of benefits constitute the legal minimum required by the sickness insurance funds, they give a very inadequate conception of the entire service rendered. In various ways the insurance may and does extend the minimum amounts, and within the prescribed limits of the acts establishes even other benefits dealing with sickness.

"These so-called optional benefits may be classified as follows:

1. Increase of compulsory benefits.
 - a. Increase of sick benefit up to 75 per cent. of wages.
 - b. Grant for Sundays and holidays.
 - c. Extension of sick benefits up to 52 weeks.
 - d. Reduction or abolition of the waiting period in all cases, or only in cases of industrial accidents, or in cases lasting over one week.
 - e. Increase of benefit payable to family when insured receives hospital treatment, from one-half to the full amount of the sick benefit.
 - f. Increase of funeral benefit, up to forty times the daily wage.
 - g. Increase of minimum for funeral benefits to 50 marks ($11.00).

2. New Benefits.
 - a. Hospital treatment.
 - b. Nurses' attendance.
 - c. Appliances to prevent disfigurement or deformity.
 - d. Grant of special diets.
 - e. Grant of other therapeutic means.
 - f. Sick benefits (up to one-half the regular sick benefit) to insured persons under treatment in hospitals.
 - g. Pregnancy benefits up to six weeks.
 - h. Medical treatment for ailments due to pregnancy.
 - i. Nursing benefits (or motherhood benefits) up to twelve weeks after confinement.
 - j. Convalescent care up to one year after illness.
3. Extension of benefits to Dependents.
 - a. Medical treatment to dependent family.
 - b. Maternity benefit to wife of insured.
 - c. Funeral benefits for death of husband or wife or child.

"Many of the funds, and especially the larger ones in the large cities, have embodied some of these permitted extensions, of which the most important are the increase of the money benefit above the legal minimum of 50 per cent. of wages, the extension of both the medical and money benefits beyond the minimum of 26 weeks, the establishment of a compulsory hospital benefit, which is not specially required by the law, increase of the duration of the maternity benefit, convalescent care and extension of the medical, maternity and funeral benefits to the immediate family of the insured. This very wide utilization of the possibilities of democratic management of the fund is a very significant feature of the development of health insurance in Germany. Concerning one or two of these features accurate information is available.

"The great majority of the funds have not exceeded the minimum requirements regarding the number of weeks for which cash benefits are paid, but the increase of the weekly benefit over the minimum amount is much more frequent. Detailed information concerning some of the extensions by large funds is given in I. G. Gibbon's "Study of Medical Benefits in Germany and Denmark," page 278, for twenty-eight large local funds, with a combined membership of 1,100,000. Eighteen of these funds paid sick benefits of 50 per cent.; one, 55 per cent.; one, 58.5 per cent.; six, 60 per cent., and one 62.5 per cent. of wages. In two funds the waiting period was reduced to two days and in five funds to one day. One fund extended the period of money benefits to thirty-four weeks, two to thirty-nine weeks and three to fifty-two weeks. Ten funds provided convalescent homes, and eight had day convalescent resorts. Twenty-one out of these twenty-eight funds granted medical aid to the members of the family, and twelve gave drugs as well. Seventeen funds have provided funeral benefits in case of death of the wife, and of these, fifteen also paid the funeral expenses in case of death of children." (1)

V. Organization of Medical Aid. (2)

Medical as well as cash benefits are administered by the funds themselves, and each fund has an absolutely free hand in the method of remunerating the physicians. Throughout Germany there exist official scales of medical, surgical and dental fees, and in the absence of formal agreements between the physicians and the funds it follows that payment will be made by attendance according to the minimum fees of the official scale.

The federation of sickness funds in Bremen is the only large organization known to pay its medical staff unconditionally on this principle, however, the usual plan being for the fund to contract with a number of physicians who give their services in return for a fixed annual salary, as in Dresden, or for compensation according to a capitation system. Under such a system, the physician may receive a fixed fee per capita per year for all insured persons whom he undertakes to attend, with or without certain special services according to the terms of the agreement; he may be paid a fixed rate per case of sickness attended, although this is an uncommon practice; or there may be a capitation fund of a stated amount, divided according to services rendered each patient, each service counting so many points. This last is the method most commonly used. In no instance is a charge based only on the number of visits or prescriptions. Physicians are not required to furnish medicines, but send the prescriptions to be filled by the pharmacist of the patient's choice.

As a rule, the insured person has free choice between at least two physicians, and may be permitted to change from one physician to another for certain sensible reasons. In Leipzig, 80 per cent. of the physicians are on the panel of the Leipzig Fund and consequently a wide choice is possible.

Between 1896 and 1911 there was a marked increase in the cost of medical treatment, due not only to the higher fees paid to physicians, but to the broader scope of treatment due to the progress of therapeutics, to the extension of treatment by specialists, and to the increased recognition by the working classes of the importance of health and their willingness to make sacrifices to obtain it.

The funds are usually disposed to give a very liberal interpretation to medical treatment. The treatment by specialists under most funds depends on the recommendation by the general practitioner first consulted, but in some towns, such as Munich, members are allowed to go directly to any specialist on the medical list without previous recommendation. Specialists with whom the large sickness funds conclude agreement are those for eye, ear, nerve, skin, throat, stomach and women's diseases. Medical treatment often comprises Roentgen-ray applications, electric treatment and mechanical exercises. In 1912 the central committee of the sickness funds in Berlin completed the equipment of an establishment for general use, including Roentgen-ray, hydrotherapeutic, electric and physical treatment on a large scale, and in the course of the first fifteen months, 6,800 persons were treated. Some of the large federations of sickness funds, like those of Leipzig and Dresden, have well equipped rooms attached to their central offices in which mechanical treatment is given in the most approved methods. The large sickness funds in the towns also provide their sick members with medical baths of great variety.

Among all classes in Germany there seems to be general satisfaction with the health insurance law. Standards of living among working men and women have been raised by its operation and loss of working time greatly decreased by prompt attention to incipient illness. The testimony of employers, employees, and public officials is so far as is known unanimously in favor of the system.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The National Insurance Act of Great Britain providing for both compulsory and old age insurance, was passed on December 16, 1911, and became operative July 15, 1912. Unlike the German system, which grew slowly as the result of experiments with state subsidies and control of sick-benefit societies, the British system was all-inclusive from the beginning.

Before the passage of the law the bulk of health insurance was handled by the powerful lodges and friendly societies and the trade unions. More than 5,500,000 of the more thrifty British workmen were voluntarily insured in this way, leaving about 8,000,000 workers unprotected. The influence of the fraternalists was strongly felt in the formulation of the act, under which they remain the chief carriers of insurance. The continuation of these national societies is one of many striking differences from the German system, which has forced the localization of all approved societies. In fact, except for the underlying principle of compulsion, the two systems have so little in common that they may well be taken as different types of state health insurance.

I. Insured Persons:

- a. All persons between the ages of sixteen and sixty-five years who are employed at manual labor, without regard to income and other employed persons earning less than 60 pounds ($778.64) a year, are compelled to insure. A person insured when under sixty-five remains insured if employed until he is seventy. Exceptions are made in the case of persons in the naval or military service, those employed by public authority, railway employes, teachers, and other persons for whom provision has already been made, and for a few casual and part-time employes.
- b. Voluntary members include all persons who are employed and are dependent on their earnings for their livelihood, and whose total income does not exceed 160 pounds ($778.64) a year. In addition those who have been insured persons for five years or longer may become voluntary members regardless of earnings.
- c. No person who is sixty-five years of age or older may become insured under the act, and no person may continue to be insured after he reaches the age of seventy, when he is taken care of by the old age pensions system.

II. Organization and administration of Insurance.

Unlike European systems of health insurance, the British system encourages the continuation of benefit societies by allowing them to become the main carriers of insurance. Participation is open to all sick-benefit societies, trade unions, establishment funds and similar organizations which can conform to the requirements for "approved societies," the most important of which are that they must not operate for profit and must be controlled by their members. In spite of this last provision, many "approved societies" have been organized by industrial life insurance companies and are under very little democratic control. It is impossible to ascertain the number of persons insured in various types of societies since 1914, but the following table shows the situation just prior to the outbreak of the war.

MEMBERS OF APPROVED SOCIETIES, GREAT BRITAIN, IMMEDIATELY PRECEDING THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR.

	Men.	Women.	Total.
Friendly Societies with Branches	2,517,363	711,230	3,228,593

Technically, the insured persons has unrestricted choice of his society. This is unlike the German system where he must belong to the society of his trade or locality. But the societies in Great Britain also have the right to refuse an applicant for membership, although not because of age alone.

Persons who thus fail to gain admission to any society become "deposit contributors" by depositing their contributions with the postoffice. They may draw benefits only up to the amount of their individual balances and so are not insured in any real sense. The failure to provide special institutions for the insurance of such persons is generally considered a defect in the British system. The provision for "deposit contributors" was intended to be only a temporary one, but has been continued because of the war. However, there were only about 352,000 persons provided for in this way just before the war, as against 13,827,828 in the approved societies. (1)

The administration of cash benefits for members of approved societies is left entirely to the societies, but the medical benefits are administered by 238 local insurance committees, one for each county or borough. This separation of the administration of the cash and medical benefits was made necessary because the supplying of medical care was distinctly a local problem and could not be handled by the societies, which do not operate within geographic limits. The Insurance Committees, which were instituted to secure some uniformity in the medical benefits provided, consist of from forty to eighty members, of whom three-fifths represent the insured persons, one-fifth (of whom two at least must be women) are appointed by the county or borough council, two members are elected by the medical practitioners in the district, and the remaining members by the insurance commissioners. Of the insurance commissioners at least one must be a medical practitioner and at least two must be women. These committees administer the medical benefits for members of approved societies, both the cash and the medical benefits for "deposit contributors," keep records, and promote measures for the prevention of disease. They may inquire into the causes of excessive sickness in any locality and may prosecute any persons responsible. To defray the expenses of these committees, each society having members who are insured persons resident in the county or county borough, pays two cents annually for each such member.

Both the approved societies and the insurance committees are under the control of four National Insurance Commissions, one for each of the four parts of the United Kingdom. These Commissions are appointed by the Treasury Department, and must contain at least one medical practitioner. They may make rules to govern all insurance administration. To insure uniformity, a joint committee for the United Kingdom exists, representing the four Insurance Commissions.

An advisory committee has been appointed by each Insurance Commission, composed of representatives of employers' associations, "approved societies" of employes, the medical profession and others, at least two of whom must be women.

III. Contributions.

The cost of the system is borne by payments from the employer, the employee, and the state. Unlike the continental laws, which provide for contributions on an assessment basis, the British law fixes the rate of premium as well as the rate of benefits. The standard cost of insurance is fixed at nine pence per week for each male insured and eight pence for each female, irrespective of age or occupation. This cost is divided between the three contributors, the ratio of payment being determined by the wages and sex of the employee.

(1) Report of the Administration of the National Health Insurance, 1914-17.

A. If the employe earns 2 s. 6 d. (61 cents) or more per day, the payments are fixed as follows:
Employer	3 d. (6 cents) a week
Employee	Male4 d. (8 cents) a week
	Female3 d. (6 cents) a week
Government	2 d. (4 cents) a week
B. If the employe earns between 2s. (49 cents) and 2 s. 6 d. (61 cents) per day:
Employer	for male employe	..4 d. (8 cents) a week
	for female employe	3 d. (6 cents) a week
Employee	3 d. (6 cents) a week
Government	2 d. (4 cents) a week
C. If the employe earns between 1 s. 6 d. (37 cents) and 2 s. (49 cents) per day:
Employer	for male employe	..5 d. (10 cents) a week
	for female employe	4 d. (8 cents) a week
Employee	1 d. (2 cents) a week
Government	3 d. (6 cents) a week
D. If the employe earns less than 1 s. 6 d. (37 cents) per day:
Employer	for male employe	..6 d. (12 cents) a week
	for female employe	5 d. (10 cents) a week
Government	3 d. (6 cents) a week

In no case can the employer be made to pay more than 6 d. (12 cents) per week, per employe, or the employe more than 4 d. (8 cents) per week.

The cost of administration is borne by the entire fund.

Collections are made by the sale of stamps through the post office, the proceeds of which go to the Insurance Commission. The employer pays both his own share and that of his employes, and is authorized to deduct from wages the payments made for employes. The stamps are placed on cards which are collected quarterly by the societies, under regulations made by the Insurance Commissioners. The societies in turn collect from the Commissioners pro-rata amounts for the purpose of paying benefits and covering the cost of administration. The Insurance Committees also receive from the Commissioners money to cover the cost of medical aid and administration.

This flat rate contribution which is so different from the assessment system used in Germany, is based on the cost of supplying all the benefits to a person from sixteen to seventy years of age, and medical and sanatorium benefit throughout life. The greater sickness rate of later life has been allowed for by fixing the flat rate too high for the low-age groups and too low for the high-age groups. By this method a reserve is created to meet the increasing claims of later life. A uniform contribution for the various ages insured at the inauguration of the system was made possible by crediting to the societies, for members over sixteen years of age, the amounts which would have accumulated to the credit of these members if they had been insured from the age of sixteen. These "reserve values" made an aggregate total of $432,000,000, which appeared at first only as a book credit. About one-fifth of each week's contribution is devoted to converting this into cash and providing interest on the capital sum, a process which it was originally estimated would take from eighteen to twenty years. When the total amount has been written off, the released one-fifth of the contributions may be used for increasing benefits.

Serious criticism has been made of this flat rate of contribution. Several errors were made in the calculation of the British sickness rate, especially for women, and it has been found very difficult to change the premium rate, which the contributors regard as fixed. It has been found equally hard to change the rate, even to provide more adequate benefits, and necessary additional expenditures have had to be met by the government. The flat rate is especially unsatisfactory when coupled with unrestricted freedom in the choice of carriers, because of the possible segregation in separate societies of persons by trade or sex, frequently resulting in an isolation of risk far below or above the average hazard for the entire insured population for which the flat contribution was calculated.

Since the societies are financially independent of each other, and one is unable to benefit from the surplus of another, it has been necessary to set aside a portion of the reserve fund as a "special risk fund" from which unfortunate societies may recoup themselves.(1)

IV. Benefits:

Instead of establishing a schedule of minimum benefits which approved societies must provide and may exceed, the British act established a uniform system of services which are rarely extended.

- a. Medical benefits begin with the first day of illness and include medical attendance and treatment, medicines, and such appliances as may be prescribed under regulations made by the Insurance Commissioners. These benefits are much less carefully defined than in the German system, and actually guarantee only treatment by an ordinary practitioner. They do not specifically include obstetrical aid, operations, hospital care or nursing, although several Parliamentary grants have been made to provide these services to a limited extent. Medical and dental care for dependents is optional with the societies.
- b. Sanatorium benefit for persons suffering with tuberculosis is provided through the insurance committee which make arrangements with the local authorities.
- c. The cash benefit is not based upon wages, as in Germany, but is fixed uniformly at ten shillings ($2.40) a week for men and seven shillings six-pence ($1.80) for women, for a period of twenty-six weeks in each year, beginning with the fourth day of incapacity. A disablement benefit of five shillings ($1.20) a week is paid to both men and women who have been insured for two years, when the illness extends beyond twenty-six weeks. This payment may continue for the entire duration of the incapacity, or until the insured reaches the age of seventy. To be eligible for cash benefit, the insured person must have been insured for at least twenty-six weeks and at least twenty-six weekly contributions must have been paid by or for him. Provisions are made for paying reduced rates of sick benefit to unmarried persons under twenty-one years of age having no dependents; to persons fifty years of age and over who become insured within one year from the commencement of the act and who at the time they claim benefits have paid less than five hundred weekly contributions; to certain persons of the age of seventeen or more who become insured later than one year from the commencement of the act, and to persons whose dues are in arrears.
- d. Maternity Benefits.—In the case of an employed woman or the wife of an insured man, a lump sum of 30 shillings ($7.30) is paid for confinement. This payment is made solely to help pay the expenses incident to confinement, as no medical care is provided. If the mother is an insured person and married, she is entitled to sickness or disablement benefit in addition to the maternity benefit, but except for such cases, no woman is entitled to sickness or disablement benefit during two weeks before and four weeks after confinement, except for a disease or disablement not connected with childbirth.
- e. No funeral benefit is granted under the Act.

V. Organization of Medical Aid:

The Insurance Committees, under the supervision of the Commissioners, arrange for medical care of insured persons and draw up "panels" or lists of physicians. In making these arrangements, two fundamental conditions must be recognized: the right of every duly qualified physician who wishes to serve upon a panel to a place upon it, provided he has not been shown to be injurious to the service, and the right of every insured person to choose his physician from those on the panel. A minimum of $1.68 and a maximum of $1.80 per person, is annually set aside for the remuneration of physicians, regardless of the amount of treatment given in individual cases.

ATTITUDE OF MEDICAL PROFESSION

"About ten years ago it became evident in England that the circumstances under which the general practice of medicine could take place were rapidly becoming less and less advantageous to the profession." (1) The reduction of infectious diseases through preventive medicine and public hygiene and the substitution of midwives for physicians at confinement had done much to reduce the incomes of practitioners among the poor. It was well recognized that such practice meant very small fees with many bad debts, and that the poor could not pay for their medical care without suffering serious financial embarrassment. Numerous clubs, and medical associations had sprung up, and lodge practice and club practice had become so prevalent that in 1905 the British Medical Association made an investigation of the situation. Their report showed that the usual method of payment was by capitation, resulting often in inadequate payment for excessive work, and poor medical return to the patient. The average fee obtained per visit was about 21 cents, and each club member was attended on an average four times per year. (2)

Various plans for the establishment of medical associations to complete with the lodges were under consideration when the National Insurance Act was proposed. The British Medical Association presented six cardinal points which it desired to have incorporated into the Act. Four of these, providing for free choice of physician by the patient subject to the consent of the physician to act; medical benefit to be administered by the insurance committees and not by the societies; adequate medical representation among the Insurance Commissioners and on the local insurance committees, and statutory recognition of a local medical committee representative of the profession in the district of each insurance committee; and an equitable adjustment of differences regarding amount and method of remuneration of physicians were adopted and made a part of the act. There were numerous controversies between the Medical Association and the government regarding the rate of capitation payment, but the majority of the profession at once accepted service under the Act. At present from 70 to 100 per cent of the physicians in the various districts are on the insurance panels.

"On January 17th, 1917, the Insurance Acts Committee of the British Medical Association decided to ask each Branch and Division of the Association and each Local Medical and Panel Committee, or such bodies acting in co-operation, to appoint a thoroughly representative Sub-Committee to consider the present system of National Health Insurance, so far as it affects the relation of the medical profession to the public health and the treatment of disease, and to make suggestions for its improvement. The hope was expressed that all possible steps would be taken to ascertain the opinions of as many men as possible on military service and certain questions were asked in order that attention might be directed to certain specific points.

"The degree of unanimity so far disclosed is somewhat remarkable. On a subject which five years ago was the most highly controversial that had ever been before the profession, and which still in some places and everywhere in some of its aspects, excites argument, it is found (First) that many matters which at the beginning of the controversy gave rise to most apprehension have assumed a position of quite minor importance; (Second) that the general system by which the State provides medical advice and treatment under the insurance scheme is in the main approved, and that criticisms have a tendency to concentrate on a comparatively few points which, though of great importance and indeed vital to smooth working, are, after all, matters of detail which ought to be capable of adjustment; (3) that there is a large body of opinion in favor of the extension of the health insurance system both to kinds of treatment not at present provided for and to classes of persons at present excluded therefrom." (1)

The report of the Committee goes on to state that the medical profession, insured persons and government officials seem to be in accord with the principle of the Act, and that all elements unite in demanding more adequate medical and surgical aid, as well as numerous changes in the details of operation of the system. A long list of suggestions for improvements have been formulated by the Insurance Acts Committee of the British Medical Association to be presented as possible amendments to the Act.

OTHER COMPULSORY SYSTEMS

The health insurance systems of Austria (1888), Hungary (1891), Luxemburg (1901), and Roumania (1912) are organized in the same way as the German system and differ from it only in a few minor details. The most important difference is the experiment introduced in Hungary in 1907, when all the local funds were consolidated into two national insurance societies. The Serbian law (1910) includes only employees of establishments subject to the industrial act which covers mining, transportation, trade, and certain other industries. The Russian Act (1912) is also limited in its scope, covering factories, mines, metallurgical establishments, inland navigation, street railways and some local steam railroads, provided that they employ at least twenty hands, and use some form of mechanical power, or that if they do not use mechanical power they employ at least thirty hands. Only about 20 per cent of the wage workers are thus provided for. Cash benefits resemble those furnished by the German system, but no medical care is provided, because by a law of 1866, employees in factories and mines are required to provide free medical care for employees. As very few sick benefit societies existed in Russia previous to the passage of the Act, the administration of the system was put exclusively in the hands of establishment or factory funds, controlled by boards of directors of which the employers elect two-thirds of the members and the employees one-third. The Norwegian law (1909) covers all industrial employees regardless of trade and departs from German precedent in exempting persons suffering from chronic diseases, making medical care for dependents compulsory and introducing a definite money subsidy from the state. The Netherlands passed a compulsory health insurance law in 1913, differing in two important features from the German law. No medical or funeral aid is provided, because of the already extensive provision of this care by mutual aid societies and by municipalities; and the administration of the system is in the hands of special "labor councils," elected by employers and employees for administrative districts designated by the government. These councils provide a method of organization which more closely approaches complete state insurance than the methods used in other European countries.

Sweden is reported to have adopted a compulsory system since the outbreak of the war, and Italy has appointed a Commission to draft a compulsory Act, including other workers besides railway employees, who are at present compulsorily insured. In May, 1914, the Belgian Chamber of Representatives passed a bill for compulsory health, invalidity and old age insurance which was to have been referred to the Senate in November, 1914. (2)

It has of course been impossible to secure extensive or detailed information concerning the recent operation of any of these systems. Their success or failure can at present only be judged by the testimony of persons who are familiar with the various countries concerned. By far the largest volume of this testimony indicates a wide spread endorsement of the principle of compulsory health insurance in Europe, and a desire on the part of all classes to liberalize benefits, extend eligibility, and give greater stimulus to preventive health measures.

In March, 1914, Sidney and Beatrice Webb, the well known English writers on labor problems, published a careful report of the results of an investigation which they had just made of the British Health Insurance system. They spoke very frankly of the incompleteness especially of the medical care provided, but said of the system in general:

"We cannot pretend to measure the advantage, to individuals or to the community, or the really gigantic provision thus made for periods of incapacity—however far short of completeness or perfection the provision may be deemed."

"We do not pretend in this survey, to give any vision of the social results of the National Insurance Act—to gauge the relief afforded in sickness and poverty, or the advance in health and productive power that its truly gigantic operations can not fail to be bringing about."

Part III. Section III.

STATE SOCIAL INSURANCE FACILITIES IN THE UNITED STATES.

The industrial development of the United States, as of Europe, has been accompanied by various efforts of employed persons, sometimes with the co-operation of employers, to establish insurance systems which would enable groups of workers to distribute such risks as those arising from sickness, accident, old age and invalidity. Trade unions, both national and local; establishment funds for workers in individual industrial or business operations; mutual societies, fraternal and lodges, and mutual industrial life insurance companies are the best known representatives of this type of protection.

The extent of these different kinds of insurance, in so far as they are concerned with the sickness risk, has been outlined in Part II, Section III of this report. Their growth in this country has been very similar to their progress in Europe before the enactment of social insurance acts, and they reveal here the same defects as we have already described in discussing the factors which led to the development of state insurance abroad.

A few interesting experiments are being made in different parts of the United States with voluntary state insurance in very limited degrees. Massachusetts through its savings banks and Wisconsin through the state government are attempting to provide industrial life insurance at the lowest possible cost by eliminating profit and the expense of solicitors and collectors, and by subsidizing the cost of actuarial and medical departments. Indiana has for many years maintained a "hydrophobia fund," from which persons bitten by dogs can have their wounds treated, and North and South Dakota have just adopted from Canada a plan for "hail insurance," maintained by the state for the protection of the farmer in case of destruction of his crops by hail storms.

However, the growth of Workmen's Compensation is the one important development of state insurance in this country so far. The addition of Virginia in 1918 made thirty-eight states, besides Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico, which have compensation acts. The federal government has also a law for the protection of its million civilian employees, and war risk insurance has been provided for men in the service. Thirteen of the state compensation laws are compulsory, and sixteen laws provide for insurance in a state-managed fund. The rate of compensation varies from 40 per cent of wages in Washington to 66 2-3 per cent in Ohio and New York. Louisiana, Massachusetts, New York, Porto Rico, Kentucky, and New Jersey, have improved their laws within the past year. The successful operation of these laws has won general support of the principle of compensation, not only because of the relief afforded actual cases of injury, but even more because of the tremendous impetus given to preventive efforts. The "Safety First" sign is now a familiar one, and is but an indication of the general movement for safe working conditions, properly guarded machinery, and educational campaigns among employees.

STATE HEALTH INSURANCE PROPOSALS IN THE UNITED STATES.

Various plans for State Insurance have been proposed in this country, differing somewhat in the number and type of benefits provided.

The most comprehensive proposals aim to insure all employed persons against sickness and accident not covered by Workmen's Compensation acts, and to provide medical benefits during the entire illness, including the necessary supplies and hospital treatment, extending this care to the workers' dependents; making special provision for maternity and death benefits; supplying cash as well as medical benefits, the cash benefit amounting to a proportion of the employees' wages, but with a maximum limit. It is proposed to conduct the system under state supervision and to support it by contribution from the employees, the employers, and the community, in varying proportions.

The other proposed plans are usually modifications of the above, differing from it principally in the regulations as to (First) whether insured persons shall include all employees, or be limited to a group in receipt of not more than a certain yearly income; (Second) whether benefits can be extended to the dependents of these employees; (Third) methods of organization and provisions for medical benefits; (Fourth) degree of supervision and type of insurance carriers; (Fifth) detail in types of benefits conferred.

There are two standards by which any proposed health insurance plan must be tested as a state or national policy: First: Whether it will lessen poverty and destitution.

Second: Whether it will lessen disease and promote health.

As Dr. Warren of the United States Public Health Service states, "State Health Insurance should have two definite objects: (First) To distribute the cost of sickness among those responsible for conditions causing sickness and thereby lighten the burden upon the individual and (Second) to give a financial incentive for the prevention of sickness to those who are responsible by dividing the premiums among the responsible groups."

Because of the attention paid to the exact number and kind of losses occurring and the financial incentive to prevent as many as possible of these losses, we find that invariably all kinds of insurance stimulate prevention. Life insurance companies find it worth their while to care for the health of their policy holders; to make in short, every effort to prevent death and the consequent loss to the company. Fire insurance companies stimulate in every possible way means of fire prevention. A certain number of losses—deaths, fires, accidents—are bound to occur. As a business proposition, however, it is worth the while of the insurance companies to reduce the number of these losses to the minimum. So far as we are able to judge from the information available, every European country which has in operation a state health insurance system has felt the impetus to preventive effort. Better hospital and nursing facilities have been provided, prompt attention to minor illnesses has lessened the proportion of serious and chronic diseases, and educational health propaganda among the employed classes has been greatly stimulated.

The interest in State Health Insurance in the United States is witnessed by the innumerable private bodies representing the organized employers, employees, medical profession social agencies and research bureaus studying health insurance questions, in addition to the official commissions created by nine State Legislatures and charged with the duties of investigating the sickness problem among employed persons, the economic results of this sickness, and the different plans in force in this and other countries, looking toward a more equitable distribution of the sickness burden among those responsible for it—the individual, industry, and the state.

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE COMMISSION TO CODIFY AND REVISE THE LAW RELATING TO BANKS, PRIVATE BANKERS AND TRUST COM-PANIES DOING BUSINESS IN THE COMMON-WEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Appointed Under Authority of the Act of the General Assembly, Approved July 25, 1917, P. L. 1202.

To the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

The Commission appointed by his Excellency the Governor on October 17, 1917, in pursuance of the Act of the General Assembly approved July 25, 1917, P. L. 1202, to codify and revise the law relating to banks, private bankers and trust companies doing business in this Commonwealth, have the honor to report as follows:—

Immediately upon notification of their appointment, the members of the Commission proceeded to organize by the election of George D. Edwards, of Allegheny County, as chairman, James A. Walker, of Philadelphia County, as secretary, and Samuel D. Matlack as law assistant. The Commissioners have held numerous sessions and conferences, including public hearings at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Scranton and Harrisburg.

Unlike some commissions appointed to revise the laws of the Commonwealth, these Commissioners have not had the advantage of any previous codification in Pennsylvania.
They have, however, made an exhaustive study of the existing laws of the state relating to banks, private bankers and trust companies, and have carefully compared the recently adopted codes of New York, Missouri and California, as well as the banking laws of other states and of the United States.

They have assembled material for a tentative codification of the laws affecting banks and trust companies and have given thoughtful consideration to the subjects of private bankers and savings banks.

The work of the Commissioners has disclosed many important problems which, aside from the reasons hereafter stated, in their judgment require further investigation and deliberation before the submission of a complete and final report. The Commissioners also feel that, in order to make their work symmetrical and permanent, the scope of their duties should be broadened so as to include the laws relating to savings institutions of all kinds, building and loan associations and loan brokers—in short, all institutions which are or should be under the supervision of the state banking department.

But there are other and, to the minds of the Commissioners, conclusive reasons why it is inadvisable to present a complete codification at this session.

At the session of 1917, a joint resolution was passed, proposing an amendment to Section 11 of Article 16 of the Constitution, relating to the incorporation of banks and trust companies. The present provision of the Constitution, limiting charters to twenty years, was first introduced in 1836.
State banks having long since ceased to be banks of issue, the reason for this limitation no longer exists. The Commissioners therefore hope that the resolution will again be passed at the present session and are of the opinion that the adoption of a codification of the banking laws should be deferred until it has been determined whether the amendment, giving broader powers to the General Assembly, is to be made. While the Commissioners have received many and diverse suggestions for amendment of the laws, the one general request has been on the part of trust companies, seeking discounting privileges, which, under the proposed constitutional amendment, the Legislature would have power to grant.

Further, the unsettled financial conditions which have prevailed during the war, and the ensuing readjustment and reconstruction, cause the Commissioners to feel that the problems thereby occasioned should be more fully determined before material changes in the banking laws are made. By the time the Legislature of 1921 convenes, it is reasonable to expect not only that business and financial conditions will have become settled, but that, in the interval, defects in the existing banking system of the state, not developed in pre-war times, will have become plain.

For these reasons, and because the Commissioners feel strongly that, by deferring their final report until the session of 1921, a complete codification, placing the Pennsylvania banking laws in the front rank and on a permanent basis, can be successfully worked out, they respectfully ask that their functions be continued, with an enlargement of their powers as herein suggested, and with leave to report to the next succeeding session of the General Assembly.

There is one matter, however, which in the judgment of the Commissioners should not be postponed. In the financial readjustment now beginning, both the public and the banking institutions should have the fullest protection of the state banking department. In order that the commissioner of banking may successfully cope with this situation, legislation is urgently needed. The Commissioners therefore submit the appended draft of a revision of the laws relating to the banking department, the passage of which they earnestly recommend.

The specific changes in the existing law are fully indicated in the notes following each section of the draft.
In general, the purpose is to render the operation of the department more flexible and effective, to make the department self-supporting, and to provide that the commissioner of banking shall directly control the liquidation of institutions under his supervision, with a view to economy of time and money and the protection of the interests of all concerned.

The department is made self-supporting by providing that all its expenses shall be assessed against the institutions under its control and the fund so created shall be kept separate and devoted exclusively to the expenses of the department. The salaries of the commissioner and his chief deputy are increased. Two additional deputies are provided for. The number and duties of all other employes of the department, and their compensation, are left to the determination of the commissioner with the approval of the Governor.

Instead of the present method of winding up insolvent institutions by means of a receivership, with its attendant delays and expense, a plan is provided whereby the commissioner himself, acting in the capacity of receiver, may take prompt possession of the business and property of an embarrassed institution without previous application to the court, and may, if after investigation he finds liquidation unnecessary, work out a method by which the institution may resume business.

In drafting Sections 5 (d) and 9 as to employes and expenses of the department, and the sections beginning with 21, relating to winding-up proceedings, the Commissioners have had before them the provisions of the New York banking law and of the recently adopted banking codes of Missouri and California, which states have lately made comprehensive revisions of their banking laws.

Some of the provisions of these codes, which have been successfully put into practice, have been of assistance to the Commissioners, subject to changes necessary to make them conform to the jurisprudence and practice in Pennsylvania. In other particulars, the Commissioners have considered it wise, for the sake of uniformity, to follow as far as practicable the provisions of the Pennsylvania Insolvency Act of 1901.

Respectfully submitted,

GEORGE D. EDWARDS,
Chairman.

JAMES A. WALKER,
Secretary.

JNO. M. REYNOLDS,
ALEX. T. CONNELL,
GROVER C. LADNER,
Commissioners.

SAMUEL D. MATLACK,
Law Assistant.

Section 52. Repealer.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That this act shall be known and may be cited as the Banking Department Act of 1919.

Section 2. Except as otherwise expressly indicated, the following words, wherever used in this act, shall be taken and construed to have the following meanings:—

The word "person" means individuals, partnerships and unincorporated associations.

The word "court" means the court of common pleas of the county where the banking house or other place of business of the corporation or person in question is located.

The word "prothonotary" means the prothonotary of such court.

Section 3 (a) Whenever, under any of the provisions of this act, advertisement is required to be made in a newspaper, such advertisement shall, unless otherwise provided, be made in a newspaper of general circulation in the county, published in the city, borough or township where the banking house or other place of business of the corporation or person in question is located. If there be no newspaper published in such city, borough or township, then the advertisement shall be made in a newspaper of general circulation in the county, published at the county seat, or, if none be there published, in the newspaper published nearest to said city, borough or township within the county. If there be no newspaper published in the county, then the advertisement shall be made in the newspaper published nearest to such city, borough or township in an adjoining county.

Note.—The purpose of this clause is to avoid repetitions in the various sections in which advertisements are required.

(b) Except as otherwise expressly provided, all written or printed notices required by this act shall be served either in the manner now or hereafter provided by law for the service of writs of summons save that service need not be made by the sheriff or by mailing such notice by registered mail, return receipt requested, to any person required to be notified, at his last known place of business or residence, and to any corporation at its principal office or, if a foreign corporation, at the office of its duly authorized agent.

Note.—This clause, also, is intended to avoid repetition.

(c) Whenever, under any of the provisions of this act, certificates or other documents are required to be filed or recorded in the office of the prothonotary of any court of common pleas or in the office of any other public official other than the Commissioner of Banking, such prothonotary or other official shall be entitled to receive therefor the same fees as are provided by law for similar services.

Note.—This clause is intended to avoid repetition and to prevent any constitutional objection to the various provisions requiring the filing of papers, on the ground that they impose additional duties upon the prothonotary or other official without additional compensation.

Section 4. There shall continue to be a separate and distinct department known as the Banking Department, charged with the supervision of all the corporations and persons hereinafter described, and with the duty of taking care that the laws of this Commonwealth in relation thereto shall be faithfully executed and that the greatest safety to depositors therein or therewith and to other interested persons shall be afforded.

The said supervision, duties and powers shall extend and apply to the following corporations now or hereafter incorporated under the laws of this state or under the laws of any other state and authorized to transact business in this state, namely, all such corporations having power to receive and receiving money on deposit or for safe-keeping otherwise than as bailee, including all banks, banking companies, co-operative banking associations, trust, safe-deposit, real estate, mortgage, title insurance, guarantee, surety and indemnity companies, savings institutions, savings banks and provident institutions. The said supervision, duties and powers shall also extend and apply to mutual savings funds, building and loan associations, bond and investment companies and corporations doing a safe-deposit business only.

The said supervision, duties and powers shall also extend and apply to all such individuals, partnerships and unincorporated associations as are or shall be by law made subject to the supervision of said department, and to any individuals or associations of individuals doing the business of building and loan associations or a business in the nature thereof, whether under the guise of a deed of trust or otherwise.

It shall not be lawful for any foreign corporation to receive any deposit or deposits or transact any banking business whatsoever, in this Commonwealth, until it shall have first filed in the office of the Commissioner of Banking a certified copy of the statement required by law to be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Note.—This is a revision of Section 1 of the Act of February 11, 1895, P. L. 4, 1 Purd. 410. The language of that section is confused and ambiguous. The second paragraph of the revised section is intended to make it clear that the supervision of the department extends to the various banks and companies first enumerated so far as they have power to receive and do receive money on deposit, and to the last four classes irrespective of this element.

The third paragraph covers individuals, partnerships and unincorporated associations so far as they are now or hereafter may be by other legislation brought under the supervision of the department, thus making no change in the existing law as to private bankers. The last clause of this paragraph however, extends the supervision to certain institutions doing business under a so-called "deed of trust," brought to the attention of the Commissioners by the Banking Department and recently held by the Attorney General not to be within the supervision of the department under existing law.

The fourth paragraph embodies the last sentence of Section 1 of the Act of 1895. It is retained because its omission might cause doubt whether the Commissioners meant to change the existing law; but attention is directed to the fact that under Section 2 of the Act of March 28, 1898, 4 Sm. L. 537, 1 Purd. 447, foreign corporations are forbidden under penalty to establish in this state "any banking-house or office of discount and deposit." The Act of 1898 evidently contemplates only banks of issue or discount. See Fox's Appeal, 93 Pa. 406.

The Act of June 7, 1907, P. L. 461, 5 Purd. 5346, brought under the supervision of the department "every person, firm, or unincorporated association in this Commonwealth, who shall hereafter engage in the banking business within this Commonwealth, and who shall hold themselves open to the public for the purpose of receiving money on deposit, or otherwise." This act is not repealed by the present draft, which leaves the scope of such supervision unchanged. Section 5 (a) The chief officer of the Banking Department shall continue to be known as the Commissioner of Banking. He shall be appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold his office for the term of four years and until his successor is duly qualified. Within fifteen days from the time of notice of his appointment, he shall take and subscribe the oath of office prescribed by the constitution and file the same in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and shall also give to the Commonwealth a bond in the penalty of fifty thousand dollars, with two or more individual sureties, or a corporate surety, to be approved by the Governor, conditioned for the faithful performance of all his duties. He shall receive an annual salary of eight thousand dollars.

Note.—This and the following clauses of the section take the place of Section 2 of the Act of 1895. The present clause increases the bond from $20,000 to $50,000, permits corporate surety, and raises the commissioner's salary from $6,000 to $8,000.

(b) The Commissioner of Banking shall appoint a first deputy, whose salary will be five thousand dollars per annum, and may appoint a second and a third deputy, whose salaries shall be, respectively, four thousand and three thousand dollars per annum. The duties of all such deputies shall be such as may be assigned to them by the commissioner, and each of them shall take, subscribe and file the oath of office as herein prescribed for the Commissioner of Banking and shall, whenever required by the commissioner, give bond, in such amount and with such surety as may be prescribed by the commissioner, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of such deputy.

Note.—This clause provides for two additional deputies, makes the duties of all the deputies such as may be assigned to them by the commissioner, and increases the salary of the first deputy to $5,000. This salary was $2,500 under the Act of 1895 and $3,000 under the Act of March 31, 1905, P. L. 88, 5 Purd. 5346, and is now $4,000 under the Act of April 26, 1917, P. L. 101. The requirement of Section 2 of the Act of 1895, that the deputy shall give a $10,000 bond, is replaced by the last part of this clause and by the second paragraph of clause (c).

(c) Whenever the Commissioner of Banking, by reason of absence or incapacity, is unable to perform the duties of his office, or if a vacancy in the office of Commissioner of Banking occurs, the duties of the commissioner shall be performed by the deputy next in authority, until such disability is removed or the vacancy filled.

Any deputy, before entering upon the performance of such duties, shall give to the Commonwealth a bond in the penalty of fifty thousand dollars, with two or more individual sureties, or a corporate surety, to be approved by the Governor, conditioned for the faithful performance of such duties while he is acting as commissioner.

Note.—The first paragraph of this clause is modeled on the Act of March 22, 1917, P. L. 11, which relates to all departments, and is included here for the sake of completeness. The second paragraph is new.

(d) The Commissioner of Banking, with the approval of the Governor, shall employ from time to time such clerks, examiners, special agents and other employees as he may need to discharge in a proper manner the duties imposed upon him by law. They shall perform such duties as the commissioner shall assign to them, and their compensation shall be fixed by him with the approval of the Governor. Each of such employees shall take, subscribe and file the oath of office as herein prescribed for the commissioner and deputy commissioners. Bonds shall be given to the Commonwealth by such of said employees, in such amounts and with such surety as may be determined by the commissioner, conditioned for the faithful performance of their duties.

Note.—Under Section 2 of the Act of 1895, as modified by the following acts: April 8, 1903 (P. L. 159, Section 1; 4 Purd. 4360); March 7, 1905 (P. L. 33, Section 1; 6 Purd. 7467); June 1, 1907 (P. L. 385, Section 1; 5 Purd. 5346); May 13, 1909 (P. L. 536, Section 1; 6 Purd. 7467); May 13, 1909 (P. L. 537, Section 1; 6 Purd. 7467); May 23, 1913 (P. L. 334, Section 1; 5 Purd. 5346); April 26, 1917 (P. L. 101); and May 29, 1917 (P. L. 311), the commissioner is authorized to employ a chief clerk, six clerks, three stenographers, a messenger and not more than twenty examiners. The salaries of all employees are fixed by the statutes.

This new clause, which involves the repeal of said supplemental laws, leaves the entire matter of the number, duties and compensation of the clerks, examiners and other employees of the department to the commissioner and the governor. A similar plan has been in force in New York for some time and is also embodied in the California and Missouri banking codes. The Commissioners are informed that the plan has greatly increased the efficiency of the banking departments to which it has been applied.

(e) The cost of all bonds required by this section to be given by the commissioner, the deputy commissioners or any of the clerks, examiners or other employees of the banking department shall constitute expenses of the department and shall be paid as is hereinafter provided for such expenses.

Note.—This clause is new.

(f) Neither the Commissioner of Banking nor any of his deputies, clerks, examiners or other employees shall be interested as officer, director, trustee, manager or stockholder in any corporation subject to the supervision of the banking department, nor interested in any way in the business of any person subject to such supervision.

No deputy commissioner or examiner shall be appointed special deputy to assist in the liquidation of any corporation or person whose books, papers and affairs he shall have examined within one year previous to the taking of possession by the commissioner of banking under the provisions of Section 21 of this act.

No examiner shall receive a loan, nor shall the commissioner of banking or any of his deputies, clerks, examiners or other employees receive a gift, directly or indirectly, of any sum of money or other valuable thing, from any corporation or person to whom this act applies, or from any director, officer or employee thereof; and a violation of this prohibition shall constitute ground for the removal of such commissioner, deputy, clerk, examiner or other employee.

Note.—The first part of this clause is derived in part from the last sentence of Section 2 of the Act of 1895 extended to include all officers and employees of the department and to apply to individuals, partnerships and unincorporated associations as well as corporations. The remainder of the clause is new.

Section 6. All powers, rights, privileges and duties heretofore by any law of this Commonwealth conferred or imposed upon the Auditor General or the Secretary of the Commonwealth in relation to any of the corporations or persons who, under the provisions of this act, are subject to the supervision of the banking department, are hereby transferred to, and conferred and imposed upon, the Commissioner of Banking, so far as the same relate to the supervision of such corporations and persons for the purposes of this act.

Note.—This takes the place of Section 10 of the Act of 1895.

Section 7. All books, papers, records and securities, which were formerly in the office of the superintendent of banking and in the office of the Auditor General, relating to the business of corporations and persons subject to the supervision of the commissioner of banking, and which were delivered and transferred to the Commissioner of Banking, shall be and remain in his charge and custody.

Note.—This takes the place of Section 14 of the Act of 1895.

Section 8. There shall be assigned to the Commissioner of Banking by the commissioners of public grounds and buildings a suitable room or rooms, at the capital of the state, for conducting the business of the banking department; and the commissioner of banking shall, from time to time, with the approval of the commissioners aforesaid, procure the necessary furniture and other proper conveniences for the transacting of the said business, the expenses of which shall be paid, on the certificate of the Commissioner of Banking and the warrant of the Auditor General, out of the funds appropriated to the commissioners of public grounds and buildings.

Note.—This re-enacts Section 15 of the Act of 1895, with the following changes: The words "at the capital of the state" are inserted; the word "stationery" is omitted after "furniture," and the words after "auditor general" are added. These changes harmonize the section with the provisions of Section 9 of the present draft.

Section 9 (a) The expenses of the banking department shall, until the first day of June, 1919, be paid by the state, on requisition of the commissioner of banking and warrant of the Auditor General, out of funds appropriated therefor.

From and after the date of the approval of this Act, all moneys derived by the banking department from fees, assessments, charges, penalties and otherwise, shall be paid by the Commissioner of Banking into the state treasury for safe-keeping, and shall by the State Treasurer be placed in a separate fund, to be available for the use of the banking department upon requisition of the commissioner of banking. All such moneys so paid into the state treasury are hereby specifically appropriated to the banking department for the purpose of paying the salaries of the commissioner, the deputy commissioner, the examiners and the other employees of the department and the expenses of the department, including the rental of such rooms or quarters as the commissioner of banking may deem necessary outside of the capital.

The Auditor General shall upon requisition of the Commissioner of Banking from time to time draw warrants upon the State Treasurer for the amounts specified in such requisitions, not exceeding, however, the amount in such fund at the time of the making of any such requisition.

Note.—This and the next clause provide a new method for paying the expenses of the banking department.

The first paragraph of clause (a) is introduced to cover the hiatus which would otherwise be produced.

The second and third paragraphs are modeled upon Section 10 of the Automobile Act of July 7, 1913, P. L. 672, 5 Purd. 5315, the constitutionality of which was sustained by the supreme court in Comm. vs. Powell, 249 Pa. 145.

(b) All the expenses incurred in and about the conduct of the business of the banking department, including the cost of the regular examinations of corporations and persons under the supervision of the department, the compensation of the commissioner, deputy commissioners, examiners and other employees of the department, but excluding the furniture and conveniences mentioned in Section 8 of this act, together with all other general or overhead expenses of the department, shall be charged to and paid by the corporations and persons subject to the supervision of the department, in such proportions, at such times and in such manner as the commissioner of banking shall by general rule or regulation annually prescribe.

The expenses incurred in connection with any special examination or investigation of any corporation or person, including a proportionate part of the salary of any examiner or other employee of the department engaged in such examination or investigation, shall be charged to and paid by such corporation or person.

On failure or refusal of any such corporation or person, after thirty days' written notice, to pay any sum lawfully assessed or charged against it or him by the commissioner under the provisions of this clause, the commissioner may, at his option, bring an action at law to recover the same, or may take possession of the business and property of such corporation or person as provided in Section 21 of this act.

Note.—This clause takes the place of the latter part of Section 4 of the Act of 1895, as amended by the Act of May 29, 1901, P. L. 348, 1 Purd. 411, which imposes a fixed rate of charges against corporations under the supervision of the department.

The plan provided by the present section will make the department self-supporting; by empowering the commissioner to fix and collect from the institutions under his supervision an annual ratable assessment to cover the general or overhead expenses of the department, and, from each institution, the special expenses involved in services rendered to that institution by way of special examinations and investigations.

A similar plan has operated successfully in New York for some years and has been adopted in Missouri.

Section 10. The seal now in use by the commissioner of banking shall continue to be the seal of the office of the commissioner of banking, and may be renewed when necessary. A description of the seal with the impression thereof, and a certificate of approval of the Governor, shall remain on file in the office of Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Note.—This takes the place of Section 18 of the Act of 1895.

Section 11 (a) Copies of all books, accounts, reports and other papers or documents filed in the office of the banking department, certified under the hand and seal of the commissioner of banking, shall be admitted to be read in evidence in all courts of law and elsewhere in this Commonwealth, in all cases where the originals would be admitted in evidence: Provided, That in any proceeding, the court having jurisdiction may, on cause shown, require the production of the originals.

Note.—This clause is founded upon Section 1 of the Act of March 7, 1889, P. L. 9, 2 Purd. 1510, relating to the insurance department, and Section 1 of the Act of March 31, 1823, P. L. 233, 2 Purd. 1508, relating to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, Auditor General and State Treasurer. The proviso is new.

(b) For every copy of any paper filed in the banking department, and for the certification thereof, except when such copy or certification is made for the benefit of a corporation or person subject to the supervision of the department under the provisions of this act, the commissioner may charge such fees as he may by general rule or regulation prescribe.

Note.—This clause is new.

(c) In any proceeding under the provisions of this act, a copy, duly certified by the commissioner, of a duly instituted examination of the corporation or person involved in such proceeding, shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated.

Note.—This is a new clause, intended to facilitate proof in such proceedings.

Section 12. Neither the Commissioner of Banking nor any deputy, examiner or employee of the banking department shall, directly or indirectly, wilfully exhibit, publish, divulge or make known to any person or persons any record, report, statement, letter or other matter, fact or thing contained in said department, or ascertained from any of the same, or from any examination made under the provisions of this act, excepting in such manner as is expressly authorized by this act, and excepting when the production of such information in a proceeding in any court is duly required by subpoena, issued by special order of the court, or other legal process; and any violation of the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor, upon conviction whereof the person so offending shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, and shall be dismissed from his employment in said department: Provided, however, That the Commissioner of Banking, on the written request or consent of any corporation, authorized by resolution of its board of directors, or on the written request or consent of any person, under the supervision of the banking department, may discuss with an advisory committee selected by the commissioner such matters relating to the financial condition of such corporation or person as the commissioner may deem pertinent to the rehabilitation thereof: And provided further, That the commissioner may, on like request or consent, furnish to the Federal Reserve Board or to the Federal Reserve Bank of the district in which the banking house or other place of business of any corporation is located, copies of any reports or parts thereof, or any information in his possession, relating to such corporation, for the use of said Board or Bank.

Note.—This is derived from Section 16 of the Act of 1895, with the addition of the two provisos and of the exception as to divulging information on subpoena, which is declaratory of the present law as interpreted by the Attorney General: 37 Pa. C. C. 435. And see, Atty. Gen. Rep. 1907-8, 147; 1891-2, 495, 114; 1905-6, 163.

Section 13. Every corporation and person included within the supervision of the banking department as set forth in Section 4 of this act, together with all the property, assets and resources of such corporation or person, shall be subject to inspection and examination by the Commissioner of Banking or his deputies or any qualified examiner of the said department, when such examiner is authorized, in writing, under the official seal of the department, by the commissioner or a deputy commissioner, to make such examination and inspection.

Note.—This is derived from Section 3 of the Act of 1895.

Section 14 (a) It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Banking, at least twice in each year, to examine or cause to be examined the books, papers and affairs of each and every state bank, trust company and private banker subject to supervision by the banking department and, at least once in each year, the books, papers and affairs of each and every other corporation and person subject to such supervision. The commissioner may also, at any time, make such special investigations or examinations as, in his opinion, the exigencies of any case may require. Whenever he shall deem it necessary or proper, he shall assign a qualified examiner or examiners to make any such examination or investigation, which examiner or examiners shall have power to make a thorough examination into all the business and affairs of the corporation or person in all departments, and of all property, assets and resources wherever situated, and, in so doing, to examine, under oath or otherwise, any of the officers, agents or employees of a corporation or unincorporated association, any member, agent or employee of a partnership, any individual or private banker, any agent or employee of an individual or private banker, or any corporation or person in possession of any assets of the corporation or person under examination. The examiner or examiners shall make a full and detailed report of the condition of the corporation or person under examination, or such special report as may be directed by the commissioner.

Note.—This takes the place of the first sentence of Section 4 of the Act of 1895. It is changed by requiring at least two examinations a year of state banks, trust companies and private bankers, and at least one examination a year of all other corporations and persons under the supervision of the department. It also provides for special examinations and investigations whenever the commissioner deems them necessary.

The provision as to visitatorial power, added by the amendment of May 29, 1901, P. L. 345, which was the same in substance as Section 11 of the Act of 1895, has, like that section, been omitted as no longer necessary or appropriate, the apparent purpose of those provisions having been to remove any doubts as to the transfer to the Commissioner of Banking of all visitatorial powers previously vested in the Auditor General.

(b) The commissioner and his deputies and any qualified examiner appointed by the commissioner are hereby authorized and empowered to administer oaths or affirmations to any of the individuals enumerated in clause (a) of this section, and any wilful false swearing in any inquiry thereunder shall be perjury, and subject, upon conviction thereof, to the same punishment as is or may be provided by law for the punishment of perjury. Upon failure of any of the individuals aforesaid to make answer to any such inquiry, the Attorney General, upon the request of the Commissioner of Banking, shall make information thereof to the court, whereupon said court, after hearing, shall make such order as occasion requires.

Note.—This is a virtual re-enactment of the second and third sentences of Section 4 of the Act of 1895. The changes are the insertion of the words "or affirmations," and the omission of the words "of common pleas of the county of Dauphin," after "court."

The last three sentences of Section 4 of the Act of 1895 are covered by Section 9 of this draft.

Section 15 (a) Every corporation and person subject to the supervision of the banking department, except building and loan associations doing business exclusively within this state, shall make and render to the Commissioner of Banking not less than two nor more than five reports of its or his condition during each year. The number, form and manner of such reports shall be prescribed by the commissioner by general rule or regulation. Every such report shall be verified by the oath or affirmation of the president, cashier, treasurer or other managing officer in the case of a corporation or association, by a member of the firm in the case of a partnership, and by an individual banker in person. It shall be attested as correct by the signatures of at least three of the directors, trustees or other managers of a corporation or association, and by the signatures of all the members of a partnership.

Each such report shall exhibit, in detail and under appropriate heads, the resources and liabilities of the corporation, or person at the close of business on any past day specified by the commissioner, and shall be transmitted to him within five days, or such further time as he may in his discretion allow, after the receipt of a request or requisition therefor from him.

Abstract summaries of two of said reports, designated by the commissioner, in each year, except the reports of building and loan associations doing business exclusively within this state, shall forthwith be published by the corporation or person in a newspaper, and proof of such publication, verified by affidavit, shall be furnished to the Commissioner of Banking.

Building and loan associations doing business exclusively within this state shall, in the manner hereinbefore provided, make and render one report during each year. No abstract summaries of such reports need be published.

The commissioner shall also have power to call for a special report from any corporation or person under the supervision of the banking department, including building and loan associations, whenever, in his judgment, the same may be necessary to a full and complete knowledge of its or his condition.

The reports and publications provided for in this clause shall be in lieu of all reports and of all publications for similar purposes heretofore required by law to be made.

Note.—The two clauses of this section take the place of Section 5 of the Act of 1895 as amended by the Act of June 24, 1895, P. L. 235, 1 Purd. 1412.

In the present clause, the changes are, to make it include persons as well as corporations, to fix a maximum of five reports a year, and to require publication of abstract summaries of two of the reports, only one publication, however, being necessary instead of three.

No change is made as regards building and loan associations.

(b) Any corporation or person failing to make and transmit any report, to publish any report required by this act to be published, or to furnish any proof of publication required by clause (a) of this section shall be subject, at the discretion of the Commissioner of Banking, to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars, payable to the Commissioner of Banking, for each day after the time, or any extension thereof, fixed for filing such report, making such publication or furnishing such proof. In case of failure or refusal to pay such penalty, the Commissioner of Banking may maintain an action at law to recover the same.

Note.—The penalty is increased from $20 to not more than $100 a day.

Section 16. The Commissioner of Banking shall make an annual report to the Governor setting forth:

I. A summary of the state and condition of every corporation and person from whom reports have been received during the preceding year, which such other information in relation to said corporations and persons as in his judgment may be useful.

II. A statement of the corporations and persons under the supervision of the banking department, whose business has been closed or taken in possession by the commissioner during the preceding year, with such information relating thereto as he may deem useful.

III. Suggestions of amendments to the laws relating to corporations and persons under the supervision of the banking department by which the condition of such corporations and persons may be improved.

IV. The names and compensation of the deputies, examiners, clerks and other employees of the banking department during the preceding year, the whole amount of the receipts and expenditures of the department during such year, and the method and basis of assessing such expenditures adopted by the commissioner under the provisions of this act.

Note.—This is derived from Section 12 of the Act of 1895, with the following changes: The addition in clause II of the words "and persons," and the words "or taken in possession," and the substitution in clause III of the words "the condition of such corporations and persons may be improved" for "the laws may be improved and the security of creditors and depositors may be increased."

Clause IV has been altered to conform to the scheme of the present draft. The Act of 1895 required a statement of "the names and compensation of the clerks and other employees and assistants employed by him, and the whole amount of the expenses of the banking department during the year, and also of the revenue received by the state under this act."

Section 17. *When any corporation under the supervision of the banking department: (a) has not paid in the capital as required by law; (b) has not in any manner exercised the powers conferred upon it by its letters patent within two years after the issuance thereof; or (c) has failed to exercise its corporate privileges for two years after having been liquidated, such corporation shall be returned by the Commissioner of Banking to the Attorney General, who shall proceed by quo warranto against such corporation, to the end that it may be ousted from its charter rights and its corporate privileges be declared null and void.

Note.—This is derived from the Act of April 23, 1909, P. L. 143, 5 Purd. 5342, with slight changes in the wording.

Section 18. Whenever it shall appear to the Commissioner of Banking, from any report of condition of any corporation subject to the supervision of the banking department, or from any examination made by him of the condition of the affairs of such corporation, that such corporation has committed any violation of its charter, he shall, by an order under his hand and seal of office, direct the discontinuance of such illegal practice and direct strict conformity with the provisions of the charter; and whenever any such corporation shall refuse or neglect to comply with any such order, the commissioner shall communicate the facts to the Attorney General, who shall thereupon institute such proceedings as the nature of the case may require, for appropriate relief or correction, may proceed by quo warranto for forfeiture of the charter.

The court before which such proceedings shall be instituted shall have power to grant such orders, and in its discretion, from time to time, modify or revoke the same, and to grant such relief and render such judgment as the facts or evidence in the case and the situation of the parties and the interests involved shall require, or, if it shall appear to the said court that the interests of the public so require, shall decree a dissolution of such corporation and a distribution of its effects.

Note.—This is derived from Section 7 of the Act of 1895, which, however, relates only to corporations not having capital stock and doing business exclusively for the benefit of the depositors, and includes violations of the law or the doing of business in an unsafe and unauthorized manner. Those matters are covered by later sections of this draft, but it has been considered proper to retain the procedure prescribed by Section 7 for the one case of violation of its charter by any corporation under the supervision of the department.

Section 19. Whenever it shall become the right or duty of the Attorney General to proceed against any corporation or person under the supervision of the banking department, pursuant to the provisions of this act, he may, in his discretion, proceed either in the court of common pleas of Dauphin County or in the court of common pleas of the county where the banking house or other place of business of such corporation or person is located.

Note.—This is derived from the Act of April 22, 1905, P. L. 233, 5 Purd. 5342, with some changes in wording.

Section 20. Whenever it shall appear to the Commissioner of Banking that any corporation or person under the supervision of the banking department has violated any provision of this act or any law regulating the business of such corporation or person, or is conducting business in an unauthorized or unsafe manner, or that any such corporation has an impairment of capital, the commissioner may issue an order under his hand and seal of office, directing such corporation or person to discontinue such violation of law, or such unauthorized or unsafe practices, or directing such corporation to make good any impairment or deficiency of capital, as the case may be, within a time to be fixed by the commissioner.

Note.—This section is new. It is, in part, suggested by some of the provisions of Sections 6 and 7 of the Act of 1895.

Section 21 (a) The Commissioner of Banking may forthwith take possession of the business and property of any corporation or person subject to the supervision of the Banking Department, whenever it shall appear to him that such corporation or person:

1. Has violated any law regulating its or his business, and has persisted in such violation in disregard of an order duly made by the commissioner:

2. Is conducting business in an unauthorized or unsafe manner, and has persisted therein in disregard of an order duly made by the commissioner;
3. Is in an unsafe or unsound condition to continue business;
4. Cannot with safety or expediency continue business;
5. Has an impairment of capital, which has not been restored or made good within the time fixed by order of the commissioner;
6. Has suspended payment of obligations;
7. Has neglected or refused to comply with the terms of any duly issued order of the commissioner;
8. Has refused, upon proper demand, to submit the records and affairs of the business to the commissioner, a deputy commissioner or any duly authorized examiner or agent of the Banking Department;
9. Has refused to be examined upon oath or affirmation regarding such affairs; or
10. Has failed or refused, after thirty days' notice, to pay any assessment or charge, as provided in this act.

Note.—This and the following sections take the place of Sections 6 to 9 of the Act of 1895 and Sections 26 to 29. of the Act of May 13, 1876, P. L. 161, except so far as Section 7 of the Act of 1895 is covered by Section 17 of the present draft.

The present clause provides for the taking of possession by the commissioner instead of proceedings in court by the Attorney General for dissolution of the corporation or the appointment of a receiver. It is recommended as being a more expeditious and economical method of protecting the interests of the depositors.

(b) Upon written complaint, signed by any one claiming to have been aggrieved through any of the first six causes mentioned in clause (a) of this section, and stating the true residence or place of business of the signer, it shall be the duty of the commissioner forthwith to cause to be made such special examination or investigation of, or to call for such special report from, the corporation or person in question, as may be necessary for the purpose of informing himself whether the case is one requiring action by him under the provisions of this act.

Anyone, without cause, maliciously invoking the action of the commissioner under this clause, shall be liable to the corporation or person in question in damages in a sum equal to double the injury actually sustained by such corporation or person.

Note.—The first paragraph is new. The second is suggested by Section 7 of the Insolvency Act of June 4, 1901, P. L. 404.

Section 22. When the commissioner shall have duly taken possession of the business and property of a corporation or person as provided in Section 21 of this act, he shall forthwith make, under his hand and official seal, a certificate setting forth that he has so taken possession, and shall file such certificate in his office and cause a certified copy thereof to be filed in the office of the prothonotary, who shall index the same in the judgment index under the name of the corporation or person as defendant and the name of the Commissioner of Banking as plaintiff.

From and after the filing of such certified copy in the office of the prothonotary, the commissioner shall supersede any receiver previously appointed by any court for, or any assignee or trustee for creditors appointed by, such corporation or person.

Such superseded receiver, assignee or trustee shall forthwith file his account in the court having jurisdiction thereof and pay over and deliver to the Commissioner of Banking all moneys, securities, assets and property of such corporation or person in his custody, possession or control. Said court shall allow credit for expenses and for the disbursements properly incurred or made prior to the taking of possession by the Commissioner of Banking, and shall allow proper compensation to said receiver, assignee or trustee and his counsel, which, when determined, shall be paid out of the funds of said corporation or person in the hands of the Commissioner of Banking.

Note.—The first paragraph is new, and provides for record notice of the taking of possession by the commissioner. The remainder of the section is substituted for Sections 1 and 2 of the Act of April 23, 1909, P. L. 167, 5 Purd. 5344, relating to receivers appointed at the instance of the Commissioner of Banking, and is a necessary part of the plan to have the commissioner control the liquidation in all cases.

Section 23. Whenever the Commissioner of Banking takes possession of the property and business of any corporation or person, such corporation or person may, at any time within ten days, apply to the court for an order requiring the commissioner to show cause why he should not be enjoined from continuing such possession. The commissioner may be served personally wherever found within the state, by leaving a copy with the deputy in charge of his office, or by serving the special deputy appointed by him in such proceeding. At the hearing, a copy, certified by the commissioner, of any report of a duly instituted examination of such corporation or person shall be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated; and if, from such report or reports, or other evidence, there shall appear to be just cause for the taking and continuing of possession by the commissioner, he shall not be enjoined, unless such report or reports or other evidence shall be overcome by proper proof produced by such corporation or person, in which event the court shall direct the commissioner to refrain from further proceedings and to surrender such possession.

Note.—This section is new, and is designed to afford protection against oppressive action by the commissioner.

Section 24. The commissioner may, by the certificate of taking possession, provided for in Section 22 of this Act, or by a subsequent certificate in like manner made and filed, appoint one or more special deputies as agent or agents to assist him in continuing or liquidating the business and affairs of any corporation or person in his possession. He may, from time to time, delegate to such special deputy or deputies such duties connected with such continuation or liquidation as he may deem proper. He may employ such expert assistants and may retain such of the officers and employees of such corporation or person as he may deem necessary in the continuation of the business or the liquidation and distribution of the assets. He shall require such security as he may deem proper from his agents and assistants appointed pursuant to the provisions of this section.

Note.—This is a new section. No provision is included for the appointment of counsel by the commissioner, since all such matters are referred to the Attorney General, under the Act of June 7, 1915 (P. L. 876).

Section 25. When the commissioner shall have taken possession of the property and business of any such corporation or person, he shall forthwith give notice in writing of such fact to all corporations and persons holding any assets thereof. No one having such notice or actual knowledge that the commissioner has so taken possession shall have a lien or charge against any of the assets of such corporation or person for any payment, advance or clearance thereafter made or liability thereafter incurred.

Note.—These new provisions accord with the general plan that the commissioner shall act as a receiver.

Section 26. After the commissioner has taken possession as aforesaid, he shall make, or cause to be made, a complete inventory of the assets of such corporation or person, which inventory shall be verified by oath or affirmation and certified by an executive officer in the case of a corporation or association, by a member of the firm in the case of a partnership, and by an individual banker in person. The commissioner shall forthwith file such inventory in his office.

Note.—This new section is intended for the protection of the commissioner. No appraisal is required at this stage of the proceedings, and it is not required that a copy of the inventory be filed in the office of the prothonotary. Should the commissioner determine not to liquidate, such filing might work injury to the institution; and if liquidation proceeds, the filing of the statement of assets and liabilities required by Section 38 of this draft will answer all purposes.

Section 27. The commissioner is authorized, upon taking possession of the property and business of such corporation or person, to continue or suspend the business for such period as he may deem necessary to enable him to determine whether to liquidate the affairs of such corporation or person, and, during such period, to take such action as in his judgment is necessary to conserve the assets and business.

Note.—This is new. Together with Section 28, it provides means for the rehabilitation of an institution.

Section 28. The commissioner may, upon conditions approved by him, surrender possession for the purpose of permitting such corporation or person to resume business, to sell or convey its or his property and franchises, or to merge or consolidate its or his business with that of another corporation or person in accordance with the laws of this Commonwealth; but he shall not authorize any decrease of capital stock by a corporation except upon compliance with the laws relating to the decrease of the capital stock of such corporations.

Whenever the commissioner shall surrender possession under the provisions of this section, he shall forthwith issue an order under his official seal authorizing such corporation or person to resume business, to sell or convey its or his property and franchises, or to merge or consolidate as aforesaid, and shall file said order in his office and cause a certified copy thereof to be filed in the office of the prothonotary, who shall thereupon cause the entries upon the judgment index made pursuant to section 22 of this act to be canceled.

Note.—This, together with Section 27, enables the commissioner to prevent the failure of a bank which, though temporarily embarrassed, is not actually insolvent.

Section 29. Except as herein otherwise provided, the commissioner shall, when he has taken possession of the business and property of a corporation or person, have all the rights, powers and duties of a receiver appointed by any court of equity in this Commonwealth; and he shall be vested, in his official capacity, with all the property of such corporation or person, including debts due, liens or securities therefor, and rights of action or redemption.

He shall be the representative of the creditors of the corporation or person and entitled, as such, to have vacated and set aside for the benefit of the creditors, any judgment, execution, attachment, sequestration, payment, pledge, assignment, transfer, conveyance or incumbrance which could have been avoided by the creditors or any of them, or by which it is attempted to give any creditor unlawful preference over another.

He may, with leave of court, obtained on petition after notice to all creditors of whom he has knowledge, surrender to the corporation or person any assets, including choses in action, whether the subject of pending proceedings or not, which are burdensome and of no advantage to creditors.

Note.—This section is partly modeled upon Section 17 of the Insolvency Act of 1901. The matter of judgments and executions is further treated in Section 36 of this draft.

The last paragraph is suggested by the procedure in bankruptcy.

Section 30. The court having jurisdiction shall have power to make and enforce any and all orders necessary and appropriate to enable the commissioner of banking to discharge his duties in connection with the business, property and affairs of any corporation or person taken into possession by the commissioner under the provisions of this act.

Note.—This section is inserted to vest in the courts full power to aid the commissioner in carrying out the provisions of the act.

Section 31. When the Commissioner of Banking shall have duly taken possession of the business and property of a corporation or person as provided in Section 21 of this act, he shall hold such possession until the affairs of such corporation or person have been liquidated by him, unless:

I. He shall have been directed by order of court to surrender such possession pursuant to the provisions of Section 23 of this act;

II. He shall have permitted a resumption of business or a sale or conveyance of property and franchises, or a merger or consolidation pursuant to the provisions of Section 28 of this act;

III. The stockholders of such corporation, after payment of all creditors in full, shall have elected a trustee or trustees to continue the liquidation of such corporation, or the court shall have appointed such trustee or trustees, pursuant to the provisions of Section 50 of this act, and such trustee or trustees shall have duly qualified to take possession of the remaining assets of such corporation; or.

IV. The depositors and other creditors of such person and the expenses of such liquidation shall have been paid in full.

Note.—This summarizes the cases in which the commissioner's possession may terminate without complete liquidation.

Section 32 (a) When the Commissioner of Banking has taken possession of the business and property of a corporation or person he shall, if there be, any real property, file in the office of the recorder of deeds in each county of this state, or with the proper official in any other state or country, where any of such real property shall be situated, a certified copy of the certificate required by Section 22 of this act, which copy shall be recorded in the deed book and indexed in the grantor's index in the name of such corporation or person and in the grantee's index in the name of the Commissioner of Banking, and shall also be registered with the proper authorities empowered to keep a register of real estate, if any there be. And when the commissioner has surrendered possession of the business and property of a corporation or person he shall in the same manner file a certified copy of the order provided for by Section 28 of this act, which shall be in like manner recorded, shall be indexed in the name of the Commissioner of Banking as grantor and in the name of such corporation or person as grantee, and shall also be registered as aforesaid.

(b) The commissioner may sell at public sale any or all of the real and personal property of such corporation or person without any order of court. He may, with leave of court, sell either real or personal property at private sale. At least ten days' notice of any petition for leave to sell at private sale shall be given to all stockholders of such corporation, or to such person, and to all creditors known to the commissioner; and such notice shall also be advertised at least once in a newspaper in the county where the banking house or other place of business is located and, when the land is situated in a different county, at least once in a newspaper published in the latter county.

(c) When any real property of such corporation or person is situated in a county other than that where the banking house or other place of business is located, a petition for leave to sell such property at private sale shall be filed in the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings, which court, if satisfied of the propriety of such sale, shall make an order or decree, authorizing the commissioner to sell such real property or so much thereof as the court may designate. Thereupon it shall be the duty of the court of common pleas of the county wherein the real property so designated is situated, on petition of the commissioner, to make an order for the sale of said property or so much thereof as the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings shall have designated; and the commissioner shall in all cases make a return of the sale to the court of the county in which the real property is situated. If the same be approved by said court, it shall be confirmed and a certified copy of the return and of the decree of confirmation shall be filed in the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings.

(d) Listed securities may be sold on the stock exchange with leave of court, obtained on petition of the commissioner, at such time or times and in such manner as may be determined by the court. No notice to creditors of such petition shall be necessary unless required by the court.

(e) When any real property of such corporation or person is subject to liens which under the laws of this Commonwealth would be discharged by a judicial sale, the same shall not be affected by a sale by the commissioner unless such sale be made pursuant to an order of court directing that liens be discharged thereby, and after notice to all creditors having or claiming liens; and in such event, the proceeds of the sale shall take the place of the property sold, and be distributed to the parties entitled thereto.

If such real property is situated in a county other than that where the banking house or other place of business is located, a petition for leave to sell discharged of liens shall be filed in the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings, which court, if satisfied of the propriety of such sale, shall make an order of decree authorizing the same; and thereupon it shall be the duty of the court of common pleas of the county where such property is situated to make an order for the sale thereof, discharged of liens. Return of such sale shall be made to the latter court. If the sale be approved by that court, it shall be confirmed and a certified copy of the return and of the decree of confirmation shall be filed in the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings, which court shall also make distribution of the proceeds of such sale to the parties entitled thereto.

Note.—This section is derived in part from Sections 18 and 19 of the Insolvency Act of 1901. Clause (a) is intended to preserve the continuity in the record chain of title, and is similar to the method provided by the bankruptcy act.

Section 33. The commissioner may execute, acknowledge and deliver any and all deeds, assignments, bills of sale, releases, extensions, satisfactions, and other instruments necessary and proper to effectuate any sale, lease or transfer of real or personal property or to carry into effect any power conferred or duty imposed upon him by this act or by order of court. Any instrument executed pursuant to the authority hereby given shall be as valid and effectual for all purposes as though the same had been executed by the officers of such corporation by authority of its board of directors, or by such person individually.

Note.—This is in conformity with the general plan to give the commissioner the powers of a receiver.

Section 34. The commissioner may, with leave of court, compound or compromise any debt or claim due to the corporation or person, and discontinue any action or other proceeding pending therefor, if done in good faith and after proper inquiry; and, upon payment of the amount due, may require all mortgages, conditional contracts, pledges and liens, of or upon any real or personal property of such corporation or person, to be satisfied, cancelled, or assigned to him, as he may deem best, or he may sell the property subject thereto.

Note.—This is derived from Section 19 of the Insolvency Act of 1901.

Section 35. For the purpose of executing any of the powers and performing any of the duties hereby conferred and imposed upon him, the commissioner may, in the name of the corporation or person, prosecute and defend any and all actions and proceedings at law, in equity or otherwise, pending at the time when the commissioner takes possession of the business and property of such corporation or person.

He may, by bill of discovery or other legal or equitable proceeding, obtain information of, and sue for and recover, any assets, debts or damages which such corporation or person might sue for and recover, or which any of the creditors might make available for the payment of their claims.

He may, at any time while he is in possession of the property and business of a corporation, institute and maintain, against the directors, trustees, managers or officers, any action or proceeding which is vested in such corporation or in the stockholders or creditors thereof.

He shall be liable to suit, in his representative capacity, by any person seeking to recover specific property, if such property could have been recovered as against the creditors of the corporation or person levying an execution thereon.

Note.—This is founded on Section 17 of the Insolvency Act of 1901, with some additions.

Section 36. A lien shall not attach to any of the property or assets of the corporation or person by reason of the entry of any judgment against such corporation or person after the commissioner has taken possession of its or his property and business and filed a certificate as required by Section 22 of this act, and so long as such possession continues.

During such time, no execution or attachment shall issue against such corporation or person nor shall any pending execution or attachment be proceeded with, except by special leave of the court.

Note.—This also conforms to the general idea of a receivership.

Section 37. Whenever the stockholders of a corporation whereof the commissioner shall have taken possession are liable in double the amount of the value of the stock held by them, and the commissioner has determined from his examination of the affairs of the corporation that the reasonable value of its assets is not sufficient to pay its creditors in full, he may enforce the individual liability of such stockholders to such extent as may be necessary.

If he determines to enforce such liability, he shall make demand in writing upon such stockholders by causing the same to be mailed by registered mail to the respective stockholders at their last known places of address as the same appear on the stock ledger of the corporation, or at their last known addresses if no addresses appear in such ledger. Such demand shall state the total amount assessed by the commissioner against the stockholders and the pro rata share assessed against the particular stockholder addressed, and the total sum to be paid by such stockholder. The demand shall also fix a date not less than thirty days after the date of such demand, on which the stockholders shall be required to pay such assessment to the commissioner.

If any stockholder shall fail or refuse to pay such assessment within such time, the commissioner shall have a cause of action either at law or in equity against such stockholder, either severally or jointly with other stockholders, for the amount of such assessment, together with interest from the date when the same was due and payable. In any such action, the written statement of the commissioner, under his hand and seal of office, reciting his determination to enforce the individual liability, or any part thereof, of such stockholders, and setting forth the value of the assets of the corporation and its liabilities, as determined by him after examination and investigation, shall be prima facie evidence of such facts as therein stated.

Note.—This provides a method of procedure for enforcement by the commissioner of the individual liability of stockholders, where such liability exists.

Section 38. When the commissioner of banking has determined to liquidate the affairs of any such corporation or person, he shall forthwith cause an inventory and appraisal of the assets of such corporation or person, under oath or affirmation, to be made in duplicate by two disinterested appraisers chosen by him, and shall file such inventories and appraisements, accompanied in each instance by a complete statement, certified by him, of the liabilities of such corporation or person so far as he has been able to ascertain the same, one in his office and the other in the office of the prothonotary.

Note.—This section is new.

Section 39. After taking possession as aforesaid, the commissioner may give written notice to anyone claiming, or appearing on the books of the corporation or person to be, owner of any personal property left in the possession of such corporation or person as bailee or depository for hire, or the lessee of any safe, vault or box, notifying such bailor or lessee to remove all such personal property within a period of not less than sixty days.

At the expiration of such period, if such property has not been removed, the commissioner may proceed as the corporation or person might have proceeded as provided in the contract of bailment or lease, or, at his option, may cause any such safe, vault or box to be opened in his presence or the presence of his special deputy, and of a notary public not an officer or employee of the corporation or person or of the banking department, and the contents, if any, of such safe, vault or box to be sealed and marked by such notary with the name and address of the bailor or lessee in whose name such safe, vault or box stands upon the books of the corporation or person, and a list of the property therein to be attached thereto. Such package, so sealed and addressed, shall be removed by the commissioner to his office and there preserved until delivered to the owner or otherwise disposed of in accordance with law.

After the service or mailing of the notice as aforesaid, the contract of bailment or leasing, if any, shall cease and determine upon the date for removal fixed by said notice, and the amount of unearned rent or charges, if any, paid by the bailor or lessee, shall become a debt of the corporation or person. All contracts of bailment or lease, such as aforesaid, made after the date of the approval of this act, shall be subject to the provisions of this section.

Note.—This provides an expeditious method by which the commissioner may dispose of unclaimed property in safe-deposit boxes, etc., and vacate a building occupied by the corporation or person whose affairs are in his charge.

Section 40 (a). Whenever the Commissioner of Banking takes possession of the business and property of a corporation or person in accordance with the provisions of this act, he shall also take possession of all funds, property and investments held by such corporation or person in any fiduciary capacity, but shall keep the same separate and apart from the assets thereof.

(b). Upon determining to liquidate the affairs of such corporation or person, the commissioner shall forthwith give written notice to all parties interested in any such funds, property or investments held in a fiduciary capacity, so far as such notice is practicable, requiring them within thirty days to apply to the proper court or official for the appointment of substituted fiduciaries to take the place of such corporation as person. On the failure to neglect of the parties so notified to make such application within the time designated, or in case the parties in interest cannot be notified, the commissioner shall himself apply for such appointment of substituted fiduciaries.

(c). In any instance where there shall be no dispute as to the amount or identity of such funds, property or investments, and all parties in interest are sui juris and so request in writing, the commissioner may, without the filing of an account, transfer, pay over and deliver to such substituted fiduciary all funds, property and investments of the particular trust, taking from such parties and such substituted fiduciary a receipt and release in full, which shall discharge the commissioner and such corporation or person from any further liability in the premises.

(d). In any instance where there shall be a dispute as to the identity of alleged trust funds, property or investments, either because the same have become or are alleged to have become mingled with other funds, property or investments, or otherwise, the court having jurisdiction of the liquidation proceedings shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine such dispute.

(e). In all other instances, the commissioner shall, with the least possible delay, prepare and file in the courts having jurisdiction thereof the accounts of such corporation or person in such fiduciary capacities, and shall transfer, pay over and deliver the balances determined upon such accounts to be due in accordance with the orders and decrees of such courts.

(f). In any instance where it shall be ascertained by any such court that there is a deficiency in any such trust funds, property or investments for which such corporation or person is liable, or that such corporation or person is liable to surcharge in respect thereof, the amount thereof shall constitute an unpreferred claim against the general funds in the hands of the commissioner, and the order or decree of such court shall be conclusive, subject to appeal, as to the amount of such claim. Should the existence or amount of any such deficiency or surcharge or the liability of the corporation or person therefor be undetermined at the time of any distribution of such general funds, it shall be the duty of the court ordering such distribution to set apart and withhold from such distribution a sufficient amount to pay the proportionate dividend upon such undetermined claim until the same shall have been finally adjudicated.

Note.—This section is new and covers a subject not provided for by existing law. The method prescribed is intended to avoid delay in the disposition by the commissioner of trust property and to fix definitely the procedure and the respective jurisdictions of the courts supervising the trusts and of the court having supervision of the liquidation.

Section 41. When the commissioner shall have determined to liquidate the affairs of such corporation or person, he shall forthwith give written or printed notice to all depositors to produce to him their deposit or pass books for settlement, stating in such notice the amount which the books of the corporation or person show to be due to each depositor, subject to outstanding checks, and notifying such depositors that, unless a settlement of the deposit or pass books shall show a different amount to be due, or unless a depositor shall, within four months from the date of such notice, make proof in the manner hereinafter set forth that the amount due to him differs from the amount as shown by the books of the corporation or person, the amount last mentioned will be conclusive as to the amount of the claim of such depositor, subject, as aforesaid, to any outstanding checks.

The commissioner shall at the same time give written or printed notice to all creditors other than depositors, so far as known to him, to make proof of their claims in the manner hereinafter set forth, within four months from the date of such notice, or be debarred from coming in upon the fund.

He shall also advertise such notices to depositors and other creditors in a newspaper, once a week for four successive weeks.

Note.—This section is new. It follows to some extent Section 22 of the Insolvency Act of 1901.

Section 42. No claim other than the claim of a depositor shall be allowed unless the claimant, or someone for him if he cannot do so, shall furnish to the Commissioner of Banking a statement of his claim, together with a copy of any book entries pertaining thereto, or any note or other writing evidencing the same, verified by an affidavit in substantially the following form:

"I, (name of claimant), do solemnly swear (or affirm) that the above is a true statement of my claim against (name of corporation or person); that there are no credits or allowances against the same except as herein set forth; that I have not directly or indirectly made or entered into any bargain, arrangement or agreement, express or implied, to take or receive, directly or indirectly, any money, property or consideration whatever, to or for myself, or to or for any other person, firm or corporation whatever other than my dividend as a creditor; and that there is no collateral security for said indebtedness or any part thereof, held by me or by anyone else, other than as above set forth."

In case the claimant shall be a partnership or corporation, such affidavit shall be made by a member of the partnership or by the treasurer or assistant treasurer of the corporation claimant, and the form thereof shall be modified accordingly.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to the claims of cestuis que trust or others to or against trust funds or property in the custody, possession or control of a corporation or person, possession of whose business and property is taken by the Commissioner of Banking under the provisions of this act.

Note.—This section is modeled in part on Section 23 of the Insolvency Act of 1901. The last paragraph, and Section 40 of this draft, provide for the disposition of trust property.

Section 43. When proofs of claims by depositors are necessary under the provisions of Section 41 of this act, the same shall be in such form as the commissioner shall prescribe and shall, on request of any such depositor, be prepared by the special deputy in charge of the affairs of the corporation or person in question, and the affidavits thereto shall be taken by him without charge.

Note.—This affords to depositors a simple method of filing proofs of claim, without expense.

Section 44. If such claim and affidavit, when required, are in proper form, and if the amount claimed by a depositor or other creditor agrees with the amount shown by the books of the corporation or person, or if, upon consultation with the claimant and such corporation or person, the amount is ascertained to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Banking, the claim shall be allowed if presented within the time limited by the notice as aforesaid, unless objected to in the manner hereinafter provided.

Note.—This is modeled on Section 23 of the Insolvency Act of 1901.

Section 45. At the expiration of the time fixed by the notice and advertisement for the presentation of claims, prescribed in Section 41 of this act, the commissioner may file a partial or final account, consisting of a statement of receipt and expenditures, together with a list of the claims which have been allowed, and, separately, a list of the claims which have been objected to or are disputed, showing, as to all claimants, the names, addresses and amounts.

If no account is filed within a year from the time when the commissioner takes possession, any party interested may petition the court for an order on the commissioner requiring the filing of an account.

Any account filed by the commissioner shall be duly verified by him under oath or affirmation. Upon the filing thereof, he shall give written or printed notice to all the depositors and other creditors known to him of such filing and that unless objections shall be filed within thirty days from the date thereof, the same will be confirmed absolutely. He shall also, at the same time, advertise such notice in one newspaper and the legal journal, if any, designated by the court for the publication of legal notices, once a week for four successive weeks.

During such period of thirty days, any depositor, other creditor, stockholder or anyone having any interest, may file in the court of objections in writing to said account or to the allowance of any of said claims, a copy of which objections shall forthwith be served upon the claimant whose claim is objected to, or his counsel, and upon the Commissioner of Banking, or his counsel, or the special deputy appointed by him in such proceeding.

Note.—This section is new. It is partly founded on provisions of Sections 24 and 25 of the Insolvency Act of 1901.

Section 46. If, at the expiration of said period of thirty days from the filing of the account, no objections shall have been filed thereto, the same shall be confirmed absolutely and the commissioner shall prepare and file a schedule of distribution in accordance with the priorities fixed by law. Said schedule shall be subject to the approval of the court, and in accordance therewith, when so approved, a partial or final dividend, as the case may be, shall be declared and paid by the commissioner. In case there shall be any disputed claim or any claim to which objections shall have been duly filed, the dividend shall be calculated as if all claims were valid and approved, and, after deducting and setting apart such portion of the dividend as represents claims which are disputed or objected to, the balance shall be distributed among the other claims. If all or any of the claims disputed or objected to shall thereafter be determined to be valid, they shall then receive their portions of such dividend. If all or any of such claims shall be determined to be invalid, the portions of such dividend set apart to them shall be distributed to the valid claims.

Note.—This section is new. The purpose is to permit distribution, without the formalities and delay of court proceedings, so far as the claims are not disputed or objected to. The existing law as to priorities is not disturbed. The method of withholding a fund to meet claims disputed or objected to is similar to that in bankruptcy.

Section 47. The confirmation of a partial account and distribution thereunder as aforesaid shall be conclusive only as to the fund distributed, and shall not prevent the proof and allowance, out of the fund involved in any subsequent account, of claims not presented in time for allowance out of such previous fund.

Note.—This also is a new section. The plan is similar to that followed in the orphans' court and in bankruptcy.

Section 48. If there shall be claims disputed or objected to, or if there shall be objections to the account, the court shall itself, without delay, hear and decide the matters in controversy. The court shall fix a time and place for the hearing, of which three weeks' written notice shall be given to the Commissioner of Banking, and to the corporation or person and to all depositors and other creditors whose claims shall have been filed as aforesaid. Said notice shall also set forth that all parties whose claims are disputed or objected to must appear at said time and place and prove their claims or be debarred from coming in upon the fund for distribution.

Note.—This is modeled on Section 26 of the insolvency act, omitting the provisions as to the appointment of an auditor and the prescribed form of notice. Proceedings under this act will be so few in any one county, that there will be no hardship in requiring the court itself to act; and this will avoid delay and expense.

Section 3 of the Act of April 23, 1909, P. L. 167, 5 Purd. 5344, so far as it applies to the appointment of an auditor of the account of a receiver appointed at the instance of the Commissioner of Banking is recommended for repeal.

Section 49. All assessments, charges and penalties due to the banking department by such corporation or person, all expenses of the taking and maintaining possession of the business and property or the continuing of the business by the Commissioner of Banking, and all expenses of liquidation under the provisions of this act, shall first be payable out of the funds of such corporation or person, including the compensation of special deputies, assistants and others employed by the commissioner to assist him in such proceedings, the allowance of all such expenses to be subject to the approval of the court.

Note.—This is new.

Section 50. If, after the filing and confirmation of the final account of the commissioner and the payment of all creditors in full, and the return to stockholders who have paid to the commissioner the amounts demanded pursuant to Section 37 of this act of their pro rata shares of any such amounts not necessary to pay creditors in full, there shall remain a balance in the hands of the commissioner, he shall call a meeting of stockholders by serving written or printed notice upon them at least thirty days before the day fixed for the meeting.

At such meeting, the stockholders shall elect by ballot a trustee or trustees for the purpose of completing the liquidation. A majority of the stock present in person or by proxy shall be necessary to elect. Should the stockholders fail or refuse to elect, the commissioner or any stockholder may petition the court for appointment of such a trustee or trustees, who, when appointed, shall give bond to the Commonwealth, in such amount, with such surety, and on such conditions as the court may direct.

When such trustee or trustees have been duly elected or appointed as aforesaid, the commissioner shall then transfer, convey and deliver to such trustee or trustees all the assets of the corporation then remaining in his hands. He shall thereupon be discharged from all further liability to such corporation and its creditors, and shall file a certified copy of the proceedings of said stockholders' meeting in his office and cause a certified copy thereof to be filed in the office of the Prothonotary. No powers subject to the supervision of the banking department shall thereafter be exercised by such corporation, except by permission of the commissioner and after compliance by such corporation with all the requirements of law as to a new corporation desiring to exercise such powers.

Note.—This is new. It seems proper to provide a method whereby, after all depositors and creditors have been paid, the commissioner may be relieved of further responsibility and the remaining assets placed under the control or disposition of the stockholders.

Section 51. If any section, clause, sentence or paragraph or other part of this act shall for any reason be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, such judgment shall not affect, impair or invalidate the remainder of the act, but shall be confined in its operation to the part thereof directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment shall be rendered.

Note.—This section is new.

Section 52. The following acts and parts of acts of assembly are hereby repealed:

An Act entitled "An Act to create a banking department," approved June 8, 1891, P. L. 217.

An act entitled "An Act creating a banking department, defining its purposes and authority, designating what corporations shall be subject to supervision and examination by the commissioner of said department; creating the office of Commissioner of Banking, defining his powers and authority, prescribing his duties and fixing his salary; providing for the appointment of a deputy commissioner, defining his duties and fixing his salary; authorizing the appointment of clerks, assistants, examiners and other employees of said department; providing for the registration of foreign corporations receiving deposits or transacting any banking business within this Commonwealth, and providing for their supervision and examination; imposing the payment of certain annual taxes or sums of money upon all corporations, (except building and loan associations doing business exclusively within this State), subject to supervision and examination, for the payment of the expenses thereof and providing for the collection thereof; empowering the administration of oaths in connection with the business of the department and providing for the punishment of any false swearing; providing for the making of reports by corporations subject to supervision and examination and the publication thereof, and providing proceedings against such corporations for failure to make reports; providing for proceedings against such corporations when the capital has been reduced by impairment, or otherwise, or when such corporations are doing business contrary to law, or in an unsafe or unauthorized manner, or when any such corporation is insolvent; providing for proceedings against corporations subject to supervision and examination, but without capital stock, when the same are doing business contrary to law, or in an unsafe or unauthorized manner; providing for the appointment or receivers, both temporary and permanent, when necessary, for corporations subject to supervision and examination, and providing for the punishment of certain breaches of duty by the commissioner, deputy commissioner, or any employee of said department; and also repealing an act, entitled 'An act creating a banking department,' approved June eighth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, and also repealing all other laws inconsistent with this act," approved February 11, 1895, P. L. 4.

An act entitled "An act to amend section five of an act creating a banking department, defining its purposes and authority, designating what corporations shall be subject to supervision and examination by the commissioner of said department; creating the office of Commissioner of Banking, defining his powers and authority, prescribing his duties and fixing his salary; providing for the appointment of a deputy commissioner, defining his duties and fixing his salary; authorizing the appoint-

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION TO STUDY, INVESTIGATE AND REVISE THE INSURANCE LAWS.

To the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Pursuant to the terms of Joint Resolution No. 417 approved on the Twenty-fifth day of July A. D., 1917, the Commission appointed thereunder hereby makes its report and submits its suggestions and recommendations.

The Resolution by which the Commission was created is as follows:

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Providing for the appointment of a commission to study, investigate and revise the Insurance laws of the Commonwealth; prescribing the powers and duties of the commission, and making an appropriation.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That there is hereby constituted a commission to be known as the Commission to Revise the Insurance Laws of the Commonwealth. This Commission shall be composed of two members of the Senate, to be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate; two members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the speaker of the House of Representatives; and three persons, to be appointed by the Governor of the Commonwealth. Any vacancy occurring in the membership of the Commission shall be filled by the remaining members of the Commission. The commission shall, immediately after the appointment of all its members, organize by the election of a chairman.

Section 2. It shall be the duty of the Commission to study, investigate and revise the laws of the Commonwealth relating to insurance; and to report their findings to the next General Assembly, and to recommend in such report such changes in the existing law as to the commission may seem desirable.

Section 3. The members of the commission shall receive no compensation for their services, but shall be reimbursed for all expenses necessarily incurred in the performance of their duties. The commission is authorized to appoint a stenographer and secretary, at such reasonable compensation as it may determine.

Section 4. To carry out the purposes of this Act, the sum of ten thousand ($10,000) dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby specifically appropriated to the use of the commission. Payment of the aforesaid appropriation shall be made on order of the chairman of the commission, and on warrant of the Auditor General on the State Treasurer, in the usual manner.

Approved:—The twenty-fifth day of July, A. D., 1917, in the sum of seven thousand five hundred dollars ($7,500), I withhold my approval from the remainder of said appropriation because of insufficient State revenue.

(Signed) MARTIN G. BRUMBAUGH.

Secretary of the Commonwealth.

TEXT OF REPORT.

The Commission, consisting of Senator Augustus F. Daix, Jr., of Philadelphia, Pa., Senator Frank E. Baldwin, of Austin, Potter County, Pa., appointed by President Pro Tempore, Hon. Clarence J. Buckman; Representatives John Siggins, Jr., of Warren County, Pa., Representatives William W. Mearkle, of Allegheny County, Pa., appointed by Hon. Richard J. Baldwin, Speaker of the House of Representatives; Mr. Andrew J. Maloney, of Philadelphia; Mr. Robert M. Coyle, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Edward A. Woods, of Pittsburgh, appointed by His Excellency, the Governor, met in the office of the Commissioner of Insurance at Harrisburg, Pa., on the fourth day of February, A. D., 1918, and organized by the election of Senator Frank E. Baldwin as chairman, and Arthur P. Townsend, of Langhorne, Bucks County, Pa., secretary-treasurer.

The Joint Resolution No. 417 under which the Commission was appointed, was read and considered in order to ascertain the duties and powers of the Commission. These duties and powers are set forth in Section 2 of the Joint Resolution.

Upon instructions from the Commission, the Secretary made application for the laws of the several states of the United States on the subject of insurance, and obtained copies of the laws of thirty-two states, and a compilation of the life insurance laws of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents for study and investigation.

During the year various meetings of the Commission were held at Harrisburg and at Philadelphia, at which meetings the Insurance laws of the Commonwealth were fully discussed, and the defects thereof inquired into.

It appeared upon investigation that the insurance business as it exists to-day is separated into several distinct classes or branches having no real relation one with the other, and in order to properly study the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, it was necessary that the laws be classified into several groups. We have accordingly separated the laws into four groups, namely: General Insurance, Life Insurance, Fire Insurance and Casualty Insurance (Including Liability, Accident, Health, Surety, etc.) After classifying and studying the present laws we found that many of the Acts of Assembly cover the operating laws of two or more distinct classes or branches of insurance so interwoven that it is difficult to locate the law on one class or branch without studying all the laws.

As soon as we undertook to consider the revision of the laws we found it was not possible in the limited time allotted to the Commission nor was it possible to treat the subject properly without exceeding the scope of our appointment.

The Resolution under which we were appointed used the words "To Study, Investigate and Revise." We have not understood the intention of the General Assembly that we were to codify the insurance laws, but merely after careful study and investigation to recommend such revised laws as would seem judicious. By this we understand that we were to submit only such amendatory or supplementary legislation as might to us seem necessary. We are of the opinion that the laws relating to insurance should be revised but at a time when a consolidated code could be enacted so systematized as to subject matter and arranged into regular and appropriate titles according to the particular class of insurance that each should contain all that naturally belongs to it and no more.

We are, however, of the opinion that the insurance laws of the Commonwealth would be benefited by the passage of two certain bills and we recommend that they should be enacted into laws. These bills were introduced into the Senate during the Legislative Session of 1917 at the instance of the Insurance Department, appearing as Senate Bills Nos. 507 and 630, copies of which are hereto attached and made a part of this report.

We further recommend that the General Assembly direct the Legislative Reference Bureau with the aid and assistance of the Insurance Department to prepare a code of the existing insurance laws of the Commonwealth under the supervision of another Commission created for that purpose, or under the supervision of this Commission should the General Assembly desire to continue the same for a further period of two years.

We have frequently consulted with Mr. Samuel W. McCullough, Deputy Insurance Commissioner, and Mr. John

H. Fertig, Assistant Director of the Legislative Reference Bureau, and we acknowledge our indebtedness for the valuable assistance they have given the Commission.

Respectfully submitted,

AN ACT PROVIDE REVENUES FOR OUTSTANDING LIABILITY LOSSES OF INSURANCE COMPANIES TRANSACTING THE BUSINESS OF INSURING ANY ONE AGAINST LOSS OR DAMAGE RESULTING FROM ACCIDENT TO OR INJURY SUFFERED BY AN EMPLOYEE OR OTHER PERSON FOR WHICH THE PERSON INSURED IS LIABLE AND ALSO FOR OUTSTANDING LOSSES INCURRED UNDER THE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT OF ONE THOUSAND NINE HUNDRED FIFTEEN AND REPEALING EXISTING LAWS.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same That the reserve for outstanding losses under insurance against loss or damage from accident to or injuries suffered by an employee or other person and for which the insured is liable shall be computed as follows:

(1) For all liability suits being defended under policies written more than

(a) Ten years prior to the date as of which the statement is made one thousand five hundred dollars for each unit.

(b) Five and less than ten years prior to the date as of which the statement is made one thousand dollars for each unit

(c) Three and less than five years prior to the date as of which the statement is made eight hundred and fifty dollars for each unit

(2) For all liability policies written during the three years immediately preceding the date as of which the statement is made such reserve shall be sixty per centum of the earned liability premiums of each of such three years less all loss and loss expense payments made under liability policies written in the corresponding years but in any event such reserve shall for the first of such three years be not less than seven hundred and fifty dollars for each outstanding liability suit on said year's policies.

(3) For all compensation claims under policies written more than three years prior to the date as of which the statement is made the present value at four per centum interest of the determined and estimated future payments.

(4) For all compensation claims under policies written in the three years immediately preceding the date as of which the statement is made such reserve shall be sixty-five per centum of the earned compensation premiums of each of such three years less all loss and loss expense payments made in connection with such claims under policies written in the corresponding years but in any event in the case of the first year of any such three-year period such reserve shall be not less than the present value at four per centum interest of the determined and the estimated unpaid compensation claims under policies written during such year.

Section 2. The term "earned premiums" as used herein shall include gross premiums charged on all policies written including all determined excess and additional premiums less return premiums other than premiums returned to policyholders as dividends and less re-insurance premiums and premiums on policies cancelled and less unearned premiums on policies in force. But any participating company which has charged in its premiums a loading solely for dividends shall not be required to include such loading in its earned premiums provided a statement of the amount of such loading has been filed with and approved by the Insurance Commissioner.

The term "compensation" as used in this act shall relate to all insurances effected by virtue of statutes providing compensation to employees for personal injuries irrespective of fault of the employer. The term "liability" shall relate to all insurance except compensation insurance against loss or damage from accident to or injuries suffered by an employee or other person and for which the insured is liable.

The terms "loss payments" and "loss expense payments" as used herein shall include all payments to claimants including payments for medical and surgical attendance legal expenses salaries and expenses of investigators adjusters and field men, rents, stationery, telegraph and telephone charges, postage, salaries and expenses of office employees home office expenses and all other payments made on account of claims whether such payments shall be allocated to specific claims or unallocated.

Section 3. All unallocated liability loss expense payments made in a given calendar year subsequent to the first four years in which an insurer has been issuing liability policies shall be distributed as follows: Thirty-five per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year forty per centum to the policies written in the preceding year ten per centum to the policies written in the second year preceding ten per centum to the policies written in the third year preceding and five per centum to the policies written in the fourth year preceding and such payments made in each of the four calendar years in which an insurer issues liability policies shall be distributed as follows: In the first calendar year one hundred per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year, in the second calendar year fifty per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year and fifty per centum to the policies written in the preceding year in the third calendar year forty per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year forty per centum to the policies written in the preceding year and twenty per centum to the policies written in the second year preceding and in the fourth calendar year thirty-five per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year forty per centum to the policies written in the preceding year fifteen per centum to the policies written in the second year preceding and ten per centum to the policies written in the third year preceding and a schedule showing such distribution shall be included in the annual statement.

All unallocated compensation loss expense payments made in a given calendar year subsequent to the first three years in which an insurer has been issuing compensation policies shall be distributed as follows: Forty per centum shall be charged to policies written in that year forty-five per centum to the policies written in the preceding year ten per centum to the policies written in the second year preceding and five per centum to the policies written in the third year preceding and such payments made in each of the first three calendar years in which an insurer issues compensation policies shall be distributed as follows: In the first calendar year one hundred per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year in the second calendar year fifty per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year and fifty per centum to the policies written in the preceding year in the third calendar year forty-five per centum shall be charged to the policies written in that year forty-five per centum to the policies written in the preceding year and ten per centum to the policies written in the second year preceding and a schedule showing such distribution shall be included in the annual statement.

Whenever in the judgment of the Insurance Commissioner the liability or compensation loss reserves of any insurer under his supervision calculated in accordance with the foregoing provisions are inadequate he may in his discretion require such insurer to maintain additional reserves based upon estimated individual claims or otherwise or whenever a satisfactory mathematical or actuarial table for valuating compensation loss reserves is promulgated he may require such insurers to maintain reserves upon such tabular basis.

Section 4. Each insurer that writes liability or compensation policies shall include in the annual statement required by law schedule of its experience thereunder in such form as the Insurance Commissioner may prescribe.

Section 5. The Act approved June first one thousand nine hundred and eleven (Pamphlet Laws six hundred four), entitled "An act to provide a reserve for outstanding liability losses of insurance companies transacting the business of insuring any one against loss or damage resulting from accident to or injury suffered by an employee or other person for which the person insured is liable" and the act approved June tenth one thousand nine hundred and one (Pamphlet Laws five hundred forty-six), entitled "A supplement to an act approved the first day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six et cetera" be and the same are hereby repealed.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same That any corporation society order or voluntary association without capital stock organized and carried on solely for the mutual benefit of its members and their beneficiaries and not for profit and having a lodge system with ritualistic form of work and representative form of government and which shall make provision for the payments of benefits in accordance with section five hereof is hereby declared to be a fraternal benefit society.

Section 2. Any society having a supreme governing or legislative body and subordinate lodges or branches by whatever name known into which members shall be elected initiated and admitted in accordance with its constitution laws rules regulations and prescribed ritualistic ceremonies which subordinate lodges or branches shall be required by the laws of such society to hold regular or stated meetings at least once in each month shall be deemed to be operating on the lodge system.

Section 3. Any such society shall be deemed to have a representative form of government when it shall provide in its constitution and laws for a supreme legislative or governing body composed of representatives elected either by the members or by delegates chosen directly or indirectly by the members together with such other members as may be prescribed by its constitution and laws provided that the elective members shall constitute a majority in number and have not less than two-thirds of the votes nor less than the votes required to amend its constitution and laws and provided further that the meetings of the supreme or governing body and the election of officers representatives or delegates shall be held as often as once in four years. The members, officers, representatives or delegates of a fraternal benefit society shall not vote by proxy.

Section 4. Except as herein provided such societies shall be governed by this act and shall be exempt from all other provisions of the insurance laws of this Commonwealth not only in governmental relations with the Commonwealth but for every other purpose and no law hereafter enacted shall apply to them unless they be expressly designated therein.

Section 5. Every society transacting business under this act shall provide for the payment of death benefits and may provide for the payment of benefits in the case of temporary or permanent physical disability either as the result of disease accident or old age, provided that the period of life at which the payment of benefits for disability on account of old age shall commence shall not be under seventy years and may provide for monuments or tombstones to the memory of its deceased members and for the payment of funeral benefits. Such society shall have the power to give a member when permanently disabled or on attaining the age of seventy all or such portion of the face value of his certificate as the laws of the society may specify. Provided that nothing in this act contained shall be so constructed as to prevent the issuing of benefit certificates for a term of years less than the whole of life which are payable upon the death or disability of the member occurring within the term for which the benefit certificate may be issued or so as to permit any such society hereafter to make any promise or agreement for the payment of money upon the expiration of a fixed period except as hereinafter provided.

(a) Such society shall upon written application of the member have the power to accept a part of the periodical contributions in cash and charge the remainder not exceeding one-half of the periodical contribution against the certificate with interest payable or compounded annually at a rate not lower than four per centum per annum provided that this privilege shall not be granted except to societies which have readjusted or may hereafter readjust their rates of contributions and to contracts affected by such readjustment.

(b) Any society which shall show by the annual valuation hereinafter provided for that it is accumulating and maintaining the full reserve required by a table of mortality not lower than the American Experience Table and four per centum interest may grant to its members extended and paid-up protection loans or such withdrawal equities as its constitution and laws may permit. Provided that such grants shall in no case exceed in value the portion of the reserve to the credit of such members to whom they are made.

Section 6. Such death benefits shall in certificates hereafter issued be payable only to wife, husband, relative to the fourth degree of consanguinity, father-in-law, mother-in-law, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, stepfather, stepmother, stepchildren, children by legal adoption or to a person or persons dependent upon the member. Provided that if after the issuance of the original certificate, the member shall become dependent upon an incorporated charitable institution he shall with the consent of the society have the privilege of making such institution his beneficiary. Within the above restrictions each member shall have the right to designate his beneficiary and from time to time may have the same changed in accordance with the laws, rules or regulations of the society and no beneficiary shall have or obtain any vested interest in the said benefit until the same has become due and payable upon the death of the said member. Provided that any society may by its laws limit the scope of beneficiaries within the above classes. No contract under this section shall be valid which shall be conditioned upon an agreement or understanding that the person to whom the death benefit is made payable shall pay the periodical or other contribution of the member.

Section 7. A society may admit to beneficial membership any person not less than sixteen and not more than sixty years of age who has been examined by a legally qualified physician and whose examination has been supervised and approved in accordance with the laws of such society. Provided that any beneficiary member of the society who shall apply for a certificate providing for disability benefits need not be required to pass an additional medical examination therefor. Nothing herein contained shall prevent such society from accepting general or social members.

Section 8. Every certificate issued by any such society shall specify the amount of benefit provided thereby and shall provide that the certificate the charter or articles of incorporation or if a voluntary association the articles of association the constitution and laws of the society and the application for membership and medical examination signed by the applicant and all amendments to each thereof shall constitute the agreement between the society and the member and copies of the same certified by the secretary of the society, or corresponding officer shall be received in evidence as to the terms and conditions thereof and any changes, additions or amendments to said charter or articles of incorporation or if a voluntary association articles of association constitution or laws duly made or enacted subsequent to the issuance of the benefit certificate shall bind the member and his beneficiaries and shall govern and control the agreement in all respects the same as though such changes, additions or amendments had been made prior to and were in force at the time of the application for membership.

Section 9. Subsection One. Any society may create, maintain, invest, disburse and apply an emergency surplus or other similar fund in accordance with its laws. Such funds shall be held invested and disbursed for the use and benefit of the society and no member or beneficiary shall have or acquire individual rights therein or become entitled to any apportionment or the surrender of any part thereof except as provided in paragraph (b) of section five of this act. The funds from which benefits shall be paid and the funds from which the expenses of the society shall be defrayed shall be derived from periodical or other payments by the members or subordinate bodies of the society together with accretions of said funds provided that no society, domestic or foreign, shall hereafter be incorporated or admitted to transact business in this Commonwealth which does not provide for stated periodical contributions sufficient to provide for meeting the mortuary obligations contracted when valued upon the basis of the National Fraternal Congress Table of Mortality as adopted by the National Fraternal Congress, August twenty-third, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, or any higher standard with interest assumption not more than four per centum per annum nor to write or accept members for temporary or permanent disability benefits except upon tables based upon reliable experience with an interest assumption not higher than four per centum per annum. Subsection two. Deferred payments or installments of claims shall be considered as fixed liabilities on the happening of the contingency upon which such payments or installments are thereafter to be paid. Such liability shall be the present value of such future payments or installments upon the rate of interest and mortality assumed by the society for valuation and every society shall maintain a fund sufficient to meet such liability regardless of proposed future collections to meet any such liabilities.

Section 10. A society shall invest its funds only in securities permitted by the laws of this Commonwealth for the investment of the assets of life insurance companies. Provided That any foreign society permitted or seeking to do business in this Commonwealth which invests its funds in accordance with the laws of the State in which it is incorporated shall be held to meet the requirements of this act for the investment of funds.

Section 11. Every provision of the laws of the society for payment by its members in whatever form made shall distinctly state the purpose of the same and the proportion thereof which may be used for expenses and no part of the money collected for mortuary or disability purposes or the net accretions of either or any of said funds shall be used for expenses.

Section 12. Ten or more persons, citizens of the United States and majority of whom are citizens of this Commonwealth who desire to form a Fraternal Benefit Society as defined by this act may make and sign (giving their addresses) and acknowledge before some officer competent to take acknowledgment of deeds, articles of incorporation in which shall be stated:

(a) The proposed corporate name of the society which shall not so closely resemble the name of any society or insurance company already transacting business in this Commonwealth as to mislead the public or to lead to confusion.

(b) The purpose for which it is formed which shall not include more liberal powers than are granted by this act provided that any lawful social, intellectual, education, educational, charitable, benevolent, moral or religious advantages may be set forth among the purposes of the society and the mode in which its corporate powers are to be exercised.

(c) The place where its principal office shall be located within this Commonwealth.

(d) The names, residences and official titles of all the officers, trustees, directors, or other persons who are to have and exercise the general control and management of the affairs and funds of the society for the first year or until the ensuing election at which all such officers shall be elected by the supreme legislative or governing body which election shall be held not later than one year from the date of the issuance of the permanent certificate.

Such articles of incorporation and duly certified copies of the constitution and laws, rules and regulations and copies of all proposed forms of benefit certificates, applications therefore and circulars to be issued by such society and a bond in the sum of five thousand dollars with sureties approved by the Insurance Commissioner conditioned upon the return of the advance payments as provided in this section to applicants if the organization is not completed within one year shall be filed with the Insurance Commissioner, who may require such further information as he deems necessary and if the purpose of the society conform to the requirements of this act and all provisions of law have been complied with, the Insurance Commissioner shall so certify and retain and file the articles of incorporation and furnish the incorporators a preliminary certificate authorizing said society to solicit members as hereinafter provided.

Upon receipt of said certificates from the Insurance Commissioner said society may solicit members for the purpose of completing its organization and shall collect from each applicant the amount of not less than one regular monthly payment in accordance with its table of rates as provided by its constitution and laws and shall issue to each such applicant a receipt for the amount so collected. But no society shall incur any liability other than for such advanced payments nor issue any benefit certificate nor pay or allow or offer or promise to pay or allow to any person any death or disability benefit until actual bona fide applications for death benefit certificates have been secured upon at least five hundred lives for at least one thousand dollars each and all such applicants for death benefits shall have been regularly examined by legally qualified practicing physicians and certificates of such examinations have been duly filed and approved by the chief medical examiner of such society nor until there shall be established ten subordinate lodges or branches into which said five hundred applicants have been initiated nor until there has been submitted to the Insurance Commissioner under oath of the president and secretary or corresponding officers of such society a list of such applicants giving their names, addresses, date examined, date approved, date initiated, name and number of the subordinate branch of which each applicant is a member amount of benefits to be granted rate of stated periodical contributions which shall be sufficient to provide for meeting the mortuary obligations contracted when valued for death benefits upon the basis of the National Fraternal Congress Table of Mortality as adopted by the National Fraternal Congress, August twenty-third, one thousand eight hundred ninety-nine, or any higher standard at the option of the society and for disability benefits by tables based upon reliable experience and for combined death and permanent, total disability benefits by tables based upon reliable experience with an interest assumption not higher than four per centum per annum nor until it shall be shown to the Insurance Commissioner by the sworn statement of the treasurer or corresponding officer of such society that at least five hundred applicants have each paid in cash at least one regular monthly payment as herein provided per one thousand dollars of indemnity to be effected which payments in the aggregate shall amount to at least twenty-five hundred dollars all of which shall be credited to the mortuary or disability fund on account of such applicants and no part of which may be used for expenses.

Said advanced payments shall during the period of organization be held in trust and if the organization is not completed within one year as hereinafter provided returned to said applicant.

The Insurance Commissioner may make such examination and require such further information as he deems advisable and upon presentation of satisfactory evidence that the society has complied with all the provisions of law he shall issue to such society a certificate to that effect. Such certificate shall be prima facie evidence of the existence of such society at the date thereof. The Insurance Commissioner shall cause a record of such certificate to be made and a certified copy of such record may be given in evidence with like effect as the original certificate.

No preliminary certificate granted under the provisions of this section shall be valid after one year from its date or after such further period not exceeding one year as may be authorized by the Insurance Commissioner upon cause shown unless the five hundred applicants herein required have been secured and the organization has been completed as herein provided and the articles of incorporation and all proceedings thereunder shall become null and void in one year from the date of said preliminary certificate or at the expiration of said extended period unless such society shall have completed its organization and commenced business as herein provided.

Every such society shall have the power to make a constitution and by-laws for the government of the society, the admission of its members the management of its affairs and the fixing and readjusting of the rates of contribution of its members from time to time and it shall have the power to change, alter, add to or amend such constitution and by-laws and shall have such other powers as are necessary and incidental to carrying into effect the objects and purposes of the society.

Section 13. Any such society now engaged in transacting business in this Commonwealth may exercise after the passage of this act all of the rights conferred thereby and all of the rights powers and privileges now exercised or possessed by it under its charter or articles of incorporation not inconsistent with this act if incorporated or if it be a voluntary association it may incorporate hereunder.

But no society already organized shall be required to reincorporate hereunder and any such society may amend its articles of incorporation from time to time in the manner provided therein or in its constitution and laws and all such amendments shall be filed with the Insurance Commissioner and shall become operative upon such filing unless a later time be provided in such amendments or in its articles of incorporation constitution or laws.

Section 14. No domestic society shall merge with or accept by contract of re-insurance or otherwise the transfer of the membership or funds of any other society unless such merger or transfer is evidenced by a contract in writing setting out in full the terms and conditions of the same and filed with the Insurance Commissioner of this Commonwealth together with a sworn statement of the financial condition of each of said societies by its president and secretary or corresponding officers together with a certificate of such officers duly verified under oath that such merger re-insurance or transfer has been approved by a vote of two-thirds of the members of the supreme legislative or governing body of each of said societies.

Upon the submission of said contract financial statements and certificates the Insurance Commissioner shall examine the same and if he shall find such financial statements to be correct and the said contract to be in conformity with the provisions of this section and that such merger reinsurance or transfer is just and equitable to the members of each of said societies he shall approve the same issue his certificate to that effect and thereupon the said contract of merger reinsurance or transfer shall be of full force and effect.

In case such contract is not approved the fact of its submission and its contents shall not be disclosed by the Insurance Commissioner.

Section 15. Foreign societies which are now authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth may continue such business until the first day of April next succeeding the passage of this act and the authority of such societies may thereafter be renewed annually but in all cases to terminate on the first day of the succeeding April provided however the license shall continue in full force and effect until the new license be issued or specifically refused. For each such license or renewal the society shall pay the Insurance Commissioner twenty dollars. A duly certified copy or duplicate of such license shall be prima facie evidence that the license is a fraternal benefit society within the meaning of this act.

Section 16. No foreign society now transacting business organized prior to the passage of this act which is not now authorized to transact business in this Commonwealth shall transact any business herein without a license from the Insurance Commissioner. Any such society may be licensed to transact business within this Commonwealth upon filing with the commissioner a duly certified copy of its charter or articles of association a copy of its constitution and laws certified by its secretary or corresponding officer, a power of attorney to the Insurance Commissioner as hereinafter provided a statement of its business under oath of its president and secretary or corresponding officers in the form required by the commissioner and duly verified by an examination made by the supervising insurance official of its home state or other state satisfactory to the Insurance Commissioner of this Commonwealth a certificate from the proper official in its home state province or country that the society is legally organized a copy of its contract which must show that benefits are provided for by periodical or other payments by persons holding similar contracts and upon furnishing the commissioner such other information as he may deem necessary to a proper exhibit of its business and plan of working. Upon compliance with these requirements such foreign society shall be entitled to do business in this Commonwealth until the first day of the succeeding April and such license shall upon compliance with the provisions of this act be renewed annually but in all cases to terminate on the first day of the succeeding April. Provided however that such license shall continue in full force and effect until the new license be issued or be specifically refused. Any foreign society desiring admission to this Commonwealth shall have the qualifications required of domestic societies organized under this act and have its assets invested as required by the laws of the State territory, district, country or province wherein it is organized. For each license or renewal the society shall pay the Commissioner twenty dollars. When the Insurance Commissioner refuses to license any society or revoke its authority to do business in this Commonwealth he shall reduce his ruling order or decision to writing and file the same in his office and shall upon request furnish a copy thereof together with a statement of his reasons to the officers of the society and such action of the commissioner shall be reviewable by proper proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction within the Commonwealth. Provided however that nothing contained in this or the preceding section shall be taken or construed as preventing any such society from continuing in good faith all contracts made in this Commonwealth during the time such society was legally authorized to transact business herein.

Section 17. Every foreign society now doing business or applying for admission to this Commonwealth shall by a duly executed instrument filed in the office of the Insurance Commissioner constitute and appoint the Insurance Commissioner or his successors its true and lawful attorney upon whom all lawful processes in any action of legal proceedings against it may be served and therein shall agree that any lawful process against it which may be served upon him as its said attorney shall be of the same force and validity as if served on the society and that the authority thereof shall continue in force irrevocable so long as any liability of the society remains outstanding in this Commonwealth. The service of such process shall be made by leaving copies of the same in duplicate in the hands or office of the Commissioner. One copy of such instrument certified by the commissioner or his deputy as having been served upon him shall be deemed valid service upon the society. Provided however that no such service shall be valid or binding against any such society when it is required thereunder to file its answer pleading or defense in less than thirty days from the date of mailing the copy of such service to such society.

When legal process is served upon the commissioner as attorney for foreign society he shall forthwith forward one of the duplicate copies of process served on him to its secretary or corresponding officer or to such other person as may have been previously designated by the society by written notice filed in the office of the commissioner. As a condition of valid and effective service and of the duty of the commissioner in the premises the plaintiff in each such process shall pay to the commissioner at the time of service thereof the sum of two dollars which the said plaintiff shall recover as taxable costs if he prevails in the suit. The commissioner shall keep a record of all such processes which shall show the day and hour of service. Legal process shall not be served upon any such society except in the manner provided herein.

Section 18. Any domestic society may provide that the meeting of its legislative or governing body may be held in any state, district, province or territory wherein such society has subordinate branches and all business wherein such society meetings shall be as valid in all respects as if such meetings were held in this Commonwealth but its principal office shall be located in this Commonwealth.

Section 19. Officers and members of the supreme grand or any subordinate body of any such incorporated society shall not be individually liable for the payment of any disability or death benefit provided for in the laws and agreements of such society but the same shall be payable only out of the funds of such society and in the manner provided by its laws.

Section 20. The constitution and laws of the society may provide that no subordinate body nor any of its subordinate officers or members shall have the power or authority to waive any of the provisions thereof and the same shall be binding on the society and each and every member thereof and on all beneficiaries of members.

Section 21. No money or other benefit charity or relief or aid to be paid provided or rendered by any such society shall be liable to attachment garnishment or other process or be seized, taken, appropriated or applied by any legal or equitable process or operation of law to pay any debt or liability of a member or beneficiary or any other person who may have a right thereunder either before or after payment.

Section 22. Every society transacting business under this act shall file with the Insurance Commissioner a duly certified copy of all amendments or additions to its constitution and laws within ninety days after the enactment of the same printed copies of the constitution and laws as amended, changed or added to certified by the secretary or corresponding officer thereof shall be prima facie evidence of the legal adoption thereof.

Section 23. Every society transacting business in this Commonwealth shall annually on or before the first day of March file with the Insurance Commissioner in such form as he may require a statement under oath of its president and secretary or corresponding officers of its condition and standing on the thirty-first day of December last preceding and of its transactions for the year ending on that date and shall also furnish such other information as the Commissioner may deem necessary to a proper exhibit of its business and plan of working. The Commissioner may at other times require any further statement he may deem necessary to be made relating to such society.

In addition to the annual report herein required each society shall report annually to the Commissioner a valuation of its certificates in force on December thirty-first last preceding excluding those issued within the year for which the report is filed in cases where the contributions for the first year in whole or in part are used for current mortality and expenses provided the first report of valuation shall be made as of December thirty-first, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen. Such report of valuation shall show as contingent liabilities the present mid-year value of the promised benefits provided in the constitution and laws of such society under certificates then subject to valuation and as contingent assets the present mid-year value of the future net contributions provided in the constitution and laws as the same are in practice actually collected not including therein any value for the right to make extra assessment. Provided that any excess of the present value of future contributions over the present value of promised benefits under certificates providing for disability benefits (other than total permanent disability in combination with death benefits) shall not be allowed in reduction of the liability under other forms of certificates. At the option of any society in lieu of the above the valuation may show the net value of the certificates subject to valuation hereinbefore provided and said net value when computed in case of monthly contributions may be the mean of the terminal values for the end of the preceding and of the current insurance years.

Such valuation shall be certified by a competent accountant or actuary or at the request and expense of the society verified by the actuary of the department of insurance of the home State of the society and shall be filed with the Insurance Commissioner within ninety days after the submission of the last preceding annual report. The legal minimum standard of valuation for all certificates except for disability benefits shall be the National Fraternal Congress Table of Mortality as adopted by the National Fraternal Congress, August twenty-three, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine or at the option of the society any higher table or it may use a table based upon the society's own experience of at least twenty years and covering not less than one hundred thousand lives with interest assumption not more than four per centum per annum each such valuation report shall set forth clearly and fully the mortality and interest basis and the method of valuation. Any society providing for disability benefits shall keep the net contributions for such benefits in a fund separate and apart from all other benefit and expense funds and the valuation of all other business of the society provided that where a combined contribution table is used by a society for both death and permanent total disability benefits the valuation shall be according to tables of reliable experience and in such case a separation of the funds shall not be required.

The valuation herein provided for shall not be considered or regarded as a test of the financial solvency of the society except as provided in section twenty-three, but each society shall be held to be legally solvent so long as the funds in its possession are equal to or in excess of its matured liabilities.

Beginning with the year one thousand nine hundred and nineteen, a report of such valuation and an explanation of the facts concerning the condition of the society thereby disclosed shall be printed and mailed to each beneficiary member of the society not later than June first of each year or in lieu thereof such report of valuation and showing of the society's condition as thereby disclosed may be published in the society's official paper and the issue containing the same mailed to each beneficiary member of the society. The laws of such society shall provide that if the stated periodical contributions of the members are insufficient to pay all matured death and disability claims in full and to provide for the creation and maintenance of the funds required by its laws or found necessary otherwise additional contributions or additional increased or extra rates of contribution shall be collected from the members to meet such deficiency and such laws may provide that upon the written application or consent of the member his certificate may be charged with its proportion of any deficiency disclosed by valuation with interest not exceeding five per centum per annum.

Section 23a. If the valuation of the certificates as hereinbefore provided on December thirty-first one thousand nine hundred and nineteen shall show that the present value of future net contributions together with the admitted assets is less than the present value of the promised benefits and accrued liabilities such society shall thereafter maintain said financial condition at each succeeding triennial valuation in respect of the degree of deficiency as shown in the valuation as of December thirty-first, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen. If at any succeeding triennial valuation such society shall not show at least the same condition the Commissioner shall direct that it thereafter comply with in the requirements herein specified. If the next succeeding triennial valuation after the receipt of such notice shall show that the society has failed to maintain the said condition required herein in the Commissioner may in the absence of good cause shown for such failure institute proceedings for the dissolution of such society in accordance with the provision of section twenty-four of this act or in the case of a foreign society its license may be cancelled in the manner provided in this act.

Any such society shown by any triennial valuation subsequent to December thirty-first, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen not to have maintained the condition herein provided shall within two years thereafter make such improvement as to show a percentage of deficiency not greater than as of December thirty-first, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen or thereafter as to all new members admitted be subject so far as stated rates of contributions are concerned to the provisions of section twelve of this act applicable in the organization of new societies provided that the net mortuary or beneficiary contributions and funds of such new members shall be kept separate and apart from the other funds of the society. If such required improvement is not shown by the succeeding triennial valuation then the said new members may be placed in a separate class and their certificates valued in respect to contributions and funds as an independent society.

Section 23b. In lieu of the requirements of sections twenty-three and twenty-three (a) any society may accept in its laws the following provisions and may value its certificates on a basis herein designated "accumulation basis" by crediting each member with the net amount contributed for each year and with interest at approximately the net rate earned and by charging him with his share of the losses for each year herein designated "cost of insurance" and carrying the balance if any to his credit. The charge for the cost insurance may be according to the actual experience of the society applied to a table of mortality recognized by the law of this Commonwealth and shall take into consideration the amount at risk during each year which shall be the amount payable at death less the credit to the member. Except as specifically provided in its articles or laws or contracts no charge shall be carried forward from the first valuation hereunder against any member for any past share of losses exceeding the contributions and credit. If after the first valuation any members share of losses for any year exceeds his credit including the contribution for the year the contribution shall be increased to cover his share of the losses. Any such excess share of losses chargeable to any member may be paid out of a fund or contributions especially created or required for such purpose.

Any member may transfer to any plan adopted by the society with net rates on which tabular reserves are maintained and on such transfers shall be entitled to make such application of his credit as provided in the laws of the society.

Certificates issued rerated or readjusted on a basis providing for adequate rates with adequate reserves to mature such certificates upon assumptions for mortality and interest recognized by the laws of this Commonwealth may be valued on such basis herein designated the "tabular basis" provided that if on the first valuation under this section a deficiency in reserve shall be shown for any such certificate the same shall be valued on the accumulation basis.

Whenever in any society having members upon the tabular basis and upon the accumulation basis the total of all costs of insurance provided for any year shall be insufficient to meet the actual death and disability losses for the year the deficiency shall be met for the year from the available funds after setting aside all credits in the reserve or from increased contributions or by an increase in the number of assessments applied to the society as a whole or to classes of members as may be specified in its laws. Savings from a lower amount of death losses may be returned in like manner as may be specified in its laws.

If the laws of the society so provide the assets representing the reserves of any separate class of members may be carried separately for such class as if in an independent society and the required reserve accumulation of such class so set apart shall not hereafter be mingled with the assets of other classes of the society.

A table showing the credits to individual members for each age and year of entry and showing opposite each credit the tabular reserve required on the whole life or other plan of insurance specified in the contract according to assumptions for mortality and interest recognized by the law of this Commonwealth and adopted by the society shall be filed by the society with each annual report and also be furnished to each member before July first of each year.

In lieu of the aforesaid statement there may be furnished to each member within the same time a statement giving the credit for such member and giving the tabular reserve and level rate required for a transfer carrying out the plan of insurance specified in the contract. No table or statement need be made or furnished where the reserves are maintained on the tabular basis.

For this purpose individual bookkeeping accounts for each member shall not be required and all calculations may be made by actuarial methods. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the maintenance of such surplus over and above the credits on the accumulation basis and the reserves on the tabular basis as any society may provide by or pursuant to its laws nor be construed as giving to the individual member any right or claim to any reserve or credit other than the manner as expressed in the contract and its laws nor as making any such reserves or credits a liability in determining the legal solvency of the society.

Section 24. The Insurance Commissioner or any deputy examiner or other person he may appoint shall have the power of visitation and examination into the affairs of any domestic society. He may employ assistants for the purpose of such examination and he or any person he may appoint shall have free access to all the books, papers and documents that relate to the business of the society and may summon and qualify as witness under oath and examine its officers, agents and employees or other persons in relation to the affairs, transactions and conditions of the society.

Whenever after examination the Insurance Commissioner is satisfied that any domestic society has failed to comply with any provision of this act or is exceeding its powers or is not carrying out its contracts in good faith or is transacting business fraudulently or whenever any domestic society after the existence of one year or more shall have a membership of less than four hundred (or shall determine to discontinue business) the Insurance Commissioner may present the facts relating thereto to the Attorney General who shall if he deem the circumstances warrant proceed in the manner prescribed by the act of June first, nineteen hundred and eleven for the liquidation of insolvent or delinquent companies, orders or associations transacting any class of insurance.

No such proceedings shall be commenced by the Attorney General against any such society until after notice has been duly served on the chief executive officers of the society and a reasonable opportunity given to it on a date to be named in said notice to show cause why such proceedings should not be commenced.

Section 25. No application for injunction against or proceedings for the dissolution of or the appointment of a receiver for any domestic society or branch thereof shall be entertained by any court of this Commonwealth unless the same is made by the Attorney General.

Section 26. The Insurance Commissioner or his deputy or examiner or any person whom he may appoint, may examine any foreign society transacting or applying for admission to transact business in this Commonwealth. The said Insurance Commissioner may employ assistants and he or any person he may appoint shall have free access to all the books, papers and documents that relate to the business of the society and may summon and qualify as witness under oath and examine its officers, agents and employees and other persons in relation to the affairs, transactions and conditions of the society. He may in his discretion accept in lieu of such examination the examination of the Insurance Department of the state, territory, district, province or country where such society is organized. The actual expense of examiners making any such examination shall be paid by the society upon statement furnished by the Insurance Commissioner.

If any society or its officers refuse to submit to such examination or to comply with the provisions of the section relative thereto the authority of such society to write new business in this Commonwealth shall be suspended or license refused until satisfactory evidence is furnished the Insurance Commissioner relating to the condition and affairs of the society and during such suspension the society shall not write new business in this Commonwealth.

Section 27. Pending during or after an examination or investigation of any such society either domestic or foreign the Insurance Commissioner shall make public no financial statement, report or finding, nor shall he permit to become public any financial statement, report or finding affecting the status standing or rights of any such society until a copy thereof shall have been served upon such society at its home office nor until such society have been afforded a reasonable opportunity to answer any such financial statement, report or finding and to make such showing in connection therewith as it may desire.

Section 28. When the Insurance Commissioner in investigation is satisfied that any foreign society transacting business this act has exceeded its power or has failed to comply with any provisions of this act or is conducting business fraudulently or is not carrying out its contracts in good faith he shall notify the society of his findings and state in writing the grounds of his dissatisfaction and after reasonable notice require said society on a date named to show cause why its license should not be revoked. If on the date named in said notice such objections have not been removed to the satisfaction of the said Insurance Commissioner or the society does not present good and sufficient reasons why its authority to transact business in this Commonwealth should not at that time be revoked, he may revoke the authority of the society to continue business in this Commonwealth. All decisions and findings of the commissioner made under the provisions of this section may be reviewed by proper proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction as provided in section sixteen of this act.

Section 29. Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to affect or apply to grand or subordinate lodges of Masons, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Owls, Moose, Elks, Eagles, Patriotic Order Sons of America, Knights of Pythias (exclusive of the insurance department of the Supreme Lodge, Knights of Pythias) and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics (exclusive of the beneficiary degree or insurance branch of the national council, Junior Order United American Mechanics), Senior Order of American Men, or to other similar Orders or societies which limit their membership to, anyone, hazardous occupation nor to similar societies which do not issue insurance certificates nor to any association of local lodges of a society now doing business in this Commonwealth which provide death benefits not exceeding five hundred dollars to any one person or disability benefits not exceeding three hundred dollars in any one year to any one person or both, nor to any contracts of reinsurance business on such plan in this Commonwealth nor to domestic societies which limit their membership to the employees of any particular city or town designated firm, business house or corporation nor to domestic lodges, orders or associations of a purely religious charitable and benevolent description which do not provide for a death benefit of more than one hundred dollars or for disability benefits of more than one hundred and fifty dollars to any one person in any one year. Any society heretofore organized and now actually operating which limits its membership to the members of a single fraternal order which said members are required to have been proposed elected by ballot initiated, admitted and obligated through subordinate lodges under prescribed ritualistic ceremonies shall be regarded as thereby complying with the requirements of this act as to subordinate lodges and the admission of members therein and shall upon compliance with all other provisions of this act be deemed a fraternal beneficiary society operating on the lodge system and entitled to license as such hereunder. The Insurance Commissioner may require from any society such information as will enable him to determine whether such society is exempt from the provisions of this act.

Any fraternal benefit society heretofore organized and incorporated and operating within the definition set forth in sections one two three of this act providing for benefits in case of death or disability resulting solely from accidents but which does not obligate itself to pay death or sick benefits may be licensed under the provisions of this act and shall have all the privileges and shall be subject to all the provisions and regulations of this act except that the provisions of this act requiring medical examination, valuations of benefit certificates and that certificate shall specify the amount of benefits shall not apply to such society.

Benevolent societies other than those specifically exempted herein without ritualistic work or a representative form of government transacting any class of insurance shall not be required to comply with this act but all such societies or associations shall on and after the passage of this act file with the Insurance Commissioner copies of their charter constitution and laws and annually thereafter make a report in such form as the commissioner may require showing their condition and standing on the thirty-first day of December preceding and of their transactions for the year and the Commissioner may at any time make an examination of the books and accounts of any such society.

And whenever he is satisfied that any such association has not on hand sufficient funds to meet its outstanding obligations to take the necessary proceedings to liquidate its affairs.

Section 30. Every fraternal benefit society organized or licensed under this act is hereby declared to be a charitable and benevolent institution and all of its funds shall be exempt from all levy and every state, county, district, municipal and school tax other than taxes on real estate and office equipment.

Section 31. Any person, officer, member or examining physician of any society authorized to do business under this act who shall knowingly or willingly make any false or fraudulent statement or representative in or with reference to any application for membership or for the purpose of obtaining money from or benefit in any society transacting business under this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars or imprisonment in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than one year or both in the discretion of the court and any person who shall wilfully make a false statement of any material fact or thing in a sworn statement as to the death or disability of a certificate holder in any such society for the purpose of procuring payment of a benefit named in the certificate of such holder and any person who shall wilfully make any false statement in any verified report or declaration under oath required or authorized by this act shall be guilty of perjury and shall be proceeded against the punished as provided by the statutes of this Commonwealth in relation to the crime of perjury.

Any person who shall solicit membership for or in any manner assist in procuring membership in any fraternal benefit society not licensed to do business in this Commonwealth or who shall solicit membership for or in any manner assist in procuring membership in any such society not authorized as herein provided to do business as herein defined in this Commonwealth shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars.

Any society or any officer, agent or employee thereof neglecting or refusing to comply with or violating any of the provisions of this act the penalty for which neglect, refusal or violation is not specified in this section shall be fined not exceeding two hundred dollars upon conviction thereof.

Section 32. The act of April sixth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three entitled "An act regulating the organization and incorporation of secret fraternal, beneficial societies, orders or associations and protecting the rights of members therein" the act of April sixth one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three entitled "An act defining fraternal beneficial and relief societies and their status authorizing them to create subordinate lodges and to pay benefits upon the sickness disability or death of their members from funds collected by dues and assessments therein providing for funds registration in the office of the Insurance Commissioner and requiring that they shall make annual reports to him and exempting them from taxation and from the supervision of the Insurance Commissioner" the act of June twenty-fifth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five entitled "An act to provide for the person upon whom service shall be had by legal process in the case of fraternal beneficial and relief societies whose status is defined by the Act of Assembly entitled 'An act defining fraternal beneficial and relief societies and their status authorizing them to create subordinate lodges and to pay benefits upon the sickness, disability or death of their members from funds collected by dues and assessments therein providing for their registration in the office of the Insurance Commissioner and requiring that they shall make annual reports to him and exempting them from taxation and from the supervision of the Insurance Commissioner' approved the sixth day of April, Anno Domini, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three' the act of June twenty-fourth, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-seven entitled "An act to enable minors above the age of eighteen years to contract for membership in fraternal and beneficial societies" and paragraph nine of section two of the act approved April twenty-nine, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of certain corporations insofar as it applies to the incorporation of societies for the purpose of transacting any class of insurance" are repealed. All other acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are repealed.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

March 15, 1919.

To the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

In compliance with Joint Resolution No. 413, providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate and report upon the subject of old age pensions, we have the honor to transmit to your honorable body, the report which follows.

Respectfully,
 JAMES H. MAURER,
 Chairman.

FOREWORD.

This volume marks the result of a task undertaken with some misgiving. When the Commission had been appointed the time allotted to the work had been lessened by several months. But, even with our limited period of activity, we feel that the result of our efforts is not at all discreditable. This is to a great extent due to the hearty efforts of those who engaged in the outdoor services, covering the field of investigation, and who have given us valuable data. We were also much aided by the employers of the State, by the stewards and managers of charitable institutions, a number of university professors and the heads of the departments of the Federal and State Governments, to all of whom our thanks are due and tendered.

The Commission wishes to give due credit to Mr. Abraham Epstein, the Commissions' Director of Research, for his excellent service in bringing out this report. He has directed the out-door investigations, compiled the results and written the comments of this, our tentative accomplishment.

Much credit is also due to the faithful services rendered by Mr. Anatole Feldman and Miss G. E. Maeder, the assistants in the office.

We trust that all who study the pages of this report will derive equally, as much information from it, as we experience satisfaction in its presentation.

JAMES H. MAURER,
 Chairman.

INTRODUCTION.

I. HISTORY OF COMMISSION.

During the 1917 session of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, Honorable Governor Wm. C. Sproul, then a member of the Senate, introduced joint resolution No. 413, providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate and report upon the subject of old age pensions. The resolution follows:

"Whereas, Progressive legislation has been enacted in some States and nations establishing a system of pensions for aged and incapacitated citizens, and a number of plans for accomplishing this result have been suggested at various times in Pennsylvania;

"Therefore, be it resolved, That the Governor of this Commonwealth be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to appoint a commission, to consist of seven reputable citizens of Pennsylvania, who shall serve without compensation other than for their reasonable expenses, to look into the general subject of old-age pensions, and to investigate the various systems provided for this purpose in other nations and States, together with all the facts relating thereto, especially as bearing upon the industrial and other conditions prevailing in Pennsylvania, and with a view to their practical adaptability here. Said commission to have full powers to subpoena witnesses and to secure information under the authority of the Government of the Commonwealth, and to make its report to the Legislature not later than March fifteenth, one thousand nine hundred and nineteen. Said commission shall consist of two members of the bar of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, who have studied social problems, two employers of labor, two members of recognized labor organizations, and one citizen of the Commonwealth, who shall be a woman experienced in the study of social problems. Said commission shall formulate such plans for its organization and work as may seem desirable to its membership; and an appropriation of five thousand dollars ($5,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby specifically made for the purpose of carrying out the work of said commission." The resolution was approved by Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh on the 25th of July, 1917.

In accordance with the provisions of the resolution, Governor Brumbaugh appointed the following persons as members of the Commission: Judges Robert S. Frazer and Emery A. Walling, representing the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania; Messrs. Wilson H. Brown, of Philadelphia and David S. Ludlum, of Ardmore, representing employers of labor; Messrs. James H. Maurer, of Reading and Harry W. Semple, of Philadelphia, representing organized labor and Mrs. Edwin C. Grice, of Philadelphia. The first meeting of the Commission was held in the Governor's office, on November 20th, 1917. At this meeting, Mr. James H. Maurer was elected permanent chairman. A short time later Judges Frazer and Walling sent in their resignations because they felt it inadvisable for judges of the Supreme Court to serve on a commission and help draft legislation which they might in the future be called upon to judge with reference to its constitutionality. In their stead, Governor Brumbaugh appointed Messrs. Warren K. Miller, of Allentown, and Alvin C. Spindler, of Pittsburgh, as representatives of the bar. In October, 1918, the Commission lost, through death, two of its most active members in Wilson H. Brown and Warren K. Miller. The latter's place is now filled by Mr. Allen W. Hagenbach, of Allentown. The place of Wilson H. Brown is still vacant.

The first organization meeting of the Commission did not occur until February, 1918. At this time the Commission engaged a secretary who gave part time to the Commission's work. The intensive work of the Commission did not begin until the engagement of Mr. Abraham Epstein, as Director of the Commission's researches in the latter part of June, 1918.

II. SCOPE OF COMMISSION'S WORK.

The resolution specified that the Commission "look into the general subject of old-age pensions, and to investigate the various systems provided for this purpose in other nations and States, together with all the facts relating thereto, especially as bearing upon the industrial and other conditions prevailing in Pennsylvania, and with a view to their practical adaptability here." To comply with this was an immense task in the short period of time left. The Commission was immediately confronted with numerous perplexing problems. The resolution required it to answer (1) with regard to the general subject of old age pensions; (2) as to the various systems provided for this purpose by other states and nations and (3) as to the soundness and need of such action in Pennsylvania. From the start, however, it became aware that in addition to the above, it would also be required to examine what has already been done in this State and its adequacy to meet the needs; the mistakes pointed out and the improvements suggested in the existing provisions by students of the problem. It also knew that if it determines that a pension or insurance scheme is necessary in Pennsylvania, in order to cope with the needs of the aged, it would have to decide as to the exact plan for such a system. Shall it be a system of voluntary savings, compulsory-contributory insurance, or straight pensions by the State? If a contributory plan is suggested, the question is raised as to who shall contribute and what amounts? How shall it be collected? If gratuitous pensions are to be granted, how shall it be administered? At what age shall a pension be given? Of what amount shall it be? What shall be the qualifications for a pension? What shall be done with the disabled or injured? Will it be in harmony with existing conditions of wages and standards of living? What effect will it have upon self-dependence and thrift? What do the people of this Commonwealth think and desire? And finally, what is the most appropriate and most constructive form of legislation the Commission can suggest, which would insure its passage by the legislature and its approval by the great majority of the citizens of this Commonwealth? In planning its work, the Commission realized that duplication of the work done by other Commissions and individuals was a great waste of time. It has, therefore, carefully examined the work already done by other State Commissions, federal departments and various students of the problem before undertaking its own investigations. It was also aware that co-operation with agencies and individuals working along the same lines were invaluable, and the Commission has everywhere sought to secure the co-operation of such groups. While the Commission fully appreciates, and does not at all minimize the value of public hearings in legislative matters—where representatives of various groups are given the opportunity of expressing their ideas upon the subject,—it became convinced, after one or two such hearings, that they were of little value, unless the Commission is equipped with some facts and knowledge of the subject to be discussed. Most of the material, ordinarily presented at such hearings, are largely repetitions, or reiterations of opinions held by individuals, often with no facts to substantiate them.

In its attempt, to comply with the spirit, as well as with the specific provisions of the resolution to the best of its ability, within the remaining period of time, the Commission deemed it necessary, in order to look into the general subject of old age pensions, to examine carefully its origin, the plans already adopted by the different foreign countries and the proposed plans of insurance or pensions. Fortunately, much of this material has been already presented and discussed by various state commissions and other individuals interested in the subjects. In order to ascertain the conditions and the needs of the aged in Pennsylvania, the Commission found it essential to deal not only with the effects of dependency and aged poverty, but also to learn something of the causes underlying such dependency. To do this, it was not sufficient to confine the investigations to the dependent classes alone. At the very outset, the Commission became cognizant of the fact that no intelligent idea of the problem of aged dependency could be obtained without a study of those aged, although nominally non-dependent, are nevertheless, in need of, and entitled to some assistance.

III. METHODS OF PROCEDURE.

With the above outlined aims in mind, the Commission proceeded with its investigations in the following manner. It held personal interviews with 3,405 inmates, 50 years of age and over, in 60 almshouses in the State. Information was collected with regard to the age of the inmates, at time of investigation, and time of admission, nativity, family connections, physical condition, cause of disability, occupation engaged in, weekly earnings, sources of income, means of outside support, etc. Interviews of a similar nature were also held with 2,170 inmates in 65 fraternal and benevolent homes for the aged in the State. Information, concerning identical points, of nearly 500 aged recipients of private relief was ascertained from the records of a number of charity organizations in the State. With reference to the non-dependent aged, house-to-house canvasses of several sections in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Reading were conducted by the Commission's agents. Nearly 4,500 men and women, 50 years of age and over, in these cities, were interviewed along the lines enumerated above.

In order to obtain some idea as to the truth of the often repeated assertions, that most paupers are a worthless lot, and are generally recruited from the ne'er-do-well class, the Commission selected at random about 100 cases of almshouse residents and followed these up by inquiries of their former employers with reference to their general character, length of service, quality of service rendered, etc.

Because of limited funds and time, the Commission was unable to look exhaustively into the general conditions of the almshouses and their management. It has, however, attempted to secure, as much knowledge as was possible under the circumstances, regarding the legal provisions and status of the poorhouses and aged homes; the relation of the State Board of Public Charities to these institutions; the average cost per capita per inmates in these institutions, and the problem of outdoor relief. It has also succeeded in making a detailed budget study of at least one county home, regarding the farm products produced, the amounts and kinds of food consumed by the stewards and inmates respectively, and the actual per capita cost of the inmates, when all expenses were considered.

The extent and nature of the existing means provided for the protection against old age was ascertained by the Commission after a careful examination of all the pension schemes existing in the State. These included the pension systems adopted by the various industrial concerns, railroads, municipalities, the State, the United States, fraternal organizations and trade unions.

Being unable, because of the difficulties of war conditions, to secure first hand information regarding the various systems of old age pensions as established in European countries, the Commission relied for its information upon this point, mostly upon authoritative treatises of other State Commissioners and individual students. An attempt was made, however, to bring the data up to date, as far as was possible.

IV. OUTSTANDING FEATURES.

The Commission's investigations so far, have brought out certain points to the fore-ground which, it is to be hoped, will throw light upon the whole problem of the aged. It appears from the Commission's study of the general aged population in Pennsylvania, that aside from the aged dependents found in almshouses, benevolent or fraternal homes, and those receiving public or private relief, there is a considerable proportion (43 per cent.) of the aged population, 50 years of age and over, in the State, who, when reaching old age, have no other means of support, except their own earnings. Only a small percentage (38 per cent.) of the general aged population in the State claim to possess personal property of their own. This would indicate clearly that many of these aged folks—when their power of earning is steadily declining with advancing years—will fall dependent, in many cases through no fault of their own, either upon the State or upon private charity. The investigations also show that in most of the industries in our State, many workers become unfit before reaching the age of 50, with the inevitable result of steadily decreasing earnings. In certain industries, like that of the railroads, for instance, it appears that more than half of the workers become impaired before their 50th birthday. It is also shown that when the prime of life has passed, many Pennsylvanians are compelled to change their occupations, which ordinarily involves a decline in wages. This decline, with the majority of aged people, appears to be due entirely to sickness and enfeebled age. The increasing problem of old age stands out even more significantly, when it is remembered that while the earning powers of most wage-workers are steadily decreasing, after a certain period of age has been attained, the expenditures on food and rents, even under normal price conditions, remain the same, while that on medicine is steadily increasing. The investigations also disclose that as far as Pennsylvania is concerned, the problem of the support of the aged is largely a native problem, rather than an imported one. The immigrant paupers all claim to have had a long term of residence in both the United States and Pennsylvania.

Regarding the aged paupers and the non-dependant aged classes, the outstanding differences lie, it would appear, in the respective family connections and physical conditions. In the almshouse pauper group, 40 per cent. were found to be single, 39 per cent. widowed, and only 16.9 per cent. married. Among the inmates of benevolent homes for the aged, the percentages were: 30.1 single; 58.3 widowed; and only 7.8 married. More than 65 per cent. of both of these groups had no children living, and of those that had children, more than 90 per cent. were reported unable to help support. On the other hand, among the non-dependent aged, only 5.4 per cent. were found to be single, 38.2 were widowed, while 55.1 per cent. were married and still living together. Only 10.6 per cent. of the latter group had no children living. Again, of the paupers, nearly 90 per cent. had never possessed any property, while the percentage of the propertyless among the non-dependent aged, was 62 per cent. With regard to the physical condition, it is also shown that while 64 per cent. of the aged persons residing in their own homes were still in fair or sound physical health, the percentage of those in good health in pauper institutions was 35.9, in the case of the inmates of the benevolent institutions, and only 12.3 per cent. in the case of the almshouse inmates.

That dependency in Pennsylvania is not entirely due to the personal shortcomings of the individuals, is evidenced from the excellent recommendations given practically all the inmates of almshouses, followed up by the Commission, by their former employers. Giving due consideration to the fact that most humans will strain a point rather than give a poor recommendation, the reliable qualities of these inmates are evidenced nevertheless, from the fact that most of these inmates have served for long periods of time with one employer (30 per cent. serving for more than 10 years).

The Commission's investigations also disclose an exceedingly confusing and bewildering system of management of our county poorhouses. Not only do many of the officials connected with these institutions, have little knowledge of the problems involved in the care of the aged, but there is obviously a laxity in the management of these institutions and the distribution of county funds. The State supervision of these aged homes is insufficient, loose and hardly competent. Careful records are kept in only few institutions. There is no uniform method of accounting. Computations of costs are made in almost as many forms and methods as the men making them. Many of the per capita costs of almshouses given in the reports of the Board of Public Charities do not represent the actual cost. The latter do not include the interest upon the permanent investment and in many cases, do not include the value of farm products. According to the Commission's estimate from records submitted by the directors of the poor to the State Board of Public Charities, the average cost per capita per inmate, in 1917, was $5.87 per week. The cost in the private institutions was even higher than that. It is also shown that in a few instances the per capita costs were more than abnormally high.

From the Commission's study of the existing means providing for the protection of the aged and superannuated, it is also apparent that they are insufficient and can never be expected to meet the situation to any extent. It is shown that of all the numerous forms of aged benefits provided, only about 10,000 aged people in the State are actually benefited. Of the numerous large industries in Pennsylvania only about twenty make it a rule to care for their aged employes after long and faithful service. While all the large railroads in the State pension their faithful workers—after a long period of service—the number of railroad workers actually benefited, as compared with the total number of workers in this industry, is insignificant. It also appears that only the first and second class cities in Pennsylvania provide against the old age of their various municipal employes. The number of persons who may expect old age benefits, as such, from fraternal or trade union organizations is hardly worth considering.

In the third and fourth chapters of this report, the Commission has aimed to present in a concise and brief manner the methods advocated and adopted by various countries in dealing with the aged problem. The advantages and disadvantages, and the arguments in favor and against each particular scheme are presented, it is hoped, in an impartial fashion. It was the purpose of the Commission to present this solely from the student's attitude, as the Commission itself, because of the lack of time and the disputed and contradictory facts is, as yet, unable to decide upon the merits or demerits of any of the schemes presented, and as to their applicability in Pennsylvania.

V. CONCLUDING REMARKS.

In the following report, the Commission designed to assemble certain concrete facts and it is presenting them with no sense of finality. Not only does the Commission consider its investigations still incomplete, but no attempt has been made in the following pages, to exhaust the possibilities of further statistical calculations and combinations. In presenting its findings, as embodied in this report, only the salient features of the analyzed data have been discussed. The Commission is fully aware of its shortcomings. The latter was partly due to the limited funds and time at its disposal, and to the extraordinary times in which it was forced to do its work. The phases still ahead of it are too numerous to be mentioned. Because of the disputed and contradictory arguments regarding the various schemes established by foreign countries, and because during the period of war it was difficult to secure first-hand information upon the subject, the Commission is still unable to decide upon the favorable points of these various claims, or to decide upon any constructive measure of legislation at this time. The war has proved the acid test of the soundness of many a social measure, and the Commission would, therefore, urge further study of these schemes as they have been affected and as they have survived in the countries having just finished the war. As far as conditions in Pennsylvania are concerned, the Commission deems it still necessary to secure more complete information, as to the number of people actually in need when reaching old age. It is also important to secure an approximate estimate of the sums now expended upon the dependent aged by the different public and private relief organizations. In the consideration of a contributory or non-contributory system of pensions, it is still important to secure more light regarding the exact incomes and expenditures of certain classes of wage-earners in the State. This would be possible only after complete budget studies were made of representative families in several parts of the State. Again, it may be essential to make a complete enumeration of the aged people in Pennsylvania before the best method of legislation can be proposed. The Commission, therefore, presents in this report the findings it has gathered, and hopes, that whether through itself or another body, the study of the problem will be further carried on and promoted to a successful termination.

Fully conscious of its shortcomings and incompleteness, the Commission, nevertheless, feels most happy to state that it has tried to do the best with the limitations it had to confront. It is its most cherished hope that much of the data collected will prove of real benefit, not only to this Commonwealth, but to other states and agencies, who in common, aim to see a better and happier world to come.

CHAPTER I.

THE PROBLEM OF THE AGED IN PENNSYLVANIA

Study of the Aged Inmates in Almshouses and Discussion of Some Related Phases.

In a study of the aged population in Pennsylvania, the senile group residing in the almshouses and poor districts of the different counties, constitutes a large and important factor. This class of dependents is supported almost entirely by taxation, and as such, its consideration is of prime importance. For the purpose of studying the problem of aged dependency in Pennsylvania, it is highly essential that the present social and economic status of these inmates be ascertained. This alone, however, would be of little value if no light was secured upon their previous condition and the causes that led to and underlie their dependency. There being very meager records of the inmates kept by the different almshouses, the Commission deemed it necessary—in order to obtain as complete data as possible—to interview these inmates individually with reference to the desired facts. A card schedule for this purpose was devised and printed.

The enormous task of interviewing the inmates in the numerous almshouses and poor districts in the State, with the limited time and money the Commission had at its disposal, could not have been completed without the generous co-operation and assistance extended by the different heads of the institutions. The Commission wishes herewith, to acknowledge its gratitude to the three score or more superintendents and stewards, who although confronted with many difficulties—that of a depleted force due to the war and the ravages of the Influenza Epidemic—have given much of their time and generous co-operation. In many instances several hundred inmates were interviewed for the purpose of the Commission. Of the 82 almshouses in the State, 58 have returned the schedules containing the interviews with their inmates. Only about a dozen institutions have either not replied to our several letters or have not returned the schedules forwarded them. And only one—Berk County Almshouse—definitely refused to co-operate with the Commission.

As in all our studies, we have here dealt only with the inmates 50 years of age and over. A total of 3,405 aged inmates were interrogated in 58 different almshouses and poor districts in all parts of the State. Some of the largest institutions canvassed were: the Philadelphia Almshouse, where 744 men and women were interviewed; Pittsburgh City Home where over 300 residents were interviewed and Allegheny County Home, and Central Poor District of Luzerne County where 205 and 225 inmates were questioned respectively. In approximately a dozen other places, over 100 inmates in each were canvassed while all the inmates of the smaller places were interviewed. Practically all the schedules were filled out by the individual heads of the institutions or by competent representatives through personal interviews. Only the inmates of the Philadelphia Almshouse and Dauphin County Almshouse were canvassed by the Commission's agents.

A letter of inquiry addressed to the Poor Directors of a number of counties with regard to the total number of inmates in their respective almshouses, and the percentage of those who are 50 years of age and over, shows—for those who responded to our request—that 74.75 per cent. of the total number of inmates are 50 years of age and over. The percentage for the same age group in 1910, as given by the U. S. Census of Paupers, was 69.6 per cent. for Pennsylvania and 73 per cent. for the whole United States.

Ages of Inmates at Time of Investigation.

Age Period.	Number	Per Cent.
50 to 55	444	13.4
55 to 60	475	13.9
60 to 65	483	14.1
65 to 70	658	19.3
70 to 75	518	15.2
75 to 85	587	17.2
85 to 100	128	3.8
Not stated	112	3.1
	3405	100.0

The preceding table indicates that of the 3,405 inmates investigated, 27.3 per cent. were under sixty years of age; 33.4 per cent. were between 60 and 70 and 36.2 per cent. were over 70 years of age.

Ages of Inmates at Time of Admission.

Age Period.	Number	Per Cent.
Under 30	34	1.00
30 to 40	92	3.60
50 to 55	395	11.52
55 to 60	453	13.35
60 to 65	535	15.60
65 to 70	553	16.30
70 to 75	388	11.44
75 to 80	253	7.46
80 to 90	188	5.44
90 and over	15	.44
Not stated	185	5.45
	3391	100.00

From the second table it appears that only about 13 per cent. were admitted under 50 years of age; 24.87 per cent. were admitted between the ages of 50 and 60; 31.9 per cent. between 60 and 70, while over 24.78 per cent. were admitted after they had reached their seventieth year. A comparison between our figures and those obtained by the Massachusetts Commission on Old Age Pensions in 1908 is of interest. In the New England State only 8 per cent. of those investigated entered the almshouse before the age of 60 and 92 per cent. had passed their sixtieth year before they took up residence in the almshouse. The higher rate of those entering almshouses below the sixtieth year in Pennsylvania may be explained by the highly developed industries peculiar to this Commonwealth, which, requiring greater physical stress, wear out and incapacitate men at an earlier age. For those admitted during the year 1910 to the almshouses of the entire country, the percentages were 17.7 between 50 to 59; 18 from 60 to 69 and 15.3 per cent. over 70 years.*

As would be expected, the age of admission is considerably lower than the age given at time of investigation. It is obvious, that the great majority of the aged inmates enter the institution late in life. This would indicate a close relationship between institutional pauperism and old age. The combination of advanced years and infirmity, when coupled with the fact, that in most cases these people have no one to depend or fall back upon is—as will be seen later—the chief cause compelling an aged person to go to the poorhouse. Most men will stay out of an almshouse as long as they can. When they are compelled to take up residence there, it is usually not due to personal or other misfortunes in earlier years, but in most cases is the result of feebleness and lack of assistance from other sources.

Number of Years in Institution.

Length of Time.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
Under 1 year	626	18.40
1 year to 3 years	1135	33.33
3 years to 5 years	487	14.30
5 years to 10 years	520	15.27
10 years to 15 years	232	6.81
15 years to 20 years	106	3.11
20 years and over	160	4.70
Not stated	139	4.08
	3405	100.00

The above table is noteworthy. It is clear that the almshouses are to a large extent only temporary shelter places. Nearly 52 per cent. have been in the almshouse less than three years; 29.57 per cent. have been there from 3 to 10 years, and only 14.62 per cent. lived there more than 10 years. The 1910 census report of the paupers in Pennsylvania shows very similar percentage; 54.2 per cent. residing in the almshouse less than three years; 29.8 per cent. from three to ten years and 15.6 per cent. who have resided for a longer period than ten years. For the entire United States, of those investigated in 1910, 53 per cent. were in almshouses less than three years; 28.6 per cent. resided there from three to ten years and only 17.6 per cent. were in almshouses for a longer period than 10 years.

There are no figures available to show what percentage of the aged almshouse inmates in Pennsylvania are discharged for various reasons and the percentage of those that die during the same period. In the 1916 Report of the State Board of Public Charities, the percentage of discharged persons in almshouses is given as 73.43 per cent. and the percentage of those who died as 17.47 per cent. These percentages, however, are for the entire almshouse population; and the rate of those removed by death is obviously higher for the aged population. In the entire United States during the year 1910, according to the U. S. Census Report of Paupers in Almshouses, 17,486 deaths occurred among paupers in poorhouses. This number amounts to a death rate of 207.7 per 1,000 of the almshouse population at the beginning of the year. The death rate in the general population of the registration states in 1910, was 14.7 per 1,000. The census figures for 1910 also show that in the almshouses, throughout the United States, the average length of stay in these institutions is somewhat greater for females than for males. Of the males, one-third have been in institutions less than one year; of the females one fourth. The approximate average length of stay was 4.9 years for males as compared with 6.6 for females. This is, of course to be expected.

*The lower percentages given by the census are due to the fact that the latter percentages were compared with the total almshouse population, while the percentage given in Table No. 2 are based on the group 50 years of age and over.

Number of Admissions to the Almshouses.

Number of Times Admitted.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
Admitted for the first time	2166	78.93
1 to 3 times	377	13.74
3 to 5 times	128	4.66
5 to 10 times	54	1.96
10 to 15 times	10	.36
15 to 20 times	7	.25
20 times and over	3	.10
	2745	100.00

The table showing the number of admissions of the canvassed inmates gives a higher rate of single admissions in Pennsylvania than that prevalent in the whole United States. Seventy-nine per cent. of the inmates investigated by the Commission were admitted for the first time; 13.74 per cent. had been admitted once or twice before and only 7.33 per cent. had three or more admissions to their credit. For the United States as a whole, of those in pauper houses during 1910, 63.3 per cent. were admitted for the first time; 24.3 per cent. had from one to three previous admissions, while 12.5 per cent. were admitted three or more times. It would appear that in Pennsylvania the almshouses are used as mere temporary relief agencies to a lesser extent than they are in other states. This is perhaps explained by the fact that it is more difficult for aged men to find suitable work in our industries than is the case in other states. On the other hand, as was pointed out before, Pennsylvanians may be more worn out in their old age than are those who are accustomed to lighter labors in their younger days.

TABLE NUMBER 5.

Sex.	Number	Per Cent.
Male	2136	62.74
Female	1269	37.26
	3405	100.00

Table number five shows the preponderance of aged males over aged females in the almshouse population. While the above figures are somewhat lower than the percentages given in the 1910 Census of the Paupers in Pennsylvania—68.9 per cent. for males and 31.1 per cent. for females—this may be explained again by the fact that the Commission's enumeration was only of those 50 years of age and over while that of the census included all inmates. It is also interesting to remark that the above percentages found by the Commission are in exact agreement with the percentages found by the Massachusetts' Commission on Old Age Pensions in its study in 1908. The comparative difference between the sexes in the almshouses and that prevailing in the entire State population is significant. According to the Thirteenth United States Census, the percentage of males in the entire State population was 51.4 per cent. and that of females 48.6 per cent. The reasons for the disproportionate number of male paupers in institutions over female paupers may be explained in several ways. Children or relatives will make greater sacrifices in order to keep an old mother at home and prevent her going to a poorhouse, than they would for an aged father or other male relative. Aside from the sentimental reasons involved, the presence of an old woman around the home—unless she is absolutely invalided—entails little burden, as she can be made useful in numerous ways. This, however, is not the case with an aged man. Aged women are also more generously provided for by private charity than are aged men. The percentages of aged men and women who are inmates of benevolent and private Homes for the Aged, as stated elsewhere, are 23.54 and 76.46 per cent. respectively. The relationship here is thus radically reversed from that of the almshouse population.

Conjugal Condition.	Number.	Per Cent.
Single	1361	40.05
Married	577	16.94
Widowed	1336	39.14
Divorced	23	.67
Separated	3	.10
Not stated	105	3.10
	3405	100.00

The foregoing table, with respect to the conjugal condition of almshouse inmates, is of more than passing significance. It will be observed that the single and widowed, constitute nearly eighty per cent. of the total number of inmates. The marital conditions of people over forty-five years of age in the entire State, as given in the United States Census for 1910, was for males, single 9.1 per cent.; married 77.7 per cent. and widowed 12.6 per cent.; and for women the percentage for those over 45 years of age was, single, 10 per cent., married 60.3 per cent. and widowed 29.2 per cent. The marital conditions of paupers, for the entire United States as given by the census is as follows: Single 50.2 per cent.; widowed 32.5 per cent.; married 13.7 per cent.

Some light may be shed on the problem of aged pauperism, by comparing the preceding figures with those obtained from the house-to-house studies conducted by the Commission. In the latter group the respective percentages are: Single, 5.4 per cent.; married, 55.5 per cent., and widowed, 38.3 per cent. These figures would seem to indicate that the prime reason why the aged poor cannot remain in their own homes, or in those of their parents or close relatives is because, as a rule, most of these institutional paupers have no one to fall back upon in their declining days. Having no children of their own, their parents dead, and in many cases, with few relatives, to be relied upon, these paupers seek the institution as the last resort for shelter and nourishment. The wide difference between the populations of single people in the almshouses and those living at home, doubtless, explains why the former are inmates of pauper institutions and the latter are classed as "non-dependent."

It may be interesting at this point, to call attention to the different conclusions arrived at by the Massachusetts Commission with reference to the same phase. In Massachusetts, the Commission found that "the average of single persons is only 15.1 per cent. among the aged poor, whereas in the general population of the State it is 55.54 per cent." Based on this, the Commission concludes: "It is evident that the heavier burdens imposed by family life contribute something towards the volume of poverty in the State." This inference is certainly not warranted from the figures obtained by the Commission or from the figures of the U. S. Pauper Census of 1910. Even in Massachusetts the percentage of widowed in the institutions in all classes averaged 52.7 per cent. as compared with 6.36 per cent. in the general population of the State. The Commission's investigations showed throughout that where there were children or other relatives able to help, all efforts were made to assist and support the aged person, rather than send him or her to the poorhouse.

The small percentage of married persons in the almshouses is worthy of notice. Only 16.94 per cent. are married. The percentage of married paupers as given in the United States Pauper Census is even lower than this figure—13.7 per cent. This is to be contrasted with 55.5 per cent. found in the house-to-house studies and 69 per cent. for those over 45 years of age in the entire State population, according to the Thirteenth U. S. Census. While the percentage of this group in pauper institutions is comparatively small, it constitutes nevertheless, the most acute problem of institutional care. Of those having their mates living, only 9.9 per cent. were residing together in the same institution; 90.1 per cent. were separated and compelled to give up home ties and life-time associations in order to avail themselves of the benefits of the poorhouse. About 5 per cent. of the mates living are confined in penal institutions or insane asylums. Thirty-two per cent. live in other poorhouses while the great majority, it appears, manage to stay with some friend or relative. As this group admittedly, has a home, a system of relief which would insure the advantages of home environment over that of the institution has been generally recognized as superior and urged by students of the problem.*

The above table further emphasizes the isolation of the majority of the inmates who must avail themselves the comforts of the almshouse. Sixty-three and 51 hundredths per cent. of those investigated have no children living; 13.5 per cent. have but one child living, while only 23 per cent. have two or more children living. A comparison at this point with the same aged group studied in the household canvasses is significant. In the latter group, only 10.63 per cent. had no children living; 15.8 per cent. had only one child, while nearly 70 per cent. had two or more children alive.

The data obtained with regard to the ages of the children living shows that more than 13 per cent. of them are adult, indicating that this aged group has few dependents. On the other hand, 89.93 per cent. of these children are reported as unable to support their parents. The majority of these children are burdened with large families of their own. Most of them also belong to the ranks of the unskilled workers and earn wages which are hardly sufficient to maintain their own families in comfort. Only a very small percentage, namely: 4.15 per cent. have children believed to be fully able to support their parents, while an additional 6.86 per cent. are able to help support the parents if ready to make the required sacrifices.

Only 22 out of a total of 1,179 cases investigated are reported as having children fully able to support them but who refused to do so. A similar study by the Ohio Commission on Health and Old Age Insurance, conducted at the same time, gives 7 per cent. of the children fully able to support their parents, but who refuse to do so. It would seem from this, that filial duty is more generally recognized by the people of our own State than it is in our neighboring State. The laws of Pennsylvania obligate children to maintain their parents. The percentage, however, of those who refuse to do so, is so small as to constitute a negligible problem.

Nearly 95 per cent. of the aged inmates investigated, have no other relations able to help support them. The scanty family connections of the inmates are very significant in considering the establishment of a State-wide pension system and the amounts to be allowed. The majority, having neither children nor relatives with whom they could reside, could hardly leave the institution when granted a small pension. Most of the inmates would have to remain in the institution unless the sum granted them would be sufficient to provide them with at least as much comfort in a private family as those obtained in the poorhouse.

In 1910, according to the United States Census, the total native born in Pennsylvania was 6,028,994 or 81.2 per cent. and the total foreign born was 1,442,374, or 18.8 per cent. In 1900 the percentages were 84.4 per cent. and 15.6 per cent. respectively. This gives an increase of 3.2 per cent. in the foreign born in the State during the ten-year period. It is evident from the above table that the percentage of paupers who are of foreign birth is much higher than the percentage of foreign born in the general population. The former group constitutes 44 per cent. of the total number in almshouses or more than double the percentage of foreigners in the entire State population. The percentage of foreign born in almshouses in 1910 for the entire United States was 39.3 per cent., while the percentage of foreign born in the same year in the population of the country was 14.7. What has been said in the preceding pages about the family connections of the almshouse inmates generally, is even more aggravated in the case of foreign born, who in many instances leave all their family ties behind them.

Of the native born, only a small percentage, 12.71, were born in other states. Forty-four per cent. were born in Pennsylvania. Although the percentage of paupers born in other states is somewhat greater than the percentage of those born in other states in the entire population—90.6 per cent. for those born in Pennsylvania and only 9.4 per cent. of those born in other states in the population of 1910—it is nevertheless true that the great bulk of aged pauperism in this State is home grown rather than imported.

*It may not be amiss to relate at this point the following conversation taken from a letter by Mr. T. V. Powderly, in the "Report of Committee on Miners' Home and Pension," Page 24-25. It tells the story of the National Soldiers' Home, located in the District of Columbia. The story follows: "One day I met an inmate of the Home and during our conversation he informed me that a feeling of discontent pervaded the whole place, that but few were satisfied. I remarked that I had heard quite a few of the inmates were crazy and he confirmed the statement. I asked how many men were in the Home. He said, 'eight hundred and seventy-eight.' My next question was, 'How many of the inmates are crazy?' His answer, solemnly stated, was, 'eight hundred and seventy-eight.' When I expressed surprise, he explained: "Of course that statement of mine is an exaggeration. I don't mean to infer that every man in the Home is insane in the popular acceptance of that term, but they are all crazy for a sight of their old homes, for the sound of loved ones' voices, for the companionship of old home friends. Our lives are lonesome to a degree. We were all strangers to each other until a short time ago, and being thrown suddenly together we cannot assimilate or form new friendships that are anything like the old ones. Some of us have wives and children back home and it is heartbreaking to be so far away from and out of sight and sound of them."

Of the 1,191 foreign paupers, from whom the country of birth was ascertained, 38.79 per cent. claimed Ireland as the country of their birth. Germany was the fatherland of 20.99 per cent. England and Austria were the native lands of 9.57 per cent. and 9.23 per cent., respectively. Wales, Scotland and Poland contributed each less than 5 per cent., while France, Italy, Russia, Norway and Switzerland added each less than 2 per cent.

The ranking of the foreign born in the State at large in 1910 was as follows: Austrians, 17.5 per cent., Russians, 16.7 per cent., Germans and Italians each 13.6 per cent., while Ireland ranked fifth with 11.5 per cent. It is of interest to note that while Austria leads the foreign born in the entire State population it is the fourth on the list of those contributing aged paupers; and Russia, the second in the general foreign born population, contributes less than 2 per cent. to the pauper institutions. On the other hand, Ireland, ranking fifth in the entire foreign born population in the State, contributes more than four times the number furnished by the highest ranking foreign group, and more than twenty times the foreign group ranking second in the general population. Germany ranking third in the foreign born population of the entire State, ranks second in the number of paupers contributed, while Italy, with a ratio similar to that of Germany in the entire State population, contributes only 2 per cent. to the pauper population.

The strikingly high percentage of foreign born paupers furnished by Ireland and Germany, as compared with those immigrants who come from the east and south of Europe, is significant. It can only be explained by the fact that the immigration from the latter countries is of comparatively recent date. Most immigrants come here in their prime of life; and it would appear that for a time they are able to work and remain away from the poorhouses. Another factor may perhaps be found in the language difficulties encountered by the foreigners from the East and South European countries. Able to converse only in their native tongues, these immigrants make greater efforts to remain away from public poorhouses, where the only language spoken is foreign to them. It is also a fact that the earlier classes of immigrants have come here to stay, while many of the more recent types of immigrants return to their native lands when approaching old age. The fact, moreover, that most of these inmates come from the lowest ranks of labor, and that the Irish and Germans have admittedly, a comparatively higher standard of living, would indicate a lesser ability in this group to save and provide for old age.

The percentage of naturalized voters among the foreign born in almshouses is 70.3 per cent. The percentage of voters in this group is much higher than among the foreign born in the general population of the State. Only 33.6 per cent. are naturalized in the latter group.

TABLE NUMBER 10.

20 to 30 years	177	16.03
30 years and over	854	77.35
	1104	100.00

Only 2 per cent. of the foreign born answering this question were here less than 10 years; nearly 5 per cent. were in the United States from 10 to 20 years; 16.36 per cent. resided here from 20 to 30 years and 77.35 per cent. lived in this country 30 years and more. For the entire United States pauper population of 1910, the percentages were as follows: Less than 10 years in the United States, 3.5; ten to 19 years, 6.04; twenty years and over, 79.9 per cent. These figures further bear out the fact that recent immigrants do not contribute any considerable number of candidates to the aged almshouse population.

	1052	100.00

Of the aged inmates who were born either in foreign countries or in other States of the Union, only about 5.5 per cent. were residing in Pennsylvania less than 10 years. Twenty-three per cent. were residents of the State from 10 to 30 years, while 71 per cent. lived here 30 years and more.

TABLE NUMBER 12.

Physical Condition of the Aged Inmates.

Condition.	Number.	Per Cent.
Sound or fair health	436	12.80
Bad or poor health	985	28.92
Crippled, maimed or deformed	450	13.21
Defective in sight or hearing	316	9.30

Kidney Trouble	15	.44
Tuberculosis	26	.76
Epileptic	117	3.43
Dropsy	10	.30
Not stated	364	10.70
	3405	100.00

One would naturally expect to find a great number of the aged in almshouses to possess some sort of physical defect. Of the 3,405 cases investigated, only 12.80 per cent. are reported as being in good or fair health. Of those reported in bad or poor physical condition 28.92 per cent. were in a general state of poor health; 13.21 per cent. were crippled, maimed or deformed; 9.04 per cent. were feeble-minded; 9.3 per cent. were defective in sight or hearing; 7.25 per cent. were rheumatic; quite a number were epileptic and a number were suffering from various diseases. Of the total number investigated only 5 per cent. were reported as able bodied; 40 per cent. were partially disabled, while 55 per cent. were totally incapacitated. For the same age group in the house-to-house studies, 64.3 per cent. are reported in good or fair health, and only 35 per cent. are in poor health. In the total pauper population of the United States in 1910, the percentage of able-bodied was 20.64 per cent. The leading defects for the United States as a whole are given as follows: Old and infirm, 32.08 per cent.; feeble-minded, 24.68 per cent.; crippled, maimed or deformed, 25.64 per cent., with small percentages due to various other causes. The foregoing may be indicative of the prevailing physical defects of the aged inmates.

A study of 22 typical infirmaries by the Ohio Commission showed that out of the 2,260 cases investigated, 830 or 36.46 per cent. were old and infirm; 305 or 13.4 per cent. were defective mentally and 1,125 or 49.77 per cent. suffered from disease or physical defects. These figures, secured in the same year, show great similarity to ours, and from the view point of establishing a pension for all, it is evident that the small percentage of able-bodied in this group of dependents would not take away a great number of these inmates from the institutions. The causes of disability are given in the following table:

TABLE NUMBER 13.
Causes of Disability.

Cause.	Number.	Per Cent.
Sickness	627	34.5
Old age	603	33.4
Accident	230	12.7
Loss of limb or organ	76	4.2
Feeble-mindedness	146	7.7
Paralysis	53	3.0
Alcohol	81	4.5
	1816	100.00

The preceding table brings out what has been pointed out many times before i. e., that sickness is the chief factor in poverty and pauperism. Although 33.4 per cent. are reported as incapacitated directly because of old age it is probable that many of these became old prematurely due to sickness. The small percentage attributed to alcohol is significant when it is taken into consideration that in a few instances, the superintendents in filling out the schedules added intemperance as a cause in cases of accident or loss of limb.

TABLE NUMBER 14.

Skilled trades	76	55.08	23	16.07	28	20.28	11	7.79	138
Miners	55	48.24	23	20.18	29	25.44	7	6.14	114

The preceding table may shed some light upon the aged problem as affected by the particular Pennsylvania industries. The outstanding facts here are: (1) with the exception of those engaged on railroads, sickness—and not the industrial occupation directly—is the leading factor in incapacity. Only on railroad work does accident figure as the leading cause of incapacity. This is not only the case with the pauper group but holds true of the non-dependent group as well, as is shown in another part of this report. Sickness also ranks highest among indoor occupations as a cause of incapacity. Disability through old age follows next as a cause in this class of occupations. The latter cause also ranks highest among outdoor occupations and lowest among miners and various skilled trades. This is to be expected, as there are more men engaged in unskilled and casual occupations at a late period in life, than there are in any other group. The low rate of disability due to old age, attributed to skilled mechanics and miners may be explained by the fact that with the development of modern machine processes, men are scrapped much earlier in life and aged men are generally undesirable in the skilled trades. Miners, on the other hand, age prematurely, and in both occupations the accident rate runs high—25.44 per cent. for miners and 20.28 per cent. for skilled groups. Old age is not given as a cause of disability among railroad workers, doubtless, because of the disproportionate accident rate prevalent in that industry. Alcohol as a factor of disability is highest for skilled and sedentary trades, with casual occupations coming next, while railroad workers give the lowest rate.

TABLE NUMBER 15.

Previous Occupations and Occupations Before Admission.

Previous Occupations.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.	Last Occupation.	Per Cent.
Skilled and semi-skilled ...	485	19.10	348	17.94
Common and unskilled	1197	46.97	924	47.66

Professional	14	.55
Clerical	26	1.06	27	1.40
	2542	100.00	1939	100.00

It is evident, from the foregoing table, that there was little change in the nature of occupations the inmates were engaged in during their earlier years and those followed immediately preceding admission to the almshouse. Most of the inmates have been engaged in the same occupation all their lives. While the kinds of occupations given include almost every pursuit in life—professions not excluded—the great bulk is recruited from the ranks of the unskilled and common labor groups. More than 47 per cent. come from this Housekeeping and domestic service rank second with 27 per cent., followed by skilled and semi-skilled trades with 19.10 per cent. Other occupations yield but small percentages.

In the pauper population of the United States in 1910, the common and unskilled laboring groups furnished about 36 per cent. Farmers, planters, and dairy farmers constituted 12.1 per cent. of the entire United States pauper population, but constitute less than 2 per cent. in Pennsylvania. The different skilled trades also contribute considerable numbers to the entire United States pauper population.

TABLE NUMBER 16.

Weekly Wages Earned Earlier in Life and Immediately Preceding Admission.

Amount Earned per Week.	Earlier in life.	Per Cent.	Immediately preceding admission.	Per Cent.
Less than $3	113	8.93	100	10.20
$3 to $5	95	7.55	103	10.50
$5 to $8	200	15.82	200	20.42
$8 to $12	411	32.52	305	31.15

$40 and over	7	5.55	2	2.20
	1,264	100.00	979	100.00

The outstanding differences in the wages earned by the canvassed inmates in their earlier ages and that earned before admission is that while 32.30 per cent. earned less than $8.00 per week in their earlier years, a greater number or 44.12 per cent. were earning the same sum prior to their admission. On the other hand, while 61.07 per cent. were earning between $8.00 and $20.00 per week in their younger days, only 52.48 per cent. were earning the same amount at the time of admission. This would prove that the earning power of these inmates was gradually declining, due either to old age or similar causes. The small wages earned by the majority of the inmates also seem to show that many of these aged folk could not earn a sufficient sum to maintain themselves in comfort. Of those who reported their last earnings before admission, 72.27 per cent. were earning less than $12.00 per week; 21.33 per cent. earned between $12.00 and $20.00 per week and only 6.4 per cent. were making $20.00 or more a week.

TABLE NUMBER 17.

Cause of Loss of Earning Power.

Cause.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
Sickness	1151	63.70
Old age	385	21.31
Accident	174	9.63
Husband's death	21	1.16
Intemperance	76	4.20
	1807	100.00

The causes attributed to the decrease in earning power were given as follows: 63.7 per cent. claimed sickness as a cause; 21.31 per cent. attributed their loss of earning power to old age; accidents were the cause of 9.63 per cent; 4.20 per cent. was attributed to intemperance; and 1.16 per cent., in the case of women, lost all support by the death of their husbands.

Of more than 2,000 inmates questioned, as to their property holdings, 191 or 9.5 per cent. claimed to have had property above debts. More than 90 per cent. never possessed any property of their own. At the time of investigation less than 1 per cent. were receiving incomes from property holdings or savings. The losses sustained by those who previously owned property, were attributed to sickness by 35.5 per cent.; to need of immediate support by 34 per cent.; to fraud by 9 per cent.; to business failures and fire losses 14 per cent., and 3 per cent. lost property through bank failures, while a similar number lost their property through intemperance. Ninety-eight per cent. of those investigated had no source of income available at the time of investigation.

CHARACTER OF ALMSHOUSE PAUPERS.

"The records of the inmates are very imperfect from the fact that the inmates are so feeble-minded and infirm that the majority do not know their ages or their previous occupations. They are all natives of Pennsylvania, and all single or widowed, with the exception of one who is here because of desertion by her husband. None have any means of income, but one gets a soldier's pension. Two inmates have two brothers who have some property and, no doubt, would take them in their homes, if they were not feeble-minded. The class of people in the almshouse are those who can't keep themselves and would not know what to do with money if they had some."

"The dependents in almshouses are of such a character that it seems to me it is a waste of time as to their past life. Most of them were nothing but parasites in society all their days, not one worthy of an old age pension, if it could be had. They are mentally and morally degenerates; most of them foreign born, and half of them never naturalized. Tramps in summer and here in winter. The only record that could be had would be unreliable, for there is no way to obtain it but from them. Hence, we go into few details when they are admitted. The average life of an inmate has been a failure, largely due to the fact that they never realized what a successful life is."

The above typical expressions of sentiment come from two secretaries of the Poor Directors, in different parts of the State. From the preceding discussions something of the truth with reference to the statements of the nativity and naturalization of the inmates has been learned. It is obvious from this that a better understanding of the character of these inmates is not only essential when contemplating the establishment of a pension system for the aged, but is equally as necessary in order to comprehend the pauper problem as a whole. Assuming that the sentiments expressed in the last letter, are based upon facts, it would seem that the proper places for such people are the jails and workhouses rather than the almshouses. "Mental and moral degenerates" have no place in homes, presumably, for the relief of the worthy poor and infirm. If this is not the case it shows a fundamental laxity in the management of some of these homes. The connection of a person holding such views with an almshouse is dangerous and detrimental to the morale of the home and the welfare of the inmates. Such a person cannot be expected, but to look upon the inmates as wretched ingrates who must be treated like criminals, with the hope of reforming them—if not for this world, then for the next one. A home under such a person is little short of a jail.

The Commission considered this question of the character of the inmates of serious and vital importance. To undertake however, a following up of these inmates in their former localities and to ascertain their general characters from friends and relatives, was prohibitive with the limited time and money at the Commission's disposal. However, in order to obtain some light upon the point, a question with reference to the name and place of the last employer, and year when employed was inserted in the almshouse schedule. Because of the difficulty of finding the record of employes in many industries—where men are generally known by check number—the number that could be followed up, and from whom returns could be secured simmered down to somewhat more than 100. The cases followed up were selected at random from the residents of about thirty different almshouses and represent workers of varied occupations.

The letter addressed to the former employers requested information with regard to the length of time in employ, the quality of service rendered, the general character of the employe, and the reason for leaving employment.

Twenty per cent. of the answers received with regard to the time of employment stated that the men in question had worked less than six months; 21.5 per cent. were employed from six months to three years; 29 per cent. served from three to ten years, while 30 per cent. were engaged for ten years or more continuously.

As to the quality of service rendered, only 4.5 per cent. reported of bad service; 80 per cent. reported that the services were either satisfactory or good, while 15 per cent. reported of excellent service.

As to the general character of the employees, only 5.9 per cent. claimed that these former workers were drunkards or lazy; nearly 95 per cent. reported of good, honest and faithful characters.

The above is substantiated by the reasons given by the former employers for leaving their employment. Forty per cent. quit work because of sickness; fifteen per cent. because of old age; twenty-two per cent. either because the work was completed or the shop was shut down, while 20 per cent. gave no reason for leaving service and only 1.6 per cent. were discharged from their employment.

Some of the recommendations given these inmates are most interesting. The following few are typical ones:

"He had charge of our tool room and stock rooms and was one of the best men in this position we ever had. (H. B. Underwood & Co.)."

"We always considered him a good and reliable workman. (Pittsburgh Spring & Steel Co.)."

"Steady, industrious, reliable workman. (Pressed Steel Car Company)."

"Our superintendent reports Mr. W. as of excellent character, honest and did his work most satisfactorily. (Dorhan's Monitor Carpet Mills.)."

"A good steady man and a good mechanic. (Pennsylvania Iron Works)."

"This man was only disciplined three times during his 48 years of service with the Pennsylvania Railroad."

"Faithful employe while working in this colliery. (R. & R. C. & L. Co.)."

"He worked for me off and on as general utility man around the house and I always found him very willing and a good worker."

"He is a good printer and I never knew a more kind hearted and generous man."

"As far as we can judge from business connections with him, he is honest and deserving."

"L. W. was one of the best and most reliable men that worked for me. An A number one man."

The following include all the recommendations given, illustrating the opposite type of inmate:

"He owes my mother five meals and one night's lodging, to this date."

"Down and out on account of drink."

"He would absent himself at times for several weeks while on drinking bout."

"His father was foreman in the shop until his death. His son was never dependable on account of drink."

"Was a good teamster and good to his horses. One thing I am sorry to say, his money was all spent for booze."

MOVEMENT OF ALMSHOUSE POPULATION.

The ratio of almshouse paupers per 100,000 population in the United States, according to the 1910 Census, has declined steadily since 1880. In that year there were 132 paupers in almshouses to every 100,000 population. It fell to 116.6 in 1890; 101.4 in 1904 and 91.5 in 1910. The ratio of the growth of the pauper population between 1904 and 1910 was one-fourth as great as that of the total population. In Pennsylvania there were 9,054 paupers in almshouses in 1904, constituting 133.2 per 100,000 population. In 1910 the total pauper population was 9,606 or 123.5 per 100,000 population. Thus, while the total population between the two periods increased 12.8 per cent., the almshouse population increased 6.1 per cent. or less than half.*

*It is perhaps important to warn in this connection against the conclusion that this decline is due to a decrease in poverty or to the increased well being of the population as a whole. It is, undoubtedly, largely the result of the changes made since 1880 in the methods of dealing with the poor. Not only has there been more adequate legislation governing the administration and admissions to almshouses—which previously served as the place of refuge for all classes of unfortunates—but in addition, recent years have witnessed a tremendous development in all kinds of homes and asylums of fraternal and beneficial organizations. The latter have kept many people at home, who would have otherwise, been inmates of almshouses. Private organized charity has also done much to prevent the poor from going to pauper houses.

The number admitted during the year 1904 to the Pennsylvania almshouses was 9,738 or 143.3 per 100,000 population. In 1910, 9,467 or 123.5 per 100,000 population were admitted. During the latter year there were 271 or 2.8 per cent. fewer admissions than in the former year.

The latest report of the Board of Public Charities for the year 1916 gives the total adult inmates on January 1, 1916, as 17,217. This was 182 less than the number on the same day the year before. During the year 1916 there were admitted to these institutions 25,543 adults. In the same year there were discharged, for various reasons, 25,482, leaving in the institution on December 31, 1916, a total of 17,278. This was 61 more than there were on the first of the year, but 33 or .02 per cent. less than the number at the end of the previous year. From the reports, submitted by 73 almshouses to the Board of Public Charities for the year 1917, which were examined by the Commission, the total average population during that year was 16,716.

The floating nature of the almshouse population is significant. The number admitted during a year is ordinarily much higher than the number in the institutions at a certain time. And the number discharged during a year equals the number admitted during the same year, and at times even exceeds that number. The permanent population is usually a little more than either of those admitted or discharged during the year. The floating population is composed largely of the ne'er-do-well group. This class usually leaves the institutions during the summer months, when they are able to secure casual employment. They return to the almshouses when winter comes, after they have nothing left. It is evident that the almshouse is not the proper place for these misfits of society. In most cases these men are able-bodied and capable of work. The almshouse with no means of employment, only encourages them to further idleness.

The 1916 Report of the Board of Public Charities attributes the discharge of the adults during that year to the following causes:

Dismissed	18,612	73.03
Died	4,611	18.10
Eloped	1,824	7.16
Removed	410	1.61
Deported	25	.10
Total	25,482	100.00

STATUS OF COUNTY ALMSHOUSES.

The 67 counties in Pennsylvania are divided into over 100 poor districts. There is no systematic arrangement of poor districts. It may constitute a whole county, parts of two counties, a city, a borough, a township, a group of townships, or a borough and a township. There are 82 regular almshouses in the State. Forty-five of these are county institutions and 37 are local poorhouse districts. In addition, there are a number of small houses which are used by the individual boroughs or the township poor districts for the temporary accommodation of the poor, and the granting of partial support. The following counties have no almshouse or poorhouse: Cameron, Fulton, Juniata, Pike, Snyder, Sullivan, Union and Wyoming. The location of many almshouses are in remote and inaccessible parts of the existing poor districts.

No general revision of the Pennsylvania laws relating to the poor has taken place since 1836. The chaotic and conglomerate legal confusion may be evinced from the fact that at the present time there are over eleven hundred Acts of Assembly relating to the poor. Eight hundred of these are local and special laws. "There is no uniformity in the laws relating to the appointment or election of Poor Directors who may serve as such; the proper and uniform title of such officials; types of approved plans for almshouses; management and accounting; taxation for support; inspection; segregation of sexes and classes of inmates; admissions and discharges and payments for support."*

The responsibilities and appointments of the poor authorities are regulated by the various Acts of Assembly. These are shaped and guided largely by the demands of the particular localities at the particular time. Some of these acts designate the county commissioners, while others place the management of all affairs relating to the poor in boards called "Directors of the Poor." In the smaller districts the poor are taken care of by "Overseers of the Poor." These officers are employed to provide lands and buildings adequate for the care of the poor of the district and also to care for them by housing them, or in dispensing outdoor relief. The compensation of the different poor directors is regulated by law from time to time and is usually graded in accordance with the population of the particular district. The directors are elected for four years.

There is neither a uniform regulation of admission to almshouses nor conditions of legal settlement in the Poor districts. Admissions, at present, are placed in the hands of the Court, Justices of the Peace, Magistrates, Directors of the poor and other authorities.

An act passed in 1913 provides "that the real estate of any pauper shall be liable to the expenses of his support, maintenance, and burial, incurred by any poor district, whether owned at the time such expenses were incurred or acquired thereafter." *

The State Dependents Commission concludes in its report that "the vital thing to be secured is the welfare of the dependent. Every social institution, should submit to the most exacting publicity. Society has a right to know, not merely how its money is spent but how its dependents are actually cared for. No properly conducted charity resents expert advice or friendly criticism. Those that do should be watched and supervised by proper and competent authority." **

It is probably with this idea in view that there was created in Pennsylvania as early as 1869 the State Board of Public Charities. This body consists of five commissioners appointed by the Governor "who together with the General Agent and Secretary shall constitute a Board of Public Charities." "The Commissioners," it is provided, "shall receive no compensation for their services but their actual traveling and necessary expenses. This Board is to meet at least once in every three months."

The duties and powers of the General Agent and Secretary of the Board of Public Charities as amended in the Act of 1913 read as follows:

"Section 4 The general agent and secretary of the Board of Public Charities shall hold his office for three years, unless sooner removed; he shall be a member of the board ex-officio; and it shall be his duty to cause a correct record of its proceedings to be kept, oversee and conduct its outdoor business, visit all charitable, penal, reformatory, and correctional institutions in the State at least once in each year, except as hereinafter provided, and as much oftener as the board may direct; he shall prepare a series of interrogatories, with the necessary accompanying blanks to the several institutions of charity, reform and correction in the State and to those having charge of the poor in the several counties thereof, or any subdivision of the same, with a view to illustrate in his annual report the causes and best treatment of pauperism and crime, and shall have free access to alle reports and returns now required by law to be made; and he may also propose, for the approval of the board, such general investigations as he may think best. He shall be paid annually the sum of five thousand dollars (5,000), and his additional traveling expenses.

"Section 5 The said commissioners shall have full power, either by themselves or the general agents, at all times to look into and examine the condition of all charitable, reformatory, or correctional institutions within the State, financially and otherwise; to inquire and examine into their methods of instruction, the government and management of their inmates, the official conduct of trustees, directors, and other officers and employes of the same; the condition of the buildings, grounds, and other property connected therewith, and into all other matters pertaining to their usefulness and good management; and for those purposes they shall have free access to the grounds, buildings, and all books and papers relating to said institution; and all persons now or hereafter connected with the same are hereby directed and required to give such information, and afford such facilities for inspection, as the said commissioners may require; and any neglect or refusal on the part of any officer or person connected with such institution to comply with any of the requirements of this act shall subject the offender to a penalty of one hundred dollars ($100), to be sued for and collected by the general agent in the name of the board. The commissioners shall also have power to employ such experts, clerks, stenographers, and other employes of all kinds as the business of the Board of Charities and that of the Committee on Lunacy may require.

"Whenever, upon the examination of any jail, prison, penitentiary, or almshouse, any condition shall be found to exist therein which, in the opinion of said commissioners, is unlawful or detrimental to the proper maintenance, discipline, and hygienic condition of such institution, or to the proper care, maintenance, and custody of the inmates therein, the said commissioners shall have power to make such recommendation to the warden, inspectors, trustees, sheriff, commissioners, overseers of the poor, or other officer or officers charged by law with the government of such institution, as said commissioners may deem necessary and proper to correct the said objectionable condition; and in case of the neglect, failure or refusal of such officer or officers to comply with such recommendations, or in case of his or their failure to make such attempt to comply therewith as shall be satisfactory to the said commissioners, within ninety days from the date of service of said recommendation upon them, the said commissioners shall certify the fact in the case, together with their recommendation, to the district attorney of the proper county, whose duty it shall be thereupon to proceed, by indictment or otherwise, to remedy the said objectionable condition.

"Section 6 The said commissioners, by themselves or their general agents, are hereby authorized and required, at least once in each year, to visit all the charitable and correctional institutions of the State receiving State aid, and ascertain whether the moneys appropriated for their aid are or have been economically and judiciously expended; whether the object of the several institutions is accomplished; whether the laws in relation to them are fully complied with; whether all parts of the State are equally benefited by them, and the various other matters referred to in the fifth section of this act; and in their annual report to the Legislature, to embody the result of their investigations, together with such other information and recommendations as they may deem proper.

"Section 7 The said board shall also require their agent, at least once in every two years, to visit and examine into the condition of each of the city and county jails or prisons and almshouses or poor houses, and shall possess all the power relative thereto, mentioned in the fifth section of this act, and shall report to the legislature the result of the examination, in connection with the annual report authorized by this act.

"Section 8 It shall be the duty of all persons having charge or oversight over the poor in any city or county of this State, or in any subdivision thereof, and all persons having charge or control of county jails or prisons or workhouses and all other persons having charge or control over any other charitable, reformatory, or correctional institution, not now by law required to make an annual report of the condition of the same, to make report annually to the said commissioners, at such time, upon such form, and in such manner, as they may prescribe, of such fact and statements concerning the same as they may require; and all charitable, reformatory, and correctional institutions now required by law to make annual reports shall hereafter make and transmit the same to said commissioners, on or before the first day of September in each year; and all such institutions now receiving or that may hereafter desire to receive State aid shall annually give notice to said commissioners, on or before the first day in September in each year, of the amount of any application for State aid which they may propose to make and of the several purposes to which such aid, if granted, is to be applied. Any neglect or refusal on the part of any person having charge, or control over any jail, prison, workhouse, or charitable, reformatory or correctional institution, to make the report required by this act, or otherwise required by law, shall subject the offender to a penalty of one hundred dollars ($100.00), to be sued for and collected by the General Agent in the name of the board.

"The commissioners may prescribe to all institutions receiving State aid a method of keeping their books; and the commissioners shall make no recommendation for the allowance of State aid to any such institution which shall not adopt said system.

"Section 9 Whenever any such institution shall thus give notice of asking for State aid, the commissioners shall inquire carefully into the grounds of such request, the purpose or purposes for which the aid is asked, the amount which will be required, and into any matters connected therewith and in the annual report the result of such inquiries shall be given, together with the opinions and conclusions of the board thereon.

"Section 12 The Board of Public Charities shall annually prepare and print, for the use of the legislature, a full and complete report of all their doings during the year preceding, stating fully in detail all expenses incurred, all officers and agents employed, with a report of the general agent and secretary, embracing all the respective proceedings and expenses during the year, and showing the actual conditions of all charitable and correctional institutions within the State, with such suggestions as the board may deem necessary and pertinent; and the said general agent and secretary is hereby authorized to prepare the necessary blanks and forward the same, in good season, to all institutions from whom information or returns may be needed, and to require a prompt return of the same with the blanks properly filled."

WESTMORELAND COUNTY HOME INVESTIGATION.

A perusal of this act would seem to give the Board of Public Charities full and drastic powers of supervision over all public institutions. In view of this, the investigation of the Westmoreland County Home, conducted by the Board's agents in February, 1917, is significant, either as it illustrates the laxity of our laws or as it sheds light upon the whole problem and management of our institutions for the poor. The substance is taken from local newspaper accounts as reported during the time of investigation. The agents conducting the investigation having referred to these newspaper accounts, they may be presumed to be authoritative.

The investigation of the following charges was conducted by two assistant agents of the Board of Public Charities. The accusations against the superintendent were that (first) "He seemed to take sides with the employes and tried to keep up strife among them." (Second) That "he was simply not fit to handle the job." (Third) "That immorality existed between the superintendent and female employes and male and female employes of the County Home." The President of the Poor Board admitted that he had smelled liquor on the breath of employes but added that "no action other than speaking to them about it had been taken."

Charges were also made that a Director of the Poor had granted orders for outdoor relief to three different persons, which later, it was claimed, went for wearing apparel for another woman in the case. The orders included items such as silk hose, corsets, ladies' hats, ribbons and night shirts. "The 'whiskey bills' presented, showed that nineteen and one-half gallons of the 'firewater' were delivered to the County Home between January 25, 1916, and January 22, 1917." When the physician at the County Home was asked "what quantity of whiskey he prescribed for patients during the year," he replied, "Not over a gallon in twelve months."

When the Director of the Poor was asked about the outdoor relief bills for personal wearing apparel, and whether he had not investigated to see if the goods went to the right party, he replied "I did not think it was my business to investigate."

The duties of the superintendent were defined by the Directors of the Poor, at the hearing, as "his duty to superintend the building."

The climax of this investigation is reported as follows in the Greensburg Morning Review of February 27, 1917: "Resumption of the hearing yesterday morning brought a storm of debate and heated argument between H. H. Fisher, attorney for R. D. Wolff, (member of the Poor Board) M. N. McGeary, attorney for the Poor Board and Mr. Theurer and Mr. Gill, the agents, when Mr. Gill resumed examination of Mr. Wolff, who was on the witness stand when the hearing adjourned Friday evening. Mr. Gill started the argument by inquiring of Mr. Wolff.

"Did you make any inquiry into the copies of vouchers handed you Friday?"

"Mr. Fisher was on his feet at once and made the following statement in which he questioned the authority of the assistant agents to conduct the investigation.

"This witness has been advised by his counsel to refuse to answer this question for the following reasons:

"First—This investigation or so called investigation is not being conducted by the Board of Commissioners of Public Charities or a majority of said Board, but is being conducted by Wm. G. Theurer and S. E. Gill, Assistant General Agents who have no legal authority to conduct this investigation. In this connection counsel for witness and other parties in interest now move the Board of Commissioners of Public Charities to eliminate and strike from the record all of the testimony or so-called testimony, which has been taken before and by the said Assistant General Agents.

"Second—Under the provisions of both the Federal and State Constitution this witness cannot be compelled to give evidence against himself.

"Third—The proceedings heretofore taken and now proposed to be taken in this matter by the said Assistant General Agents are irregular, illegal and void, inasmuch as they have been taken, and are now proposed to be taken before the Assistant General Agents aforesaid who have no authority or jurisdiction under any law of this Commonwealth to conduct such an investigation.

"Mr. Gill refused to recognize counsel and read to Mr. Wolff part of the law which he said gave the agents power to conduct the investigation. Mr. Fisher and Mr. McGeary argued the matter with the two agents. Mr. Wolff upon advice of counsel refused to answer the questions when asked by Mr. Gill. The agents then, apparently, dropped the matter and requested Mr. Wolff's minute book. They asked him about certain minutes of a meeting of January 26, 1916. Mr. Fisher again interrupted and advised Mr. Wolff not to answer. The agent again explained to Mr. Fisher and Mr. McGeary that the hearing was not a court trial and therefore counsel would not be recognized. Both refused to waive 'their rights' and when asked to leave the room refused to do so. Mr. Theurer called Dan Dunmire, a local detective, who had been guarding the door during the hearing to eject the attorney. Mr. Fisher warned the agents and detective that if hands were laid on him that he would construe it as 'assault and battery.' After more arguments on both sides, Mr. Gill interrupted with a question to Wolff as to whether he declined to answer all questions. Mr. Wolff said that upon the advice of counsel he did. Mr. Gill said 'You are excused.' As Mr. Wolff started to leave Mr. Fisher also arose and stated that 'since my client is excused in courtesy I will leave.' Mr. McGeary who stated that he represented many of the witnesses was going to remain in the room during the hearing of the witnesses.

"Mr. Gill stated to a Review reporter that he thought no further action would be taken by the agents to compel Mr. Wolff to appear before the commission. 'He refused to answer questions,' said Mr. Gill 'and this we will report to the Board of Public Charities.'"

The Board of Public Charities having made public no report since that time, it is not known what actions were taken in this matter.

GENERAL CONDITIONS OF COUNTY POORHOUSES.

It is to be greatly regretted that the Commission was unable, in the short time at its disposal, to make personal visits to the different almshouses and learn more about the general qualifications and competence of the stewards and superintendents of these institutions. The tasks of these heads are not light. As one expressed it "These positions do not pay much for a person who must be a farmer, doctor, bookkeeper and almost any other occupation known to mankind." It was impossible to secure complete information as to the conditions, or to assimilate the spirit prevailing in these homes, where many, "whose spirits having oozed out from their bodies under the foot of life," are compelled to spend the rest of their lives. It is hardly necessary to point out that it is of paramount importance to know not only how the tax-payers' money is spent, but it is equally essential to know accurately of the treatment accorded, the food furnished, the medical care and sanitation established, the conditions of the buildings, the degree of congestion, the recreational or occupational facilities afforded, the character of the inmates and the general environment of the homes.

The heads of the county almshouses, are as a rule, political appointees. The great majority of them have had no experience of this nature, previous to their appointments. There can be no question that many of them have been successful farmers. But knowledge of the proper care of a farm is hardly sufficient to qualify one also to take care of and promote the general welfare of those entrusted to them and who look to them for some measure of happiness. Many of the men connected with the management of the almshouses are prejudiced and often without the rudiments of an education. Where the superintendents are highly educated men, and trained—of whom there are only a few—they are as a rule powerless, and have no authority to make improvements without the consent of the poor board or the county commissioners.

The three or four institutions visited by the Commission's agents, were found to be kept in exceedingly good condition. But those visited cannot be taken as truly representing the general conditions of most of the almshouses in the State. It is, of course, inevitable that where old persons congregate—many of whom suffer from foul smelling disorders—there should always prevail a very noticeable bad odor. In the few institutions investigated, the buildings were kept clean, with more light and air in each room, than is usually found in middle-class city homes. The inmates looked neatly dressed. The bedrooms were neatly arranged and well ventilated, while the bed covers were uniformly clean. These were kept so by the inmates themselves. The inmates were given three meals a day. The big meal usually consisting of one dish made up of a medley of edible foods, bread and coffee, with an additional vegetable on occasions. The discipline was of such character as is only essential in institutions. But even in these progressive institutions there was no genuine home-like spirit. Most of the inmates looked sullen and wore a depressed and downcast mien. Practically all were eager to get out of the place. Even in the best equipped institutions there were no recreational facilities provided for these inmates. Except for a pack of cards, a game of checkers and a few old magazines, there was nothing these aged could do to keep their minds occupied and to prevent their nursing of grievances and discontent. This feeling of depression is augmented by the fact that in most homes no attempt is made to segregate the old people,—who have been compelled to go to the almshouses through no fault of their own,—from the feeble-minded and in some cases even the partially insane. In many places they are compelled to eat at the same tables and sleep in the same dormitories with the latter groups. The inmates in most almshouses are a very heterogeneous collection. They comprise insane, feeble-minded persons and epileptics; blind and deaf mutes; sufferers from chronic diseases, persons with criminal records; prostitutes; mothers of illegitimate children, orphans, and deserted children.

"Many of the poorhouse inmates," writes a very intelligent miner from western Pennsylvania, "physically broken, spiritually crushed, and in some instances mentally wrecked, poorly paid mechanics in their day, would have been heartened could they have foreseen the beacon of a pension on retirement, and it would have been an inspiration to save, if only a little from their meagre wages."

It is, of course, natural that the average citizen when the question of a state wide pension system is suggested should inquire as to how much more in taxes it will mean for him. It is astonishing, however, to find that the same citizen never takes the time to inquire either as to how much he is spending on the poor at the present time, or as to the quality of services rendered for the expenditures. Certainly, no private business man would permit his money to be spent without an accurate account of all the expenditures made; and no efficient business man would continue to contribute money without ever inquiring into the results and the efficiency of the business, and whether more efficient methods might not be introduced which would reduce the present cost. What is so obviously plain to the business man is as yet, apparently, a sealed book to the taxpayers in this State.

It was seen from the law creating the Board of Public Charities that it is the only State body having jurisdiction over the almshouses. It has the right to compel "all persons having charge or oversight over the poor in city or county of this State, or in any subdivision thereof to make an annual report at such time, upon such form and in such manner, of such facts and statements as they may prescribe and require." This would appear to give the Board of Public Charities ample power to secure the most accurate accounts of all the incomes and expenditures made by the Directors of the Poor and stewards, and superintendents of the different almshouses. This, however, is far from being the case. One looks in vain for such detailed accounts. Not only is there no uniform system of accounting and book-keeping for all the different poor boards' and superintendents' records—which has been a universal practice in all our neighboring States for many years—but even the computations of costs are made in haphazard fashion, in accordance with the desires and best interests of the individuals responsible for the expenditures.

As is expressed by the Secretary of one Poor Board, "We are, of course, interested in presenting as low a rate as possible to the taxpayers." Accordingly, each poor board fixes and computes its per capita cost per day or per week, which it submits to the Board of Public Charities, so as to meet its own needs and interests. Because of this it is found that in determining the total amount of the almshouse expense, some will include also the expenditures made upon "buildings and improvements" and "other extraordinary expenses." Others will not figure this at all in the total costs; while still others will deduct from the total expenses, the income received from those inmates, who having some means, are made to pay for their keep. Some few consider the value of the farm products in the total expenses but the great majority do not.

The foregoing table shows the main expenditures of the various almshouses as given in the 1916 Annual Report of the Board of Public Charities. It includes the total number of inmates, the total almshouse expense, the average weekly cost per capita, the money spent on outdoor relief and the aggregate expenditures of the poor districts. It will be seen that the costs per week as given in this report vary from forty-nine cents per capita per week in one county, to $6.51 per week in another. When an attempt is made to check up the given weekly costs, by dividing the submitted total almshouse expense by the given number of inmates, the results cannot be made to agree. Following this method of computation, the weekly per capita costs were found by the Commission, to run as high at $9, $12, and almost $15 per week in a few cases. This is not only true of the figures as given in the 1916 report, but the submitted figures in the 1915 report, do not balance similarly. The Commission does not question the integrity of the given figures. It wishes, however, to point out the confusion and chaos encountered when any intelligent point of information is desired to be ascertained. The figures submitted, no doubt, are based upon actual facts, but they are computed in helter-skelter fashion as suited best the individuals who made out these reports. No attempt was made by the Board of Public Charities to ascertain or explain these multifarious methods of computation; and the reports were published as they were submitted. It is surprising, that although these reports have been before the public for a number of years, no one in the State, as far as the Commission is aware, either challenged or discovered these so obviously misinformed facts.

To obtain its data, the Board of Public Charities submits the following form to the different almshouses. This is filled out and returned to the Board, from which in turn, the latter makes out its report.

Name,

Office,

P. O.,

County,

In examining the returned reports, for the year 1917, the Commission found it so perplexing that it could make little progress. Only twenty-six of the seventy-three reports submitted for the year 1917 could in any way be made to check. When further inquiry was made of a number of superintendents as to their methods of computation, only about 50 per cent. responded. Of all the replies received, each one had his own method showing how the per capita cost per week was obtained. One steward after explaining his method of computation added: "You will note that on the form furnished, by the Board of Public Charities, there is no space for setting said items apart to show intelligently what the real indoor county home expenses were, hence this confusion."

One of the reports submitted to the Board of Public Charities states: "On or about November the 3rd, 1917, J. K. S. who has been overseer of our Poor District for many years past, died very suddenly. His successor, J. K., has not been able to find any record showing what expenditures made by J. K. S. were for almshouse and what for outside relief. J. K. S. had charge of all almshouse expenditures so that at the present time, it is absolutely impossible to determine accurately how his total expenditures should be divided between almshouse and outside relief. It is an absolute impossibility to accurately divide the expenditures between these two accounts." This was signed by the new Overseer of the Poor.

Table No. 19 is the result of the Commission's attempt to classify, from the submitted reports for the year 1917, the incurred expenditures according to the amounts spent directly on the maintenance of the inmates; that expended on salaries, wages and general overhead expenses; the money laid out on additional supplies and building improvements, and for farm expenses.

*To obtain this information get the sum of the number of days in which all the inmates were supported. For instances, if there were three prisoners, 1 supported during the entire year, or 365 days, 1 for three months, or 91 days, and 1 for one week, or 7 days, the total would be the sum of 365, 91 and 7, or 463 days.

†Made to check when money spent on "building and improvements" is deducted from grand total of expenses.

‡Not stated whether this is per week or per month.

§Made to check when money received from inmates' board is deducted from grand total of expenses.

||Includes both inside and outside expenses.

¶Checks when "building and improvements" and "other extraordinary expenses" are deducted from grand total of expenses.

Under "direct maintenance" are included the following items as listed on the returned form: (1) provisions and supplies, (2) fuel and light, (3) clothing, (4) medicine and medical supplies, and (5) ordinary repairs. The "overhead and sundry" column contains the items of (1) salaries, wages and labor, (2) traveling expenses, (3) incidental expenses, and (4) other extraordinary expenses. Under "supplies and additional expenses" are included, (1) furniture and bedding and other dry goods, (2) repairs and (3) building and improvements. The "grand total" is made up of all the preceding totals. The "average cost per day" was obtained by dividing the grand total almshouse expense by the total number of days support given. This was found to balance with the given per capita cost of nineteen institutions. A few more were made to check when the item of "building and improvements" was deducted from the grand total of almshouse expenses; a number of others were made to agree by deducting the item of "other extraordinary expenses." Two more were made to balance after inquiry, by deducting from the total expenditures, the receipts of the county home. The rest could not be made to balance either through any of the above methods or through further inquiry. The per capita costs are, therefore, presented as they are given in the reports and as they were found by the process of simple division.

The average cost per inmate per week for all almshouses, as found by dividing the total sum expended on almshouses by the total number of inmates in those institutions, is $5.87 per week or $25.14 per month. In 1916, according to the report of the Board of Public Charities, the average per capita cost, when computed in a similar way, was $5.09 per week or $21.81 per month. It must be added that the expenditures made during the year on buildings and improvements, and the interest on permanent investments, are not included in most cases. It is impossible to ascertain the value of the different institutions at the present time. It is a well known fact, however, that many of the larger institutions are worth millions of dollars. It is not unusual to find many county almshouses occupying farms of several hundred acres and building properties worth several hundred thousand dollars. In the few institutions where big expenditures were made on buildings and improvements during the year 1917, five per cent. added for interest and depreciation increases considerably the per capita cost. Thus in the case of the Philadelphia almshouse, 5 per cent. interest on the last year's investment on building and improvements amounts to over $46,000 per year. In the case of the Washington County Home, the per capita cost per month is raised from $16.53 to $18.36 per month. But this, as was said before, does still not include the interest and the depreciation on the permanent investments.

Attention must be called also, to the large item of farm expenses submitted by many institutions. As far as can be ascertained from the reports submitted to the Board of Public Charities, few of these institutions consider the value of the farm products consumed as an item in their total expenditures. All report the amount of money expended on the farm, but one looks in vain for a statement of the returns of the farm or the value of the farm products consumed. The latter, are to all appearances, not figured in the total cost of maintenance in most almshouses. It has already been pointed out that many counties have farms of several hundred acres connected with their poorhouses. Some of these produce enough vegetables and meat to enable them, not only to maintain the institution for the year, but indeed to have a surplus for the market.*

In view of this, an examination of the last table is exceedingly interesting. It shows that in spite of this fact, the small per capita costs given are not always from those places that spend most on their farms or those having the largest farms. In a number of cases, where quite large expenditures were made on the farm, the per capita cost per inmate amounted to even higher than that of a number of others who had no farms at all. It must, therefore, be kept in mind that the average per capita cost per month of $25.14 does not, in most cases, include the value of the products consumed from the almshouse farm. To discover exactly how much it actually costs a county to support each inmate in an almshouse, would only be possible after a system of evaluation of all farm products consumed, was established. It may be safely assumed that when these are added to the present per capita cost the latter will be decidedly increased.

The great variety in the per capita costs by the different institutions is also noteworthy. It varies from 56 cents per week to $10.15 per week in the given statements and from $1.95 to $16.14 per week as found by the process stated above. It would, of course, be of value to study minutely and individually the causes for these differences. It will be observed, however, that the smaller items are usually given by institutions having the largest number of inmates, while the smaller institutions give the largest per capita cost. An illustration of the odd divisions of our poor districts is apparent from a glance at the average daily number supported. While the Philadelphia Almshouse has a total of 6,611 inmates and the Pittsburgh City Home nearly 2,000 inmates, there are 9 institutions in the State containing between 10 and 20 inmates and 7 having less than 10 inmates. Thus one county with 11 inmates spends $6,655.60 or $605.05 per year per inmate; while another County Home with three inmates spends a grand total of $2,570.55 or $856.85 per inmate per year. One almshouse is maintained solely for one inmate and while the direct cost on him to the county was $110.26 there was spent $240.25 or $2.17 per dollar, to deliver this money to the inmate.

The tremendous total expenditures that go to keep up the institutions and that spent directly on the inmates is again noticeable. The percentage of "overhead expense" to that spent on "direct maintenance" runs in the majority of cases to 100 per cent, in a number of instances it amounts to from 100 to 400 per cent, while in at least one case it exceeds 4,000 per cent. Not only are the "overhead and sundry" items large when compared with the amounts spent on the direct wants of the inmates, but even when compared with the grand total of expenses of the almshouses, they amount in most cases to from 40 to 50 per cent.

In 1916, $4,449,108.20 was spent for maintaining 16,754 inmates. This total increased to $5,114,307.15 which was spent in 1917 on 16,716 inmates. Thus, while the latter year had 38 less inmates, the cost increased $665,198.95. This is, doubtless, the result of the increased prices in the latter year. The average yearly cost per capita for 1917 was $301.68. This, as was pointed out before, does not include the value of the farm products consumed from the almshouse farms in the majority of institutions.

OUTDOOR RELIEF.

Besides the caring for the indigent in the county almshouse, the poor boards of the various poor districts dispense also what is known as "outdoor relief." This is given to persons whose physical condition does not permit their removal to the county homes; or to the women with dependent children, temporarily in need, who are able to care for themselves or who have somebody to care for them, in their own homes. The advantages of this form of relief consist in the facts that in the majority of cases it is less expensive to maintain a person outside than inside the county home. The amounts given vary, of course, with the particular case and the particular board dispensing it. Generally, however, the sums given are not large. Another advantage of this form of relief, as opposed to the indoor relief, is the fact that it preserves all the home ties and associations and does not separate the aged from the ones most dear to them.

In 1916, according to the report of the Board of Public Charities, $597,477.86 was spent on outdoor relief in the State.

In 1917 this increased to $628,896.86. The usual methods of dispensing these funds are through the county poor directors themselves or through a clerk appointed by them. In only rare cases is this relief given in cash. Ordinarily, an order for groceries or merchandise is given to merchants extending credit to the poor directors. It is seldom that the county poor directors, county commissioners or other poor authorities have any definite knowledge or understanding of the problems of poor relief. These bodies are generally elected or appointed because of their political leadership in their respective communities. The policies of rendering relief to the poor very often shaped in accordance with the political fluctuations and whims of the particular localities. Few make provisions for careful investigation as to the extent and need of assistance or for supervision of those who receive relief. The clerk of one

*According to Dr. C. R. McKinniss, Superintendent of the Pittsburgh City Home, the output of the farm operated by the Home, amounted to $67,641.56 in 1917.

County Poor Board, who dispensed more than $10,000 worth of goods in one year, frankly admitted that he had no experience in this work. He was a machinist by trade, and confessed he knew nothing of this problem. He said that he rarely investigated a case but that he knew he was supposed to "relieve the needs of the poor," and furthermore, that he always gave to those who applied for assistance. He agreed that there ought to be a better method of conducting this poor relief system, but that he held his job because of his political influence and that "it was much worse with the Democratic clerk who preceded him in this office."

Because of the limitation of time, the Commission was unable to make a more minute study of the outdoor relief expenses. That some people are in need of relief and are entitled to it is self evident. It is also, obviously much better to expend some money on temporary relief in the homes rather than to compel people to break up family ties of many years. Indiscriminate charity, however, is not only a criminal waste of the taxpayers' money, but is also detrimental to the individuals receiving it, as it only pauperizes them, and dooms them to further pauperization and charity.

As the great majority of the recipients of outdoor relief are aged persons, it would seem that some form of a pension system would probably best meet this problem. These people, admittedly, have a home and some one to take care of them. A pension would never be given indiscriminately. It would hardly amount to more than the average amounts given at present. It would reduce the overhead expenses to a minimum and last but not least, it would not pauperize the aged persons, but would be given to them, as society's reward for the useful and faithful services rendered by them during their earlier years.

NORTHAMPTON COUNTY HOME INVESTIGATION.

On the second of January, 1919, the Controller of Northampton County held a hearing to investigate the charges made,—that the inmates of the Northampton County Almshouse were fed with diseased meat. It was claimed that the Directors of the Poor purchased a bull, which soon after arriving at the county farm became sick. It was then claimed that the Treasurer of the Directors of the Poor, upon hearing of the disease of the bull, ordered it to be slaughtered. This was done the following morning, and the meat served to the inmates. This charge was later proved to be groundless. What was of greater significance, however, was the fact that at this hearing it was testified by all witnesses that while the county home operated a farm of nearly 400 acres, no books and not a single record was kept showing the disposition of any of the farm products. The first and second farmers testifying,—although connected with the farm for a number of years—claimed they had no idea as to the size of the farm, the number of acres of each grain, or the quantities produced during any harvest. They stated they never made any report to anyone as to the number of bushels they harvested of any grain, nor had they ever seen any record in which such information was kept. For the year 1917, they stated that the crops were very good and estimated that there were between 40 to 50 acres of corn; 90 to 100 acres of wheat, and about 40 and 50 acres of oats, harvested. Besides, there were produced a great amount of potatoes, sweet corn, cabbages, beans and other vegetables. They admitted that it was their duty to take care of the cattle at the farm, but claimed not to know the exact number of cows, hogs, calves, chickens, or other farm stock. These farmers stated that the products were consumed at the home. The wheat, they testified, was consumed in the bakery and in feeding the cattle. The usual process was to take a load of wheat to the miller and in return get a load of flour. Except a receipt from the miller indicating this exchange, no record was kept showing the exact number of bushels, or the weight of either. The Treasurer of the Poor Directors testified on the witness stand, that all bills charged to the Poor Board had to be approved, first by the Poor Board at its monthly meeting, and then by the County Controller, who upon approval would issue a warrant to the County Treasurer. In a number of cases, however, he claimed that he had paid bills in cash and secured the approval of the Board and County Controller afterwards. The steward also, would, at times, pay bills in cash and be reimbursed later by the Board.

DETAILED BUDGET STUDY OF BERKS COUNTY ALMSHOUSE.

It was beyond the Commission's resources to attempt complete budget studies of county almshouses with regard to the farm products produced, consumed in the institutions, and that sold outside. Such studies would, of course, be invaluable as shedding light upon the efficiency of the management of the institution, and the actual cost per inmate. The Commission has succeeded, however, in making such a complete study in at least one institution, the findings of which are submitted herewith:

In the 1917 Financial Report of Berks County, published by the County Controller, it is stated that the Berks County almshouse is located "three miles southwest of Reading, Pa. The farm consists of 514 acres. Thirty-five acres of this is in meadow land, 4 acres in truck, 100 acres in woodland. The balance is under cultivation for general farming.

Value of Farm	$200,000
Value of buildings	250,000

"The daily average of inmates supported in the institution for the year 1917 was 313. The total almshouse expense for the year was $50,555.49. The average weekly per capita cost is given as $3.50.* The Report also states that "In computing the average weekly cost per capita, every item of expense that enters into the maintenance of the inmates is included, food, clothing, bedding and furnishings, medical services, drugs, light and heat, salaries of officials and attendants, tobacco and postage stamps."

The Report then gives the following farm and dairy products:

FARM CROPS.

"The farm crops were exceptionally good all through, the soil responding bountifully to the efforts of cultivation. The corn yielded what is generally termed a 'bumper crop.' The amount of each crop follows: Hay, 130 tons; wheat, 2,000 bushels; oats, 2,100 bushels; corn, 3,600 bushels (shelled); potatoes, 1,600 bushels; rye, 177 bushels."

TRUCK.

"The truck garden produced the following: Parsnips, 20 bushels; peas, 14 bushels; tomatoes, 74 bushels; cucumbers, 798 dozens; radishes, 11 bushels; beans, 76 bushels; lettuce, 28 bushels; cabbage, 4,213 heads; celery, 2,275 stalks; endive, 300 stalks; onions, 53 bushels; carrots, 19 bushels; gooseberries, 5 bushels; grapes, 35 bushels; strawberries, 115 boxes; turnips, 6 bushels; potatoes 14 bushels; peppers, 6 bushels; lima beans, 5 bushels; eggplants, 123; redbeets, 36 bushels; currants, 150 quarts; pumpkins, 135; sweet corn, 3,865 ears; sauerkraut, 30 barrels; pears, 22 bushels."

THE DAIRY.

"The dairy consists of 36 cows, and produced as follows: 64,860 quarts or 16,215 gallons of milk. A proportionate amount of this milk is used fresh daily for the different hospital wards and also for cooking and baking purposes. The balance is turned into butter, of which 4,270 pounds was produced, and all consumed at the institution in its various departments."

BUTCHER SHOP.

"Slaughtered 85 head of cattle, which yielded 54,594 pounds of beef, 2,964 pounds of tallow and 7,342 pounds of hides. Killed 16 calves, produced 1,285 pounds of veal. Killed 58 head of pigs, which netted 12,073 pounds pork and 1,710 pounds lard. The total amount of meat produced of all kinds was 67,952 pounds. These meats were all used at the institution.

"Boiled 432 barrels of soft soap and 2,180 pounds hard soap."

*It is interesting to note that on Table No. 19 the weekly per capita cost is given as $3.94, while dividing the total almshouse expense by the average number of inmates give only $3.09 as the per capita cost.

THE BAKERY.

"There were baked and consumed during the year 86,328 pounds or over 43 tons of bread. This product is baked fresh daily in two-pound loaves and amounted to a total of 43,164 such loaves."

POULTRY.

"The hennery consists of 525 barnyard fowls and produced 1,412 dozen eggs for the season."

LIVE STOCK.

"The live stock of the farm at present consists of 14 head of mules, 1 horse, 36 dairy cows, 2 stock bulls, 36 steers, 156 pigs of all sizes, 7 heifers and 525 chickens."

It will be observed that of the 4,270 pounds of butter produced and of the total of 67,952 pounds of meat of all kinds produced, the report states that these were "all consumed at the institution."

With this in mind it is very significant to note that in the steward's report to the County Commissioners, which was examined by the Commission, it is reported that the total amount of beef (of all kinds) consumed was 55,469 pounds, leaving 12,483 pounds of beef unaccounted for; 86,328 pounds of bread was baked, but the steward's report states that only 80,288 pounds were consumed, leaving 6,040 pounds unaccounted for. Of the 1,412 dozens of eggs produced, only 1,313 are accounted for by the steward; 4,270 pounds of butter was produced according to the County Commissioners' Report. The steward's report shows that only 3,327 pounds was consumed, leaving 943 pounds not accounted for.

The following table also is interesting as it throws light upon another phase of institutional management in a number of county poorhouses. The number of inmates, it will be noticed, was almost ten times the number at the steward's table.

The above table is illuminating from the standpoint of the quality and quantity of the food consumed on the respective tables of the inmates and stewards. It is shown throughout that the coarser foods are consumed by the inmates, while the better kinds, are used by the stewards. This is significant when it is remembered that many of the aged folk are continuously sick and need more of the better foodstuffs.

In an attempt to arrive at the actual per capita cost per inmate, the Commission secured an estimate of the prices prevailing, during the year 1917, on the following articles consumed in the almshouse. These prices are estimates made by reputable produce merchants located in the vicinity of the almshouse and represent the lowest prices of the articles during that year. The amount and value of each product is given below:

Beans	76 bushels	$1.00 per	$76.00

The articles sold and amounts received according to the County Commissioners' Report were as follows: Wheat, $4,133.68; corn fodder, $10.00; hides, $1,549.09; tallow, $354.71; corn, $24.52; hay, $10.00; oats, $94.27; potatoes, $883.00; miscellaneous receipts, $222.51. The total receipts from farm products amounted to $7,049.27, leaving the value of consumed products to $24,532.29.

Five per cent. for interest and depreciation on the permanent investment of $450,000 gives $22,500. Adding the grand total of $50,555.49 total almshouse expense as given in the Commissioners' Report to the total of $24,532.29 for consumed products, together with the $22,500 on interest and depreciation, the grand total almshouse expense amounts to $97,587.78. When this grand total is divided by the 313 inmates, the total cost per capita is raised from $3.50 per week, as stated by the County Commissioners, to $6.00 per week or nearly double the per capita cost stated in the County Commissioners' Report.

STUDY OF INMATES IN FRATERNAL AND BENEVOLENT HOMES FOR THE AGED.

Information concerning the aged group residing in private and benevolent homes for the aged, was obtained through the cordial co-operation of the superintendents and heads of these institutions. The inmates in 65 of these homes were interrogated personally, with reference to the desired data, from a printed card-schedule devised for that purpose. These interviews were in practically all cases conducted by the heads of the institutions themselves. A total of 2,158 aged inmates were thus questioned.

The ages of the inmates as found at the time of investigation follow:

TABLE NUMBER 21.

Ages of Institutional Inmates at Time of Investigation.

Age.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
50 to 55	28	1.29
55 to 60	36	1.66
60 to 65	92	4.26
65 to 70	326	15.10
70 to 75	549	25.44
75 to 85	911	42.21
85 to 100	190	8.86
Over 100	1	.04
Not stated	25	1.14
	2,158	100.00

It will be observed that only 2.95 per cent. are under 60 years of age in this group as compared with 27.3 per cent. in the case of the almshouse inmates; 19.36 per cent. are from 60 to 70 years of age, while 67.65 per cent. are between the ages of 70 to 85. The late period in life at which these inmates enter the institution is further borne out by the fact that only 1 per cent. were admitted before the age of 50; 5 per cent. entered the institutions at the ages of 50 to 60; 41.8 between 60 and 70, and a similar percentage were admitted to these institutions after they had reached their 70th year. In the Massachusetts study of 1908, parallel percentages are given. One per cent. were admitted before the age of 50; 4.4 per cent. between 50 and 60; 41.7 per cent. between the ages of 60 and 70, while 53.8 per cent. were admitted after they had passed their seventieth year. The strikingly higher age of entrance into the institution for this group when compared with the almshouse group, is significant. The lower percentage of those entering the institutions, over 70 years of age in Pennsylvania, as compared with that given in Massachusetts, is probably again the result of the more strenuous industrial life led in our own State.

TABLE NUMBER 22.

Number of Years of Residence in the Institution.

Time in Institution.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
Under 1 year	181	8.40
1 year to 3 years	674	31.23
3 years to 5 years	366	16.96
5 years to 10 years	528	24.46
10 years to 15 years	210	9.73
15 years to 20 years	105	4.86
20 years and over	50	2.32
Not stated	44	2.04
	2,158	100.00

The above table would indicate a longer span of life for the inmates of private and benevolent homes for the aged, than for almshouse paupers. Although the ages at admission are much higher for the former inmates, their period of stay in the institution is considerably longer. The percentages are for those in residences less than 1 year, 8.4 and 18.4 per cent. respectively. While about the same percentage in both groups were in the institutions from 1 to 5 years, the percentage of those residing in the institutions 5 years and more was 35 per cent. in the case of almshouse inmates and 43.4 among the inmates of the benevolent homes. Other reasons for the longer stay of the inmates in the latter homes, may perhaps be found in the facts that practically all benevolent institutions charge a considerable fee at admission. The accommodation offered by these homes are often more satisfactory than are those offered by the county poorhouses. That aged women remain longer in institutions than aged men has already been pointed out.

TABLE NUMBER 23.

Sex.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
Male	508	23.54
Female	1,650	76.46
	2,158	100.00

The reverse sex preponderance in this class of inmates over that in the county almshouses has been alluded to once before.

The percentages of men and women among the aged inmates of benevolent homes in Massachusetts in 1908 were 30.6 per cent. and 69.4 per cent. respectively. This would indicate that aged women are more generally provided for by private charity than are aged men. It may also show that aged women are either more thrifty than are aged men or that they are more readily helped by friends.

Conjugal Condition.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
Single	650	30.12
Married	170	7.88
Widowed	1,258	58.30
Divorced	11	.50
Not stated	69	3.20
	2,158	100.00

Although the percentage of single people among the inmates of benevolent homes is more than three times the percentage of the same found in the entire State population, it is considerably lower than the percentage of single people among almshouse paupers. The per centage of widowed constitutes 58.30 per cent. in this group and 39.14 per cent. in the case of almshouse dependents. This would seem to indicate that widowhood constitutes a leading factor in institutional pauperism. This is especially the case with this group, consisting largely of women who are provided for, as long as their breadwinner lives, but who become dependent soon after the husband's death. The percentage of married inmates in these homes having their mates living, is less than one-half the per cent. of those in county poorhouses. Of these 62.3 per cent. were living together in the same home. In the almshouse population, it will be remembered, only 9.9 per cent were residing together. The problem of the severing of home ties and close associations, is therefore, not so acute in this group.

TABLE NUMBER 25.
Number of Children Living.

Number of Children.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
None	1,193	65.69
1	265	14.59
2	145	7.98
3	109	6.00
4	53	2.91
5	26	1.45
6	13	.72
6 and over	12	.66
	1,816	100.00

The striking fact that 65.69 per cent. of these inmates have no children living—which is even 2 per cent. more than among the almshouse inmates—is illuminating on the whole problem of aged dependency and institutional care. The percentage of inmates in benevolent homes in Massachusetts having no children living, was 60.6 per cent. as against 56.3 per cent. in the case of almshouse paupers. Fourteen and fifty-nine hundredths per cent. of those having children alive have but one child; 13.98 per cent. have two or three children, and only 5.74 per cent. have more than three children living. This further bears out the reference previously made that the dominating factor compelling aged persons to go to an institution—whether it be a county poorhouse, or a benevolent or private home for the aged—is the fact that having no children of their own, they must seek the institution to furnish them the care they require. Most children will make sacrifices in order to take care of their aged dependent parents. Few strangers or relatives, however, want to be burdened with the presence of an aged person, even if they are to be paid for their services. That there is a real need for institutional care for certain aged groups, is obvious.

Only a fraction of 1 per cent. of the inmates interviewed still had small children. Of those having adult children only 5 per cent. were receiving contributions from them. The amounts of the contributions in the great majority of cases were less than $3.00 per week. Ninety-five per cent. of those having children received no contributions from them. This seeming neglect on the part of children may be attributed, not so much to their unwillingness to make such contributions, but to the fact that many of these aged inmates having once paid their entrance fees, were not in need of such assistance. Only 4 per cent. reported of having near relatives, able and willing to support. Ninety-six per cent. had no other friends or relatives able or willing to support them. The scanty family connections of institutional inmates are thus further emphasized.

TABLE NUMBER 26.
Nativity of the Inmates Investigated.

Place of Birth.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.

United States	298	13.89
Foreign	684	31.59
Not stated	62	2.90
	2,158	100.00

The above table shows a higher rate of native born and a lower per cent. of foreign born among the aged inmates of benevolent and private homes than is the case in the county almshouses. While this is to be expected, the proportion of foreign born in these institutions is still greater than the ratio of the same group to the total population of the State. Of these inmates, more than half were born in Pennsylvania; 13.89 were born in other States, while 31.59 per cent. were of foreign birth.

TABLE NUMBER 27.

France	2	.30
Other Nations	7	1.06
Not stated	27	4.10

Approximately the reverse of the leading almshouse foreign born populations is the case of the foreign born populations in benevolent homes. In the former, Ireland leads with almost twice the number contributed by Germany—the second in the list. In the private homes for the aged, however, Germany comes first, with nearly twice the number contributed by Ireland. England maintains third rank here also, but contributes much more to this group proportionately than to the almshouse pauper group. Scotland also gives a higher percentage of the former inmates. Austria, the leading country in the foreign born in the entire population of the State—contributes less than one-fourth of the number it supplies to the county poorhouse population. The other countries contribute but small percentages. The preponderance of German born residing in benevolent institutions may be accounted for by the early immigration from that country, and by the fact that many of the latter immigrants are rather thrifty and well organized along institutional, fraternal and beneficial lines.

The percentage of naturalized voters among these inmates was found to be 75 per cent. This is 5 per cent. higher than among the inmates of pauper institutions and more than twice the percentage of naturalized voters among foreign born in the general population.

30 years and over	529	92.5
	572	100.00	857	100.00

Of the 572 foreign born inmates stating their time of residence in this country, only 7.5 per cent. stated that they were here less than 30 years; 92.5 per cent. lived in the United States for more than 30 years. Of the foreign born, and natives from other States in the union, 6.56 per cent. lived in Pennsylvania less than 10 years 15.51 per cent. were in this State between 10 and 30 years, while 77.93 per cent. have been residents of this Commonwealth for more than 30 years. The small percentage of recent immigrants in these homes may be explained in the same way as in the case of the poorhouse inmates.

Dropsy	7	.32
Feeble-minded	65	3.01
Epileptic	12	.55
Not stated	258	11.86
	2,158	100.00

The figures in the foregoing table are noteworthy. The number of these aged folks still in good health is remarkable. While among the almshouse inmates only 12.80 per cent. are reported in good or fair health, the percentage of those in the same condition of health in the private and benevolent homes is 35.98 per cent. Although the percentage who are in good health among the "non-dependent" aged, studied in the house-to-house canvasses, is considerably larger than the percentage in this group, it must be remembered, that the ages represented here, are much higher than those in the "non-dependent" group. Only 3 per cent. were between 50 and 60 years of age in the former, while 48.39 per cent. were in the same comparatively young age period in the latter group.

Of those reported in poor health, it will be noticed that 22.60 per cent. were in bad health generally. The same percentage as in the almshouse group, were defective in sight or hearing. The percentage of feeble-minded in these institutions is only about one-third the percentage in public institutions for the aged. Similar percentages in both groups are found to be suffering from rheumatism, epilepsy, dropsy, etc.

The percentage of able-bodied in this group is reported as 16.3 per cent., which is more than three times the per cent. of those in almshouses; 63 per cent. are reported as partially disabled, and 20.6 per cent. as totally disabled. In the almshouse population the percentage of aged inmates totally disabled constitutes 55 per cent. of the inmates investigated.

TABLE NUMBER 30.

Causes of Disability.

Cause.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
Old age	549	47.65
Sickness	417	36.21
Accident	107	9.30
Feeble-minded	29	2.51
Loss of limb or organ	50	4.33
	1,152	100.00

This table is significant because it shows that old age is the leading factor in incapacity among these inmates. It constitutes 47.65 per cent. in this group as compared with 33 per cent. in the almshouse group. Sickness follows next as a cause in 36.21 per cent. of the cases investigated. A considerable number are incapacitated through accident or loss of limb or organ.

TABLE NUMBER 31.

Occupation of Inmates Before Admission.

Occupation.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.

Housewife	559	36.44
Domestic service	173	11.27
Farmer	47	3.06
Clerk	69	4.50
Miner	15	1.00
Small business	28	1.82
Profession	93	6.06
	1,534	100.00

The foregoing table shows that the percentage of skilled and semi-skilled workers is about the same in this group as in the almshouse group—19.50 per cent. as compared with 17.94 per cent. The percentage, however, of the common and unskilled group is less than half of the almshouse inmates. The number engaged in domestic service is almost twice the number of those who were engaged in the same occupation among the residents of pauper houses. As would be inferred from the disproportionate number of female inmates, the number of housewives is also greater here. In contrast to the almshouse population, a considerable percentage of professional people and even a sprinkling of small business men are found among these inmates.

TABLE NUMBER 32.

Weekly Earnings of Inmates Before Admission.

Amount of Weekly Wage.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
$3.00 or less	99	13.00
$3.00 to $5.00	140	18.24
$5.00 to $8.00	117	15.24
$8.00 to $12.00	212	27.63
$12.00 to $15.00	87	11.33
$15.00 to $20.00	63	8.20
$20.00 to $30.00	46	5.98
$30.00 to $40.00	1	.13
$40.00 and over	2	.25
	767	100.00

The foregoing table is significant. It shows that 31.24 per cent. earned less than $5.00 per week; and 74.01 per cent. earned less than $12.00 per week. Such a low wage was true of only 64.81 per cent. among almshouse paupers. The smaller income of the majority of the institutional inmates may be explained by the disproportionate number of women inmates, who evidently received lower wages. It is interesting to note that the great majority of these women paid considerable sums as admission fees. In saying up enough from their meagre incomes to pay the required fees, the sacrifices these women must have made, in providing for their old age, are amazing. The percentage of those earning more than $12.00 per week is again smaller among the inmates of private institutions. This may again be explained in the above manner.

The present sources of income of the inmates investigated were given as follows:

TABLE NUMBER 33.

Source of Income.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
None	1,411	80.31
Pensions	164	9.33
Savings	143	8.14
Property holdings	16	.92
Children's contributions	3	.17
Any other contributions	18	1.02
Union or Fraternal benefits	2	.11
	1,757	100.00

It will be seen that more than 80 per cent. have no source of income. Of the number who receive some income, 42 per cent. receive from $1.00 to $5.00 per week; 48 per cent. from $5.00 to $8.00 per week, and 10 per cent. receive more than $10.00 per week.

With reference to the previous property holding of these inmates, 87 per cent. stated they had never possessed any property. The values of the properties, of having such, were given as follows: Six per cent. had properties valued at $100 and less; 11 per cent. from $100 to $200; 33 per cent. from $300 to $500, and ten per cent. more claimed to have had properties valued at more than $1,000.

In entering the institution only 321 or 16.7 per cent. of a total of 928 answering this question paid no entrance fees; 5.3 per cent. paid $100 or less; 33 per cent. paid from $100 to $300, and 45 per cent. paid $300 or more on entering these homes.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION OF THE HOMES FOR THE AGED.

Practically all the different homes for the aged are maintained and managed either by various church denominations, beneficial orders, benevolent societies, or are maintained by private philanthropic legacies and endowments. In addition to these sources of income and the income derived from admission fees, many of these organizations solicit alms from different sources. A considerable number of these are also subsidized by the State. Of the 32 institutions reporting to the Board of Public Charities for the year 1917, only four did not charge admission fees. The entrance charge in the others ranged from $10, in one case, to $500 in the majority of cases.

All of the above institutions admit people only after they have reached a specific age. Of the 29 institutions stating the age necessary for admission, only one admits persons at the age of 45 and over. Fourteen institutions set the age limit at 60. In thirteen others no one is admitted under 65, while one institution admits people only after they have reached 70 years of age.

No accurate estimate of the number of aged people in benevolent homes is available. In the Institutional Directory of the Board of Public Charities for the year 1915, there are listed 114 institutions, scattered throughout the State, under "Homes for the Aged." A number of those listed, however, have either no home in connection with their dispensing of relief or provide only temporary shelter. Approximately 100 of these institutions maintain permanent homes for the aged. A letter inquiring as to the number of aged inmates in these homes, brought 43 responses. In these institutions the total annual average population was found to be 2,829. Presuming that the same ratio of population will be true of the remainder of the homes for the aged, it may be assumed that the total aged population in 1917, residing in the different private and benevolent homes was approximately 6,500.

The population of these institutions is far more stable and permanent than is the case with the population in the county poorhouses. An analysis of the reports of 32 aged institutions, submitted to the Board of Public Charities for the year 1917, shows that at the beginning of the fiscal year there were 1,466 inmates in these institutions. During the same year 372 more were taken in. Of these, 144 or 7.83 per cent. were discharged and 159 or 8.64 per cent. died during the same year. It will thus be observed that the movement of the population in these homes is insignificant, compared with that of the county almshouses. The explanation of this has already been stated elsewhere. The high death rate among this aged group is, of course, to be expected.

Because of reasons mentioned before, the Commission was unable to make personal visits to these institutions. A few letters from the heads of these homes, however, may add some light as to the general character of the homes and the types of inmates. "Our work," writes one superintendent, "is to provide for the poor and destitute who have no property, no incomes, nor means of support and who are needy. We admit no one under 60 years of age. Most of them are over 70 and 80, and require care rather than means. As old age brings so many infirmities, there is not one here who has not some kind of an affliction. Our old people come to make their homes with us until they die."

The Secretary of a Philadelphia Home writes, "We have from 70 to 75 residents at our home, the age ranging from 68 to 90 years. Of this number, I do not believe there would be even as many as one dozen who have one cent of income at any time; consequently, nearly all are entirely dependent on the bounty of the Home. Some have children, but I doubt if any of them are able to provide a suitable and comfortable home for their aged mothers; hence, their entry into our institution."

The Commander of the 'Pennsylvania Soldiers' and Sailors' Home of Erie, reports: "This is a Home for Soldiers and Sailors of the Civil War, and of the Spanish American War, who are admitted by reason of their service and their inability to maintain themselves. They are all over fifty years of age; the largest number over seventy-five; some over eighty; some over ninety; and one over one hundred. Nearly all receive pensions from the National Government, the amounts being governed according to the age and length of their service, which is held in trust for them by the Board of Trustees, while they remain in the Home. No women are admitted. There are here at present 211 men."

"We care for 175 men," writes the head of another aged institution, "all of them are over 60 years of age; 148 are over 70, and several are over 90. None of them are able to do any regular line of work. They have no relatives or friends who are able to or care to look after them. They have, therefore, placed them in this home to be cared for in every particular as if they were children. As no man is admitted who has a living wife, they are all widowers or bachelors and will remain here until they pass away. In most cases, the home will provide a place of burial and assume all expenses of funeral."

The matron of an Old Ladies' Home explains, "You will see, over half of our family have no income whatever; if they are eligible, it makes no difference, we admit them. If they have pensions they pay $51 a quarter, and they receive $24 a quarter for their own use. We provide everything necessary for them." Another one informs us "Our home is a place for old people but we have none but old ladies who apply. They have nothing to amount to anything over and above the $700 entrance fees, as we do not take women who have money or can take care of themselves. They must be 65 years old and have lived 10 years prior to application in the State of Pennsylvania; and able to help themselves. They have the use of the interest of the little money they have over and above the $700 for themselves. If they have nothing, the home cares for them as long as they live."

An Aged Colored Women's Home reports of the following inmates:

"Mrs. M. E., born Nov. 13, 1844, widow, without children, birthplace Philadelphia, no income from any source."

"Mrs. H. G., born Jan. 11, 1839, widow, without children, birthplace Port Deposit, Md., no income."

"Mrs. M. D., born at Romney, W. Va., was a slave and does not know date of birth, but thinks she is about 70 years old. No children, without any income."

"Mrs. J. W., born in the South in slavery, does not know where or when. Probably about 55 or 60 years old. Mentally incompetent. No family."

One matron sums up the inmates of her institution as follows: "None are admitted who are not destitute. None have any source of income. None have any occupation. None have any property. None have any relatives willing or able to help support them."

That the recent increase in prices affected these institutions considerably may be seen from the following letter: "The capacity of our home is 55 but owing to war conditions, increased cost of living, and the fact that the income for maintaining the home is received solely from legacies of its founders, we have not filled any vacancies for nearly three years in an effort to reduce the population of the home to 35."

It was alluded to before that many of the above Homes for the Aged receive subsidies from the State. "In some of these homes," reports the Pennsylvania State Dependents Commission, "it has happened that the State appropriation has been large enough to run the entire institution." The State Board of Public Charities has jurisdiction over the operation of these institutions. They are obliged to make a report annually to the latter body. At the end of 1918, however, only about 35 of the institutions for the aged had sent in their reports for the year 1917. Many of those who received State aid did not turn in a report, and a number of the reports that were returned were filled out inadequately.

The necessity of stricter supervision of these institutions has been recognized and advocated for some time. The Commission on Dependents in its 1915 Report to the Legislature urged strict supervision of these homes because it has found that in many homes where admission fees were charged, "It has happened more than once, that they have fallen into financial straits and, being unable to comply with their contracts, they have closed their doors, in consequence of which these elderly people have been forced to seek relief and shelter elsewhere, and have irrevocably lost their money which had been deposited as an entrance fee, and which was their sole dependence for support for the remainder of their lives."

†On hand.

From table No. 34, showing the incomes and expenditures of 32 institutions for the aged, it will be observed that 15 of these institutions receive State subsidies, the amounts aggregating $48,322.97. The State appropriations in a number of cases exceeded the incomes received from all other sources. Of the grand total income of $581,419.63, a total of $485,441.78 was spent on 1,545 inmates. The average per capita cost is thus $6.03 per week or $25.83 per month. This is slightly higher than the per capita cost in the case of the almshouses.

That there is a more proficient system of accounting in these institutions is apparent from the fact, that although the same classifications of expenditures were made in these institutions as in the case of the almshouses, there are fewer per capita costs here which cannot be made to balance. The relation of expenditures on "over head" to "direct maintenance" and to the "grand total" of expenditures, are approximately the same in both classes of institutions. The tremendous overhead expenses in a few of these institutions are also evident from the table. In one institution the weekly per capita cost amounts to $19.88, while in another it amounts to $33.81.

As in the case of the almshouses, the interest on permanent investments and depreciation is not included in the total cost. The aggregate valuation of the properties of 30 of these institutions, as reported to the Board of Public Charities for the year 1917, was $2,896,042.00. Five per cent. for interest and depreciation on these investments amounts to $144,802.10. When this is added to the total expenditures made during the year, the aggregate expenditures are $630,246.88. This total when divided by 1,545 the average inmates supported during the year, raises the per capita cost from $25.83 per month to $33.99 per month.

FACTS CONCERNING RECIPIENTS OF PRIVATE OUT-DOOR POOR RELIEF.

Thanks to the co-operation of the Secretaries of the Associated Charities and Aid Societies of Erie, Lancaster, Lansdowne, New Castle, Philadelphia, Scranton, Sewickley, Williamsport and York, their records for the latest fiscal year were examined by the Commission. Detailed information however, was secured of only such recipients of relief who were 50 years of age and over. A total of 471 cases were thus investigated.

TABLE NUMBER 35.

Ages of the Applicants for Private Outdoor Poor Relief.

Age.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
50 to 55	60	12.7
55 to 60	78	16.6
60 to 65	62	13.2
65 to 70	73	15.5
70 to 75	104	22.0
75 to 85	78	16.6
85 to 100	10	2.1
Not stated	6	1.3
	471	100.00

Of the aged recipients of private charity, 29.3 per cent. were between 50 and 60 years of age; 28.7 per cent. were between the ages of 60 and 70, while 40.7 per cent. were 70 years of age and over. That poverty and old age are in direct ratio to each other is thus obvious.

TABLE NUMBER 36.

Conjugal Condition.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
Single	57	12.1
Married	213	42.2
Widowed	183	38.8
Divorced	1	.2
Separated	13	2.8
Not stated	4	.9
	471	100.00

Although the percentage of married people in this group is much lower than is the case with institutional pauper classes, it is interesting to point out, that it is considerably lower than the percentage of the same found in the household studies; and is only a little more than half the percentage of married people of that age, in the entire population. This would seem to point out again—what has already been shown—that marriage, as such, is not a direct cause of poverty. On the contrary, it may even tend to alleviate pauperism to a certain extent. Widowhood, or the loss of the breadwinner is the dominating factor everywhere, as a cause of poverty. This has been recognized in most civilized countries and practically all European governments have established forms of protective insurance against such exigencies.

Scanty family connections are a characteristic feature of dependent classes. Of the married in this group, 34 per cent. live alone; 41 per cent. have but one other person living with them and only 25 per cent. have two or more persons in their families. Seventeen per cent. of the aged applicants for poor relief have children still under 16 years of age. Eighty-three per cent. of the children, however, are adult. The extent of the childrens' or other relatives' ability to help support is given by 307 applicants. Of these, only 11 or 3.6 per cent. were reported as fully able to help support; 198 or 64.4 per cent. were reported as partly able or willing to help support, while 98 or 32 per cent. were unable to help support in any way.

TABLE NUMBER 37.

Nativity of Recipients of Private Charity.

Nativity.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
Pennsylvania	140	34.2
United States	117	28.9
Foreign	152	36.9
	409	100.00

While the percentage of those receiving private poor relief is very small for Pennsylvania natives, in proportion to those born in the State in the entire population, poverty as a whole, is evidently home grown rather than imported from foreign lands. Sixty-three and one-tenth per cent. of the recipients of private outdoor relief are native born and only 36.9 per cent. are of foreign origin. The proportion of those born in other States and in foreign countries is much larger than the population of the same groups in the total State population. While the percentage of native Pennsylvanians receiving charity is less than half the percentage of the same in the entire population, the ratio of those born in other States and receiving charity is more than twice the proportion in the entire State population.

Of the foreign born 53 per cent. were naturalized. Only 12 per cent. of those born in other States or in foreign countries have lived in Pennsylvania less than 10 years; 20 per cent. were in this State from 10 to 20 years; 33 per cent. from 20 to 30 years, and 35 per cent. have resided here for 30 years or more. While the percentage of those residing a shorter period in this State is higher in this group than in the case of the institutional dependents, the small percentage of dependents contributed by recent immigration is still noticeable.

Occupations at Time of Application for Relief.

Occupations.	Number Investigated.	Per Cent.
Not working	168	48.4
Common and unskilled labor	87	25.0
Skilled labor	11	3.2
Domestic service	58	16.8
Housewife	23	6.6
	347	100.00

The striking feature in the above table is the fact that 48.4 per cent. were not working at the time of application for relief. The small percentage of skilled workmen, as in apparent from the table, is significant. The large number engaged in domestic service is also conspicuous. The causes for relief were attributed to sickness, by 41.6 per cent., and unemployment by 7 per cent. Other causes for relief given, were: old age by 42 per cent.; insufficient income or low wages by two and one-half per cent.; strikes by 1.8 per cent.; accident by one and one-half per cent.; domestic and other maladjustments by 3 per cent., and less than 1 per cent. were in temporary need because of death.

The earning capacity of aged people may be seen from the following: Of those who were working at the time of their applying for relief, 48.6 per cent. were earning less than $5 per week; 20.5 per cent. earned from $5 to $12 per week, and only 30.9 per cent. earned wages above $12 per week. These earnings, it must be remembered, were in a period of the greatest prosperity, in which high wages were the rule.

One-half of the applicants, to the Charity Organizations enumerated above, had no other sources of income outside their own wages. Of those having some outside assistance 70.8 per cent. were helped by children or other relatives; 10.2 per cent. by church organizations; 8 per cent. had pensions; 5.3 per cent. were receiving benefits from unions or fraternal organizations and 5.7 per cent. more were receiving some income from property holdings or savings. The amounts of these outside incomes were less than $5 per week in 56 per cent. of the cases; from $5 to $10 per week in 32 per cent., and only 12 per cent. had outside incomes amounting to $10 or more per week.

Of the 471 cases investigated, by these different Charity Organizations, 26.2 per cent. were found to be fully in need. Seventy-two and three-tenths per cent. were partly needy and only 1.5 per cent. were found to be in no distress. Eighteen per cent. of these applicants had received relief once or more before; 82 per cent., however, had applied for the first time. Only 9 per cent. of those applying for private relief were inmates of charitable institutions at some previous time in their lives.

The nature of relief given to these applicants is listed as follows:

TABLE NUMBER 39.
Nature of Relief Given.

Kind.	Number.	Per Cent.
Food	165	49.6
Fuel	50	15.0
Cash	49	14.7

Medical assistance	8	2.4
Given work	4	1.2
Referred to other institutions	2	.6
Relief refused	8	2.4
	333	100.00

The amounts given per month to these applicants were as follows: 27.3 per cent. received $3 and less a month; 16.7 per cent. were given from $3 to $5 per month; 33.8 per cent. from $5 to $10 per month, and 22.2 per cent. received relief amounting to more than $10 per month. The length of time this relief continued was for 1 month or less, 35.4 per cent.; from 1 to 3 months, 17.2 per cent.; from 3 to 12 months, 19.2 per cent., and for more than 1 year, 28.2 per cent.

WORK OF THE PHILADELPHIA SOCIETY FOR ORGANIZING CHARITY.

The Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity had 218 applicants for relief, who were 50 years of age or over for their fiscal year ending October, 1918.

The nativity of these applicants was as follows: 111 were born in the United States; 40 were born in Ireland; 22 in England; 17 in Italy; 13 in Germany; 6 in Scotland, and one in each of the following countries: Austria, Armenia, France, Poland, Switzerland, and West Indies. Of the foreign born 34 were naturalized; 32 were not naturalized, while the citizenship of the rest of the cases could not be ascertained. Seventy-three were born in Pennsylvania and lived here all their lives; 13 resided in Pennsylvania over 50 years; 45 lived in this State from 25 to 50 years; 35 from 5 to 25 years; 4 lived here less than 5 years and in 48 cases the length of residence was uncertain.

The ages of the applicants were as follows: 44 were over 50 years of age but under 60 years; 55 were between the ages of 60 and 70; 92 between 70 and 80; 20 between 80 and 90; three were over 90 years of age and four did not know their ages. Thirty-two of these were single; 56 were married and lived together; 112 were widows, 10 were widowers and 8 were deserted or divorced.

Eighty-one of these applicants were living alone; 72 had two in their families; 26 had three in their families; 9 had 4; 14 had 5; 5 had families consisting of 6 persons each; and 22 had more than 6 in their families. Ninety-six of the applicants had no children living. Ten had children under 16 years; 57 had children over 21 years of age. Six had dependent grandchildren. Only 21 of these lived with married children and grandchildren.

At the time of application 146 had no occupation; 24 did housework; 20 did odd jobs; 16 sewed for a living and 4 were barbers. Among the other occupations given were mill-workers, carpenters, machinists, tin-makers, expressmen, news-stand men, clerks, teachers, peddlers, pipe-fitters and storekeepers. Of those working at the time 37 earned less than $5 per week. Fifteen earned from $5 to $10 per week; 9 earned from $10 to $15 per week and 4 worked for their board.

The previous occupations of these applicants are significant; forty-six were domestic servants; 30 were housewives; 20 were seamstresses; 19 were laborers; 6 were collectors; 5 were teachers, with a like number of drivers; 2 were watchmen; three were blacksmiths; and one was a pharmacist. Four had been in the regular army. Others were pipe fitters, actors, wholesale notion sellers, shoemakers, printers and longshoremen.

The reasons attributed for relief were as follows: Feebleness from age 140; sickness 57; unemployment 25; irregular employment 9; non-support 20; accident 14; blind or deaf 15; intemperance 10; previous supporter incapacitated 14; and a few others because of exhausted savings.

Of the 218 cases, 92 were completely dependent; 86 were partially dependent; 30 were temporarily dependent; 6 needed homes; and 4 would be dependent when small savings were exhausted. The nature of the relief given was food in 88 cases; in 28 cases rent was paid and in a like number of cases clothing was purchased. Coal was given to 29 persons. Sixty-three persons were helped with a monthly outlay of $5 and under; 51 were given from $5 to $10 per month; 27 from $10 to $15; 7 from $15 to $20, and 14 persons were given relief amounting to $20 and more per month.

Of the other sources of income received by these applicants, 40 received support from children; 25 from relatives; 9 from friends; 20 received pensions; 22 were given free homes with relatives; 11 were assisted by churches; 6 had lodgers, and 30 had no other sources of income than that given by the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity. Only 13 of the 218 cases had obtained outdoor relief previously, and 28 had been inmates of charitable institutions before.

The extent of the ability of the children or other relatives to help support may be judged from the following: Twenty-five applicants secured complete support from children; 92 were given partial support; 40 had no relatives; 17 had relatives who could not be located; 23 had relatives who were unable to support, while 21 had relatives who were able but unwilling to help support.

The Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity gave cash relief to 162 of these aged applicants. The total amount given for the entire period, these cases were under the care of the Society, was $33,291.57.

STUDY OF THE NON-INDEPENDENT AGED POPULATION.

By far the most numerous and most significant aged group to be considered in any study of the problems confronting the aged—is the non-dependent* aged group. This class constitutes the most important element when a system of old age pensions is contemplated for the aged poor. Many aged people, not depending upon public or private charity, and nominally standing above the line of dependency and who are excluded from the ranks of the pauper classes, are often in needy circumstances, and would properly be entitled to share in the benefits of any system of old age pensions. It is, therefore, of prime importance to have all the information with regard to the number of the aged who are above or below the line of dependency; the extent to which they were able and have saved for old age, and the degree of their physical capabilities to take care of themselves.

Altho certain phases of the aged problem are generally known, the information available was found to be insufficient as far as furnishing fully the data which is necessary in a study of the exact conditions of the old people. This lack of material was even more felt when facts relating to the social and economic conditions of the aged in Pennsylvania were sought. The Commission, therefore, deemed it advisable to make direct surveys of these people and secure the information at first hand. Studies of the aged people—including men and women—50 years of age and over, were made by the Commission in particular sections of Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Reading. The districts were selected in each city after consultation with local social workers and municipal authorities. The aim was to select districts, not only representative of the entire city population but ones populated principally by the different wage-earning elements, especially the better paid skilled workmen.

The districts canvassed in Philadelphia were the 16th and 17th wards. These are located in the northeastern part of the city, known as the Kensington District. In 1910, the populations of the 16th and 17th wards were 16,175 and 17,484 respectively. The majority of the inhabitants of these wards consist of wage-earners engaged largely in the textile industry and an intermittent sprinkling of small business men. In Pittsburgh, the 18th ward with a population in 1910 of 17,994, was investigated. This ward is located in the section known as South Hills.

The inhabitants of this ward are made up largely of skilled workmen and clerks, with a considerable number of professional and business men. In Reading, the investigations covered the 5th, 6th, 12th, 13th and 16th wards. In 1910 the total population of these wards was 38,135. These wards, scattered, thruout the city, are inhabited by representative groups of the city. These districts embrace the middle class neighborhoods, the wealthy sections and the slum districts of the city.

Every family, in the districts canvassed, was visited by the Commission's investigators. Detailed information, however, was solicited only of those having some member of the family 50 years of age and over.† In those families not having any one 50 years of age or over, the number in the family was taken down on a separate blank, provided for that purpose. When both husband and wife were over 50, the wife's age was taken down. All other data was obtained only with regard to the husband. When the husband was dead, the information of the present conditions was obtained with regard to the widow; and the previous conditions with regard to the husband, if possible.

In Philadelphia, 1,055 persons 50 years of age and over were interviewed from a card schedule provided for that purpose. The total population visited was 16,281. In Pittsburgh, 1,252 persons were interrogated. The total population visited was 13,960. In Reading, in the five wards canvassed, a total of 2,170 aged people were questioned. The number of people visited was 21,763. The combined number of people 50 years of age and over investigated by the Commission, in the three cities, was 4,477. The total population covered was 52,004.

*This term is not used literally. It is applied only to the senile population residing in their own homes as contrasted with the aged dependents who are receiving public or private relief. It is not to be inferred that every person in this group has never been a recipient of relief or was not depending upon some one else for support at the time of investigation.

†It is not to be inferred that this comparatively low age was selected with a few of pensioning at that age. The Commission decided to include in the group to be studied, all those 50 years of age and over because of the valuable information the younger group was expected to supply to the aged problem, especially as it is affected by the particular Pennsylvania industries.

The percentage of old people, between the ages of 50 and 60, in the three cities mentioned above was found to be 48.1. Between the ages of 60 and 65 the average is 19.5 per cent.; 12.5 per cent. is the average in the three cities of those who are from 65 to 70 years of age, while 19.9 per cent. are 70 years of age and over. Approximate percentages for the same age classifications in the entire State population of those 50 years of age and over are given in the 1910 Census. These are: between the ages of 50 and 59, 51.9 per cent.; from 60 years of age to 64, 17.5 per cent.; from 65 to 75, 21.8 per cent., and 8.4 per cent. for those 75 years of age and over. In 1910 there were in Pennsylvania a total of 1,073,442 persons over 50 years of age; of these, 558,603 were between the ages of 50 to 59; 188,921 were between the ages of 60 to 64; 234,887 from 65 to 74, and 91,031 over 75 years of age.

The percentage of people over 50 years of age in the entire State population in 1910 was 14 per cent. The percentage of those 45 years of age and over was 19.1. In urban centers, however, the percentage of those 45 years of age and over was 18.3 or eight-tenths less than in the entire State. The 1910 U. S. Census also gives the percentages of people 65 years of age and over as 4.3 for the entire population. The same aged population divided by urban and rural districts was 3.7 and 5.1 per cent. respectively. On the basis of the relation of the total aged people interviewed (including their wives), and the population visited in the house-to-house studies, the percentage of people 50 years of age and over is 11.3. The percentage of those 65 years of age and over is found to constitute 3.2 per cent. of the total population.

The totals in the above table include also the wives who were 50 years of age and over. It will be seen that the percentage of females 50 years of age and over is a little higher than that of males. The proportion of males and females, for those 50 years of age and over, as given in the 1910 Census for the entire State population was as follows: 49.8 per cent. for females and 50.2 per cent. for males. In urban centers, however, the ratio of males 45 years of age and over as given by the same Census was 17.8 per cent. as compared with 20.1 per cent. in rural districts. The percentage of women of the same age group was 18.9 in urban centers and 20.1 in rural districts. The apparent discrepancy between the figures in the above table and the Census figures for the entire State population may be due to the fact that the percentage of women 45 years of age and over in the urban centers is higher than the percentage of men of the same age group in the same centers.

The above table reveals many interesting facts. The average percentage of single people is found to be 5.4. The average for married is found to be 55 per cent. In the entire State population, as given in the 1910 census, the percentage of single people 45 years of age and over was 9.5 per cent. For the same year the percentage of married people, 45 years of age and over, was 69 per cent. A considerable increase over the Census figures is found in the case of widowed persons. The figures being 38.22 per cent. as given in the above table and 20.8 per cent. as given by the Census. The proportion of divorced in this aged group is less than one per cent. in both cases. The differences between the Commission's figures and those given by the Census may in part be accounted for by the fact that the latter figures include also the group between 45 and 50 years of age, while the former figures deal only with those 50 years of age and over. It is to be expected that the number of single people would be somewhat less among the older group than among the younger. The differences in the percentages of married people may be accounted for by the fact that the proportion of widowed in the three cities is almost twice as large as that given by the Census. That a considerable number die between the ages of 45 and 50 is obvious. The remarkable differences between the marital conditions of this senile group and the aged institutional pauper classes have already been pointed out.

It will be observed from the foregoing table that of the people investigated 51.7 per cent. were born in Pennsylvania; 8.1 per cent. were born in other states of the Union, while 37.8 per cent. were of foreign birth. The nativity of the entire State population in 1910 was, native born 51.2 per cent., and 18.8 per cent. foreign born. The percentage of those born in other States as compared with those born in Pennsylvania, was 9.4 per cent. and 90.6 per cent. respectively.

That only 7.7 per cent. of the foreign born have lived in the United States less than 10 years, is to be expected when it is remembered that men ordinarily emigrate to a strange country in the prime of life. Few people can undertake this responsibility when past middle age. The insignificant number of those having a short period of residence in Pittsburgh is largely due to the character of the population of the particular district and does not hold true of the entire foreign population of the city. Twenty-two and seven-tenths per cent. have lived in the United States from 10 to 30 years, while of the foreign born residing in this county for 30 years or more the percentage varies from 52.3 per cent. in Philadelphia to 83.7 per cent. in Pittsburgh. The average for all cities of this class of residents is 69.6 per cent.

Total	1,252	100.0	2,170	100.0	1,955	100.0	100.0

The number of aged people residing in Pennsylvania under 10 years is apparently very small. That Philadelphia should have a higher percentage of the short time residents, is to be expected because of its larger foreign population. The proportion of those residing in Pennsylvania more than 30 years or all their lives, is very large in each city. The exceedingly higher percentage found in Reading is to be expected from a population consisting largely of natives.

According to the Thirteenth United States Census, the percentage of naturalized foreigners in Philadelphia in 1910, was 41.5 per cent. In Pittsburgh the percentage was 41, while in Reading it amounted to 31.6 per cent. The higher percentages of naturalized voters given in the above table, as compared with those in the Census, is to be expected of the older persons whose period of residence, as stated before, was quite long. It may also be explained by the fact that the war has spurred many foreigners to become naturalized.

The preceding table is interesting. It will be observed that the number living alone varies from 16.3 in Reading to 20.6 in Pittsburgh and 25.7 in Philadelphia. This variation is readily explained by the larger foreign born population in the respective cities, which contribute a greater number of single people. Twenty-seven per cent. have only their wives living with them. The number of aged folks living either alone or with their wives constitute thus, nearly 50 per cent. Twenty-nine and seven-tenths per cent. have one or two children living with them and 21 per cent. have three or more children residing with them.

Attention has already been called to the fact, that while of this aged class, only 10.6 per cent. have no children, the percentage of those not having any children in the pauper groups were 65.61 per cent. in the case of almshouse inmates; a similar percentage in the case of inmates of benevolent homes, and 44 per cent. in the case of the recipients of private outdoor relief. It is evident that the possession of children in old age is a great protection against dependency. Thirty-one per cent., as shown in Table No. 48, had one or two children living; forty-five per cent. had from 3 to 6 children alive; while 12.7 per cent. had more than 6 children living. Of these children, only 2.3 per cent. were still under 16 years of age; 16 per cent. of the adult children were married, while 80.7 per cent. were still single. It is interesting to note that among the aged people applying to the Charity Organizations for relief, the number of those having children still under 16 years of age, was 17 per cent., or more than five times the proportion in this group.

Altho as was pointed out, only a small percentage of this group have children under 16 years of age, the number of those, however, having no one depending upon them is only 37.8 per cent. Thirty-one and five-tenths per cent. have their wives to support, while 30.7 per cent. more, have one or more children besides their wives depending upon them. The dependents are, of course, not confined to juvenile children. They are often defective adult children and members of the family who are invalided. Many cases were found where aged people were supporting their widowed daughters or grandchildren who were left orphans, or who were defective.

Of the total 3,889 families given in the above table, it is seen that more than 50 per cent. were still the heads of their own families. Seven and three-tenths per cent. lived alone; 32.4 per cent. lived with children and 8.5 per cent. were living with relatives or friends. The large number of the non-dependent parents residing with their children is striking, as compared with the pauper classes. This is a result largely, because unlike the case with the pauper classes where the great majority of the children were unable to help support, the occupations ascertained of the children who do support their aged parents seem to show that the latter are more or less capable of doing so. The figures in the following table reveal the fact that only few of these children belong to the lowest ranks of labor.

Of the married children, who were supporting their parents, it appears that a great majority were not burdened with large families of their own. Seventeen per cent. had no children at all; 47 per cent. had but one or two children to support; 24.5 per cent. had three or four children living, and only 11.5 had more than four children of their own. A number of cases, in each city, however, were found where aged persons were supported by children who were earning low wages and had large families of their own. Aged parents—and in some cases even distantly removed relatives—were given support by many heads of families even though it entailed great sacrifices. This burden, altho in most cases borne cheerfully, was nevertheless, at the expense of their own and their children's comfort.

The comparatively larger number of this senile population in sound or fair health, over those in pauper institutions has been commented on before. That the percentage of people between the ages of 50 and 60 is greater in this group than in the pauper classes has also been pointed out. It is significant, however, to note that 36 per cent. of the people 50 years of age and over in the three cities studied have already become incapacitated.

The leading defects given were as follows: 13.8 per cent. were in a general bad or poor state of health; 9.9 per cent. were suffering from rheumatism, and only 2.7 per cent. claimed old age as a direct cause of their feebleness. Small percentages were suffering from various illnesses. Of the number reported sick in the three cities 61.8 per cent. were partially incapacitated and 38.2 per cent. were totally incapacitated for labor.

The extent of sickness in the families, from whom information with regard to this was obtained, is shown in the preceding table. It will be seen that 58.1 per cent. had no sickness during the past year in their families; 14.8 per cent. had less than one month of sickness; 10.8 per cent. had from one to three months of sickness; 9.8 per cent. had sickness in their families from three to twelve months, while 6.5 per cent. had somebody sick in their families for more than twelve months. Sickness with regard to wage-earners themselves in the same families is found to be as follows: 59.5 per cent. of the wage-earners were not sick at any time during the year. 18.6 per cent. were sick for less than three months; 10.9 per cent. were sick from one to three months; 8.7 per cent. from three to twelve months, and 2.3 per cent. were sick all the time during the year. The enormous amount of sickness among wage-earners themselves in this population is significant.

Table Number 54 reveals many interesting facts. An examination of the total number of aged persons in all the three cities from which the previous and present occupations were ascertained, shows that men past a certain age must quit even the skilled trades in which they have been engaged the greater part of their lives. Modern industry, apparently, has little use for the superannuated worker, and few men can continue working at the same occupation after they have reached a certain age. While 36 per cent. stated that they were skilled or semi-skilled mechanics in their earlier days, only 23.8 per cent. of men past 50 years of age were still engaged in the same occupation. The percentage of those doing unskilled or common labor or clerical labor, on the other hand, remained stable. That there would be a decrease in the per cent. of the aged population formerly engaged in small business enterprises is surprising. It is also to be noticed that in their earlier days less than 2 per cent. were not working because of incapacity, but 26.6 per cent. were found not to be working among those 50 years of age and over. The fluctuations of the minor occupations are inconsiderable.

Table Number 55 is significant. The effects of war wages upon the earning capacity of this senile group is shown clearly. The extreme low pay has diminished considerably. While 7.5 per cent. were earning less than $5 per week in their former days only 3.5 per cent. or less than half were earning the same at the time of investigation in spite of their advanced ages. This would seem to show that the wage rate per day was considerably higher during the war period, and men and women who because of their poor health could work only two or three days in the week, earned more than they did formerly, even while working, in many cases, every day in the week. The percentage earning the next wage from $5 to $12 per week is also almost one-third the percentage of those who earned the same weekly sums in their earlier ages. On the other hand, of those who earned the average wage previously, between $12 and $20 per week, the percentage was 42.3 per cent. as against 28.2 per cent. earning the same amounts at the time of investigation. Twenty-two and one-tenth per cent. however, were earning $20 or more a week in their earlier days, but 24 per cent. were earning the same amount of money at present. In spite of the tremendous industrial expansion in Pennsylvania during the war, and the drafting of the young workers from the three cities investigated, it is evident from the low standard of the average wage paid these workers, that aged people are either not wanted in Pennsylvania industries or are not remunerated to the same extent as the younger workers, or to the extent of the wages earned by themselves in their earlier days. Besides the effects of the increased cost of living, however, the conditions of the aged were affected by the war in many other ways. Many of the old folks were supported largely by young children who boarded with them. Altho the latter often made no direct contributions to the family, they paid for their room and board, which very often was sufficient to keep the entire family in comfort. When these boys were drafted, a great number either made no allotment or in many cases, when they were made, they were received after much delay. A great many aged people were thus left almost destitute by the war. Instead, therefore, of decreasing the problem of aged dependency, the effect of the war has tended to augment it.

It is interesting to observe the variations in the present wage-standards of the three different cities. Philadelphia gives the highest percentage of those aged earning less than $12 per week. The percentages being 9.3 for Pittsburgh; 14.2 in Reading, and 19.3 per cent. earning this amount in Philadelphia. Of those earning the average wage—between $12 and $20 per week—Philadelphia leads with 31.8 per cent.; Reading follows with 27.7 per cent., while Pittsburgh gives the lowest, 25.1 per cent. The latter city, however, leads in the percentage of those earning the highest wages. Of the old people having an income of $20 or more per week, Pittsburgh leads with 30 per cent.; Reading follows with 22.6 per cent., while Philadelphia has only 18.9 per cent. earning the same amount.

The causes attributed to the impairment of wages are given in the above table. It will be observed that sickness is the leading cause of impairment. However, this is true only of Reading and Philadelphia, the leading cause of disability in Pittsburgh is attributed to old age, which in the former two cities, ranks second.

The above table is significant. While the percentage of workers, whose earning-power is impaired before the age of 40 in Pennsylvania, is small, the percentage of those whose earning-power is impaired between the period of 40 and 50 years of age is considerable. Fifty per cent. of workers have their earning-power impaired before the age of 55. When reaching the age of 65, nearly 85 per cent. of wage-earners have their earning-power impaired and their wages reduced.

That many heads of families still continue to labor even after their health has been impaired is generally known. The above table shows that only 14.2 per cent. had stopped working altogether before the age of 50. At the age of 60, altho 67.5 per cent. had their health impaired, only 41.4 per cent. of the heads of the families had actually stopped working. It is interesting to point out that while there is little difference between the three cities with regard to the impairment ages, there is considerable variation in the percentages of those that stopped working altogether before reaching the given age period. Only in 9 per cent. of the cases did the earning power stop entirely before 50 years of age in Reading. In Philadelphia, the earning power of 33.8 per cent. of the heads of families stopped before reaching the age of 50, while in Pittsburgh it was 21.26 per cent.

The preceding table is exceedingly significant. It will be observed that the earning power of many workers is impaired before they reach the age of 40. The percentage varies from 2.6 per cent. among indoor and sedentary trades to 16.4 in the steel industry and 57.1 per cent. in the case of railroad workers. Only in the steel industry, however, is there found a number who are totally incapacitated before the age of 40. The extent of incapacity before reaching the age of 50 among workers, classified according to the industries they were engaged in, is also shown in the above table. It will be observed that in the building trades 12.6 per cent. are partially impaired before the age of 50 and only 6.3 per cent. are totally incapacitated before reaching the same age. On reaching that age it is found that 55.3 per cent. are partially and 14.1 per cent. are totally impaired in the case of steel workers. Of those engaged in casual occupations 26.7 per cent. have their earning powers partly, and 8.4 wholly reduced before attaining 50 years of age. Of indoor and sedentary trades the percentage of partially impaired before the 50th birthday is 15.2, while 8.3 are wholly disqualified for service at that age. Twenty-six and nine-tenths per cent. among glass blowers have their earning powers reduced before reaching

50 years of age and 20 per cent. at the same age are permanently incapacitated. Of skilled workmen in the various trades, 29 per cent. are impaired partially and less than 3 per cent. wholly before attaining their 50th birthday. Among railroad workers of those whose incomes are affected before the age of 50, the percentages are 64.3 to a partial extent and 6.2 entirely.

At the age of 60, the proportion of workers, according to the various trades, whose earning powers had not yet been affected are as follows: In the building trades 55.1 per cent. suffered no loss of income before reaching the age of 60. In the steel industry only 13.2 per cent. were earning the same amounts as in their earlier days at that age. Thirty-six per cent. of workers are still found engaged at 60 in casual occupations. Among workers of indoor and sedentary trades, 46.5 per cent. were found without reductions in their earning power at the age of 60. Only 26.9 per cent. of glass blowers are in their full capacity at that age, and none are found engaged in that industry at the age of 70. The percentage of skilled mechanics in good health at 60, is 25.5 per cent., while 28.2 per cent. of railroad workers are found to be in unimpaired health at the age of 60.

Railroad workers	9	32.1	9	32.1	10	35.8

A glance at table Number 59 reveals the causes of the high and low disability age periods as are found in the various industries. In the building trades the leading cause of disability is attributed to sickness, with old age following. The same is true of all other industries except in the case of railroads, where the leading cause is attributed to accidents, with 35.8 per cent. Old age, as a cause of incapacity, is highest in the case of indoor and sedentary occupations and lowest in the building trades. Accidents as a cause of disability, as stated above, is highest among railroad workers. A high percentage of accidents—20.1—is also found among steel workers.

It will be seen that the proportion of those who have other sources of income besides their wages is quite varied in the three cities. In Pittsburgh, only 32 per cent. have no other source of income. In Reading, there are 41 per cent. having no other means of support, while in Philadelphia more than one-half, or 57.6 per cent. claimed to have had no other source of income except their earnings. The explanation largely lies, as has been pointed out before, in the different characteristics of the populations canvassed in the three cities. For the three cities inclusive, the average per cent. receiving incomes from property holdings was 11.8; from savings 1.5 per cent.; from pensions 5.3 per cent.; from insurance 1.6 per cent.; and from unions or fraternal organizations 4.1 per cent. Many of the aged folks were supporting themselves by having their children board with them, while the great majority were living with their children and were supported by them.

The amounts of the outside income were given as follows: 3.1 per cent. claimed an income from other sources amounting to less than $2 a week; 11.7 per cent. received an income from $2 to $5 per week; 20.1 per cent. from $5 to $10 per week; 19.9 per cent. from $10 to $20; 18.1 per cent. $20 or more, while 27.1 per cent. only received room and board and the necessary expenses.

The differences, in the three cities, between those who claimed to have had property above debts at any time is significant. Only 17.5 per cent. of Philadelphians claimed to have had property of their own. In Reading, the percentage was 39 and one-half per cent., while in Pittsburgh, 57.5 per cent. claimed to have had property above debts. On the other hand, while in Pittsburgh, only 42.5 per cent. had no property, the percentage of the same in Philadelphia was 82.5 per cent. or nearly double the number in Pittsburgh.

Of those who claimed to have had property in their earlier days but who had lost it, the causes given for the losses were as follows: 88.3 per cent. had to sell their properties in order to meet emergency needs, or because of want of immediate support; 7.1 per cent. lost their property thru unwise investments; 2.3 per cent. thru bank failures, while an equal per cent. lost their property thru fraud.

The adequacy of the earnings of the aged in Pennsylvania to meet their needs, may to a certain extent be judged from the following tables. The weekly expenditures given below are only for those aged who were the heads of the families. No classification is here made as to the expenditures of individual males, females, couples or families. The average number of persons in the families studied, however, was in Pittsburgh, 3.6, Reading 3.8, and Philadelphia, 3.7.

For the three cities studied, 10.1 per cent. pay rentals of less than $8 per month. The variations for each city, however, are considerable. It varies from 4.5 per cent. in Pittsburgh to 19.3 per cent. in Philadelphia. Twenty-five and eight-tenths per cent. pay rentals ranging from $8 to $15 per month. This again varies from 10.4 per cent. in Pittsburgh to 29.8 in Reading and 37.4 per cent. in Philadelphia. In the Philadelphia districts, more than 50 per cent. pay rentals amounting to less than $15 per month. In Pittsburgh only 14.9 per cent. pay similar sums. The differences in these rentals is not only an indication of the higher rents paid in Pittsburgh but further bears out the differences in the character of the population, residing in the territories canvassed in the different cities. It is again to be noticed that while only 15 per cent. were owning their homes in Philadelphia, 50.6 per cent. owned homes in Reading and 64.6 per cent. were home owners in Pittsburgh. The average home ownership for the three cities is 43.5 per cent. The Thirteenth U. S. Census gives the home ownership for Pennsylvania as 41.5 per cent. In the entire United States, home ownership was 45.8 per cent.

The greater number of single aged people in Philadelphia again accounts for the greater percentage of those spending least on food per week. A greater number spend from $10 to $20 on food, in Pittsburgh, than in Reading or Philadelphia. For the three cities inclusive only 36.6 per cent. spend less than $10 per week on food; 50.3 per cent. have expenditures on food running from $10 to $20 per week, while 13.1 per cent. spend more than $20 per week on food.

The remarkable small expenditures made on clothing by many aged folks is evident from the above table. This is to be expected of the aged group, who manage to get along with much less expenses on clothing than can the younger and middle aged group. It will be observed that in Pittsburgh the number having no expenditures on clothing is considerably larger than the number in other cities. That the large expenditures made on rents and food have something to do with this fact, has been borne out from the investigations in the three cities. Many aged parents, in answer to the question of the amounts spent on food and rents replied, "we spend all we make." Very little under these circumstances was left to be spent for clothing. The ingenious methods applied by many housewives in obtaining their clothes were astonishing. Only 25 per cent. were spending more than $4 a month on clothing.

Only 41.4 per cent. had no expenses on medicine; 48.3 per cent. spent less than $1 per week; 10 per cent., however, were found to have medicine expenditures of over $5 per week.

CHAPTER II.

EXTENT AND NATURE OF EXISTING PENSION SYSTEMS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

(1) INDUSTRIAL PENSION SYSTEMS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The problem of the old man in industry is comparatively a new one. It is the outgrowth of the machine process and industrial expansion. It might seem to some, that the war, with its increasing demand for labor, has checked, if not solved, the problem of superannuation. But the careful observer will readily see that the problem has only been aggravated. The increased industrial efficiency, necessitated by the war, and the great demand for young men, have magnified the problem of the worn out worker. And under the added strain of war efficiency combined with modern industry, human energy soon wears out, the problem will, doubtless, grow in its intensity.

In Pennsylvania the problem is pressing. This is due to the fact that in this State we find located some of the country's leading corporations. In these industries, producing the country's largest wealth, millions of men are employed. In order, therefore, to ascertain to what extent industrial concerns are taking care of their aged or superannuated workers, letters were sent to every corporation in the State employing five hundred men or more. A number of other firms, with well known pension or retirement systems, were also canvassed. The latter, although not necessarily located in the State have nevertheless hundreds of workers here. The letters aimed to inquire into the various systems of superannuation now in operation by the different concerns. In addition, information as to the number of employees, the number of pensioners, the amount expended on them and the total annual payroll, was solicited.

Two hundred and fifty letters were addressed to these concerns. Nearly two hundred of them promptly replied stating whether or not they had any definite system, pensioning their old employees.

No one will deny that the problem of the aged worker is of paramount importance. This is true in Pennsylvania on account of our highly developed industries. In view of these facts, it is rather surprising to see the remarkably small percentage of concerns that have actually established regular pension systems.

This is even more astonishing when it is acknowledged by all industrial leaders, that a pension system is a "good business policy." Furthermore, it is claimed by many employers that the system is doing much to reconcile the two classes. It is generally argued that an established pension fund, reduces the extent of industrial discontent and cultivates instead efficiency and feelings of harmony and loyalty. The employees generally accept such a system with favor and thus bring the employer and employees together in recognizing a mutual interest. It is universally admitted that it has done much to eliminate waste and demoralization in industry, as a result of continued employment of men who have long outlived their usefulness.

It may not be profitable to enter into an exhaustive discussion of the motives for the establishment of such systems. Suffice it to say, however, that it is generally agreed by all students, that while a few may have been inspired by humanitarian or philanthropic motives, the economic considerations play the leading part. Pensions are given not only "as a reward for faithful and efficient service" and "appreciation of the fidelity and honest service of the employee," but also, "as an incentive to further service" as is explicitly stated by many corporations. It is hardly probable that one of the chief purposes, as advanced by several students, in establishing a regular pension system, was to lessen the attractiveness of labor unions and make men loyal to their employers, rather than to one another or to any Brotherhood. Were this true, it has failed in its purpose. We have but to observe the growth and power of the Railroad Brotherhoods while contending with such systems for a long period in this country. However, Miles J. Dawson, in the U. S. Department of Labor report of the Proceedings of the Conference on Social Insurance, held in December, 1916, relates an instance when "A Canadian Railway Company which had not engaged to pay pensions, except at its pleasure, recalled retired employees to its service upon the occasion of a strike, on penalty of forfeiting their pensions. This involved depriving an old employee of the reward of a lifetime of service unless ready to dishonor himself by betraying a Brotherhood of which he had been member for a quarter century or longer."

Neither can it be advanced that employers of labor have allied to adopt regular pension schemes in view of the expense involved. On the contrary, systems of pensions have proved ultimately to be inexpensive undertakings. Pensions have come to be merely deferred wages paid as dividends in case of incapacity. This is not only the opinion of many students of the problem, but is even acknowledged by many industrial leaders. The President of a New York and Pennsylvania concern writes for instance, "Investigation on our part have developed the fact that as a rule under a pension system the rate of pay is inadequate."

The Illinois Pension Laws Commission concludes in its 1916 report that "Whether the contribution to a pension fund be taken wholly from the employee's wages or salary, or be paid wholly by the employer, or be derived in part from each, these contributions are in all three cases to be regarded as in reality a deduction from wages or salary. The existence of a pension system in connection with any position or employment is taken into account by both parties to the contract of employment, and that, broadly speaking, wages and salaries actually paid are in due course reduced below what they otherwise would be by the amount of the total contributions owing to the advantage of such a fund to the employee under present economic conditions. This consideration further emphasizes the advantage to the employer of having such a fund established."

That this is generally true and admitted by many may be seen from the following report of one of the largest plants in the State. While reporting as having only forty persons on its pension roll, receiving payments varying from fifteen dollars to forty dollars per month, the company states that "it has always been the policy of the company that any employee growing old or employed to the end of his utility in the works shall not want in his or her declining days." The letter further adds: "This fact is generally known by the employees and apparently works out quite satisfactorily and agreeably to the mutual advantage of the employee and the company."

Yes. $110,000.00 fund but each year company contributes such further sums as may be required for all pensions.	Company absolutely guarantees the solvency of the pension fund and payment promptly and in full of pensions awarded.
20	Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company. Service pensions.	Receives benefits under the provision of the relief fund.	No. Unless prejudicial to company's interests.	No. Company contributes each year such funds as may be necessary.	"Company absolutely guarantees the payment promptly and in full of pensions awarded."

No.	Name of Company and Pension System.	Number of Pensioners in Pennsylvania.	Total Number of Employees in Pennsylvania.	Total Sum Expended on Pensions Annually.	Additional Remarks.
1	American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Employees pension plan.	27. May 10, 1918.	No information.	$9,641.60 per annum. May 10, 1918.	Company also provides sick and death benefits. Have three classes of employee's service, according to age and years of service. Have also a partial disability system. Employees must retire at the age of 70. Company is custodian of the fund and pays 4 per cent. interest. Regular employment under a salary shall suspend the right of a retired employee to pension payment. Company reserves right to terminate pension for misconduct or conduct prejudicial to company.
2	Armour & Co. Pension fund.	7. July 23, 1918.	No information.	$4,806.96 per annum.	Company is custodian of the fund and is invested at company's discretion. In case of death of those more than 15 years in service the widow or children under 18 receive 1 per cent. of husband's salary at time of death multiplied by the number of years of service. For those less than 15 years, his contributions with 4 per cent. interest are returned to his beneficiaries. One-half the pension shall be given to the widow or children under 18, upon death. Contributions returned without interest to those voluntarily resigned. In case of dismissal returned with 4 per cent. interest. No interest paid to women upon marriage.
3	General Electric Co. Pension system.	None.	75,000. (Total number of employees. No information as to Pennsylvania.)	None.	"Pensions may be suspended or terminated in case of gross misconduct or of any violation of company's regulation." Company reserves right to change, alter or terminate system at any time. But this does not affect any pensions already granted. "The right and power of the company to dismiss and discharge any employee is hereby expressly reserved."
4	"Harrison Works," operated by the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. Pension plan.	58 in 1918.	5,929 in 1913. (All states.)	$26,048.16 per annum.	"Harrison Works." Controlled by the Du Pont Company. Every applicant must show that "during his term of employment he has committed no act which in the judgment of the board is inimical to the interests of the company." Board of pensions may "revoke or withhold a pension whenever it considers the pensioner undeserving either on account of violating company rules or for any other sufficient reason." Company reserves right to modify plan but when once granted, rate not to be modified.
5	International Harvester Company. Pension plan.	3.	26,225. (Total number in United States and Canada.)	$1,711.80 per annum.	Company has also sickness benefits and various welfare features. Should the aggregate pension allowance exceed the available sum, a new rate may be established. Persons occupying executive positions are exempt from maximum age limit. "At discretion of pension board, allowances may be continued to widows and orphans of a pensioner for a limited period."
6	Lebigh Valley Transit Company. Pension system. Allentown, Pa.	None.	1,046.	None.	Company also has insurance and sick benefits. Two hundred dollars is given upon death of any employee who has been in service continuously (2 years prior to his death and where compensation did not exceed $125 a month). Employees on pension shall not be entitled to sick benefits. "Nothing herein provided shall be construed as giving to any employee of the company the right to remain in service, and the right to discharge any employee, at any time when such discharge is deemed for the good of the service, is specifically reserved."
7	Morris & Company. Pension fund.	131.	No information.	$55.80 per month. (Average pension.)	In 1916 an increase of 25 per cent. in all pension rates was ordered by the directors. Company claims that its plan "has always been recognized as the most liberal and advanced pension plan in existence." Company kept on increasing and extending its pension system, thus proving its practicability. The widow of a pensioner shall be entitled to one-half of the pension but this shall cease at remarriage, and to children until 18 years of age. No one to contribute whose wages are less than $10 per week, but his relation to be the same as if a contributor in voting. In case of voluntary resignation, all payments to be returned without interest. In case of dismissal all payments to be returned with 4 per cent. interest. "An employee of 6 months to 5 years shall be entitled to 1 vote; from 5 to 10 years 2 votes; from 10 to 15 years 3 votes; 15 years or longer 4 votes. Pension may be suspended or terminated in case of gross misconduct."

No.	Name of Company and Pension System.	Number of Pensioners in Pennsylvania.	Total Number of Employees in Pennsylvania.	Total Sum Expended on Pensions Annually.	Additional Remarks.
8	National Transit Co. Plan of annuities. (Oil City, Pa.)	Total 55. (3 now not residing in Pa.)	No information.	$7,500 (about) per annum.	Company connected with Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. "Company reserves right at any time to withdraw or modify this plan, and no rights shall become vested in an individual thereunder, nor under any modification thereof."
9	The New Jersey Zinc Company (of Penna.). Pension department.	27. April 12, 1918.	No information.	No information.	Associated with this company are: The Palmer Land Co., Palmer Water Co. and Chestnut Ridge Railway Co. None of these have any one on pension. "The annuity may at the direction of the pension board be based upon the average annual pay of the 10 consecutive years of service, during which the retired employee was paid the highest rates of wages."
10	The Peoples' Natural Gas Company. Annuities and benefit plan. (Pittsburgh, Pa.)	1.	No information.	$4,742.20 per annum.	Company has also an elaborate system of sickness and death insurance. "Employees eligible to death benefits after one year of service. "For disability of more than 7 days, for all employees of one year's service, half salary for period ranging from 6 weeks to a year, depending on length of service."
11	Philadelphia Electric Company. Annuity department.	16. Sept. 20, 1918.	No information.	$50,974.48 per annum.	Any employee granted a pension on account of injury or disability shall be returned to service should such employee at any time sufficiently recover as to be able to perform satisfactory service, and shall not be entitled to annuity during this period. Any employee "with a satisfactory record of at least 15 years continuous service" may make application or be recommended for an annuity, regardless of the attained age. Should the total annuities exceed the amount allowed, a new rate may be established. Annuity may be paid to other members of the family in case of gross misconduct. Have also benefit and sickness plans.
12	Pittsburgh Coal Company. Pension fund.	104. July 9, 1918.	No information.	$8,252.40 per annum.	The sum of $75 for funeral expenses is also paid upon the death of a member. Company commenced to pay pensions in 1912. Had 145 pensioners—since that date 32 have died and 7 were suspended on account of resumption of work. Pension fund includes 9,000 shares of preferred stock which constituted the principal of the pension fund.
13	Prudential Insurance Company. Old age retirement allowances.	6.	111,894 in 1918.	$2,500 per annum.	Employees leaving service of company are not entitled to retirement allowances. May be discontinued in case of misconduct or action prejudicial to company's interests. Company reserves right to discharge any employee at any time and to alter the rate of allowance or to discontinue the plan in its entirety.
14	Standard Manufacturing Company. Pension fund.	27 for the year 1918.	443.	$6,474.00 per annum.	A rule provides for a temporary allowance from the fund. "In special meritorious cases. The pension is payable monthly at the end of each month, during the pleasure and ability of the company. But the company hopes that its prosperity will be equal to its hopes and that the payment of pensions will therefore be continued by the company."
15	Strawbridge & Clothier Pension fund association.	No information.	3,584.	$18,000 per annum.	Members forfeit all rights and benefits when leaving the employ of Strawbridge & Clothier Company. Fund to be held by company. "All persons to receive pensions shall be nominated by Strawbridge & Clothier Co., subject to the approval of the board of directors." In case of dissolution from any cause payments must be made to those already pensioned and to those who shall within 10 years, but not after 20 years, after dissolution become entitled. After that remainder goes to some charity fund.
16	Swift & Company. Pension fund.	9.	No information.	$3,025.92 per annum.	Employees entering service after August 1, 1916, who are over 40 years of age at time of entering are not eligible for pension. Have four different classes of retirement. Widow and orphans are granted part of the pension not to exceed 25 per cent. of average salary. Board of directors may increase or decrease allowance paid to dependents. (Pension may be terminated in case of misconduct). Where the State has a pension system, only the amount in excess of such shall be paid by the company.

No.	Name of Company and Pension System.	Number of Pensioners in Pennsylvania.	Total Number of Employees in Pennsylvania.	Total Sum Expended on Pensions Annually.	Additional Remarks.
17	United States Steel and Carnegie Pension fund.	1,500 (Approximately) Jan. 1, 1918.	1,990.	No Information.	Company has also a relief fund. Employees lose all credit for previous service if absent longer than six months on account of leave of absence or suspension. Pension may be terminated in case of misconduct. Company has about 20 subsidiaries. Company reserves right to discharge employees "to the same extent as if their pension fund had never been created. Pension plan is a purely voluntary provision for the benefit of employees after long and faithful service and constitutes no contract and confers no legal rights upon any employee."
18	Wells Fargo & Co. Pension system.	1.	No information.	$360 per annum.	Company has also benefit system for sickness, accident, death, and funeral benefit. Have four age classifications and three methods of computing annuities. Company has also set age of eligibility to service at 35 years. May withhold allowance in case of misconduct. President must approve all grants of pensions.
19	Westinghouse Brake Company. Air Pension system.	127.	3,707.	$40,805.00 per annum.	Pensions are given only to members of relief fund. No employee is required to become a member of the relief fund "but preference in laying off and taking on employees will usually be given to such members or persons offering to become such." Company reserves right to discontinue pension in case of misconduct. The "character and quality of service" is considered in granting pensions. Pension may be increased in "specially meritorious cases" not to exceed one-fourth of service pension. Pension also continued to be paid to dependents." No service pension shall be allowed or paid to any person who shall have enforced or sought to enforce against the company any claim for personal injury, received within 5 years prior to date of retirement."
20	Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company. Service pensions.	33	30,391. Of these 16,106 are members of relief department.	$5,940.00 per annum.	Retirement is not compulsory and employers may continue to work with the approval of head of department. Suspension or dismissal are deemed a break in the service. President of company may increase pension 25 per cent. In special meritorious service. The rewards of compensation and relief funds are included in the total pension. Pension is given (a part of it) to dependents in case of death. Company reserves the right to terminate pension, etc. "No pension shall be allowed to any person who has enforced or sought to enforce against the company any claim for personal injury, other than under the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act, or the regulations of the relief retirees within 5 years prior to the date of retirement." All employees who leave the service of the company, whether voluntarily or in consequence of dismissal or discharge forfeit entirely their eligibility for pensions."

An analysis of these systems as shown in the preceding table brings many interesting facts to the foreground. (1) It is evident that these industrial systems are still in their experimental stage. This is brought out clearly by the fact that with only two exceptions they have all been established within the last seven or eight years. (2) They give no representation in the management to the employees, except when the employees make contributions (and even then not in all cases), and they are either under the direct control of the board of directors or by a board appointed by them. (3) The plans in use in Pennsylvania for pensioning wage-earners nearly always provide out and out service pensions with provisions made for the voluntary or compulsory retirement at a certain age. The fact that only four corporations have contributory systems emphasizes the difficulties confronted in such a system. These obstacles are: (a) Wage workers resent compulsory savings and are opposed to entrusting these to their employers', as they are in each case. (b) The instability of wage-earners employment necessarily makes any system of contributions complicated. Wage workers, unlike salaried employees, do not anticipate continuing long in the service nor do many of them expect to be promoted.

With the exceptions of Strawbridge & Clothier, Armour, and Morris and companies, which have contributory systems, membership is, of course, not compulsory and applies to all employees, with the exception of a few cases where a certain age or amount of wages is required for eligibility to membership. In one or two cases membership in the Relief Fund of the Company is required. At least one company, while stating that membership to the Relief Fund is not compulsory, adds that "preference in laying off and taking on will usually be given to such members or persons offering to become such." However, most of the systems are not contributory and are generally "granted as a voluntary reward for faithful and efficient service and as an incentive to further service," to quote the language of a few concerns.

With reference to the age of retirement it appears that while seventy years of age is everywhere set as the maximum period of service, a number of concerns have more liberal provisions. Practically all provide that employees may retire at sixty-five at their own request or at the discretion of the company. A number of concerns even provide for retirement at sixty, and some at fifty-five. That female employees cannot be continued the same length of time in the service as male employees is apparent from the provisions made by the several companies which employ female labor, for an earlier retirement. While seventy years of age is set as the general compulsory retirement age for men employees, sixty years, with one exception, is the highest age set for women workers.

Continuous service is generally required in considering the period of employment, and leave of absence, suspension, or lay off for a period longer than six months, in the majority of cases, constitutes a break in this service and employees lose all credit for previous employment.

Practically all established systems base the amount of the annual pension upon a certain percentage of the employee's wages. Generally, it is computed by taking one per cent. of the monthly wages for the last ten years and multiplying by the number of years of service. Four concerns, however, have a two per cent. basis while Morris & Company has as high as a two and a half per cent. basis. Others have a straight sum of about $15 to $20 per month.

With the exception of Armour & Company—whose system is only for salaried employees—and carries a restriction of five thousand dollars per annum maximum, the general limit of a pension is one hundred dollars per month, and in one case at least only fifteen dollars per month. The minimum amount generally allowed varies from $8.40 per month in one case to $30 in another. The average being about $20 per month.

The question of providing for the stability of the fund is a very serious one. It is obvious that when no contributions are made by the employees, that the company should provide for all deficiencies. In most instances the corporations guarantee the payments to all those already on the payroll or to those who may soon become entitled to it. In a few cases as that of the United States Steel and Carnegie Fund, where a $12,000,000 fund is established, payments of pensions are, of course, secured. A number of concerns, however, state that the company "reserves the right at any time to withdraw or modify this grant." While a few concerns not engaged in war industries may not feel able to continue pensions "particularly in war times," as is expressed by one well known concern which was engaged in the production of non-war essentials, with the great majority of large Pennsylvania concerns there can be no doubt of the company's ability to pay its pension. Indeed as one large concern in the Eastern part of the State points out "We feel the need of something better than this but any adequate system would impose a burden which, while it could be easily carried as times are now, would be crushing in times such as we had before the war." This concern further adds that "We have for many years paid pensions to a few of our employees who had served long periods with our concern. We have no regular system for this, however, and during the business depression prior to the war, which hit us severely, we had to suspend payment of these in some cases."

That this situation is fraught with the greatest danger is obvious. To quote Mr. L. W. Squire "The question naturally comes to the mind of the thinking working man: What is the measure of the disappointment of the scores, perhaps hundreds, of employees of the corporation who were looking forward to pensions for the support of old age and are now helpless and unprovided for? Such a condition is analogous to that of the crew of a vessel who, after a long hard voyage over dangerous seas with food exhausted, nerves racked and strength almost gone, have only one hope left,—that of speedily making an hospitable harbor; but alas, find themselves shipwrecked upon a barren island." Only one concern purchases annuities from a reliable insurance company, and those that have established funds generally provide for a reduction in the annuity basis if the annual expenditures exceed the sum allowed for that year.

It is evident from our analysis that most concerns take care of those who become incapacitated regardless of age. Definite proof of incapacity by the company's physician is generally specified. In a number of cases these are dealt with individually by the boards; a few have special allowances while others have no provisions at all. Although a shorter period of continued service is frequently required in this case, it is, nevertheless, specified. The period varies from ten years in two establishments to twenty-five years in another. The sum allowed for this irregular pension is generally determined in the same way as the regular one i. e. by computing a percentage of the monthly wages multiplied by the number of years of service. Special allowances, however, are provided in a few instances and in one case it is "determined after consideration of all circumstances and length of service."

In those concerns where systems of relief funds are also to be found, cases of total disability are, of course, taken care of. Where no such systems exist and when an employee has not served the required time—unless his case may come under The State Workmen's Compensation Act—there is evidently no relief.

The granting of a pension ordinarily does not debar the pensioner from engaging in any other business. But in a few cases the amount of annuity varies inversely with the income from other sources. That it would, however, be practically impossible for any employee to follow the line of work he could do best and to which he was accustomed, is obvious from the provision made by practically all concerns that he cannot engage in any other business which may be prejudicial to the company's interests. Nor may he be further engaged by the same company. This provision would seem also to allay the fear of some people of the possible competition of the pensioners. Although isolated instances are related of retired old men who accept jobs for less money, because added to their pension their wants are more readily satisfied, it is hardly a problem with the industrial pensioners who ordinarily spend all their life-power before retiring.* At any rate the fact of receiving a pension would hardly make one a more dangerous competitor in the labor market than if one were left starving at the age of sixty or seventy and was still able to perform some useful labor.

*The following comment by the manager of the U. S. Steel and Carnegie Pension Fund confirms this. In his report for the year 1917 he states: "of the number relieved from duty in 1917 because of physical incapacity, 15 per cent. died in 1917, indicating that they had given their full measure of loyalty to the service."

An indication of the length of time usually in service before one is retired on a pension may be seen from the following table. It includes all the retired employes of the U. S. Steel Corporation and subsidiaries, since its establishment in 1911 to 1918 inclusive.

TABLE NO. 67.

Years of Service With the U. S. Steel Co. by the 3,341 Pensioned Employees.

No. of Years	Number	Per Cent.
6 to 10	48	1.43
10 to 15	348	10.41
15 to 20	607	18.18
20 to 25	1,020	30.53
25 to 30	604	18.17
30 to 35	398	11.84
35 to 40	194	5.80
40 to 50	115	3.44
50 & over	7	.20
	3,341	100.00

It will be observed that only 1.43 per cent. were employed less than 10 years before retirement; 28.59 per cent. were in the service between ten to 20 years, while 48.7 per cent. were employed from 20 to 30 years, and 21.28 per cent. served more than 30 years before they were retired on a pension.

It may also be of interest to add that of the former employes receiving pensions from the U. S. Steel and Carnegie Pension Fund, more than 17 per cent. come from the department directing the management and superintendence of the various concerns. Only about 21 per cent. of the pensioners are listed as common or unskilled laborers. The rest represent the skilled and semi-skilled groups.

The insignificant total number of employees on pensions in this greatest industrial State and the small sum expended by the concerns which employed them, stand out very noticeably in table No. 66. The number of former employees receiving pensions when compared with the total number employed at a particular time is negligible. Of the concerns from whom information was obtained, with regard to the amounts spent on pensions and on their total payrolls, the former is found to exceed one per cent. of the latter in only two instances. With the majority of concerns, the expenditures on pensions amount to less than one-half of one per cent. of their annual payroll.

Many of the concerns having regularly established pension systems state that they are governed in granting pensions by the "character and quality of service," and provide for increases in "especially meritorious cases." A large number of these concerns have also quite elaborate relief, sickness and benefit insurance schemes. All concerns are explicit against any incurrence of vested rights or privileges granted to employees by the pension. The companies always reserve the right to discharge an employee or terminate a pension for violation of any of the company laws or gross misconduct and so forth.

It may be interesting to observe the great variety of industries which have established regular pension schemes, as is apparent from table No. 66. There are pension schemes established not only by Iron & Steel, and similar concerns, but there can be found included also Packing Companies, and at least one department store, and one Insurance Company.

Although the industries enumerated in the above table are the only ones in the State having established definite systems of pensioning their old employees, a great many more concerns report that while they have no regular provisions, individual measures have been adopted to take care of superannuated and faithful workmen. These companies deal with each case on its own merits and while not having any basic principles to depend on, generally follow certain well marked out lines. Thus one corporation reports: "In the past whenever any one has been in continuous service for twenty-five or more years and has arrived at the age of seventy he is pensioned on half pay. This does not apply in every case, as there are some less important cases which will receive perhaps one-third pay." Another one states: "Whenever any one of our employees is incapacitated we feel it is an obligation of ours to take care of him or her, whether they have been in our employ five years or fifty years. We, therefore, have no definite plan, but take care of each case individually. At the present time we have fifty-four who are pensioned and the amounts paid to them vary from $5 to $10 per week. We consider that our stock plan is more of a pension system than anything else, even though it is not recognized as such and the employees participate even before they become incapacitated. Nearly all of our employees who have been with the Company for ten years or more have been allotted stock of the Company which costs them absolutely nothing, the stock being paid for by dividends. When the stock is fully paid the dividends are paid to the beneficiary but the stock is held in trust for the individual for a period of fifteen years. If the employee severs his connection with the Company for any reason, aside from illness or being incapacitated he will receive the par value, and the stock reverts back to the Trustees. If the employee dies or if incapacitated the stock is then transferred to him or his heirs and becomes their personal property. We feel that this is a provision against old age that is better than any pension plan we can adopt."

The General Cigar Co. reports: "We have in effect a pension system payable generally after the service of years as follows: using ten per cent. of the last week's salary as a basis, one per cent. is added for each year's service. The time of retirement rests upon the judgment of the Superintendent in direct charge and subject to the approval of the officers of the Company."

As very little variation can be found in these plans, it is interesting to find one concern reporting that: "This Company assumes all expenses in connection with group insurance which is carried on the life of every employee who has been with us for a period exceeding one year or more." In its letter to the employees which is attached to every policy, this Company states: "In appreciation of past service and to indicate our interest in you and those dependent upon your efforts, we ask that you accept with our best wishes and free of expense, attached Life Insurance Policy issued by the Etna Life Insurance Company of Hartford, Connecticut, under arrangements whereby the dependents of our employees are protected under a special plan as follows:

"To those employed one continuous full year and less than two years, the amount of insurance policy $300.00. Two continuous full years or longer service $500.00. For continuous service thereafter an increase of $100.00 annually until the maximum amount of $1,000.00 has been reached."

"In case of death of the employee his (or her) dependents will be paid in cash the sum noted above, in accordance with the length of continuous service the employee has given us."

"It is important to say that this insurance does not in any way take the place of any payments to be made to you for accidents under Workmen's Compensation Laws."

"If it is your desire to specially name any beneficiary your wishes in this respect may be indicated by filling out a card which will be furnished for this purpose."

That the granting of a pension is still looked upon by some as a paternal offer to the worthy, although careless, children is evident from the following interesting letter which states that: "Our usual method of procedure is first to give an old and faithful employee very light day work without a reduction in his wages; this keeps him occupied, he retains his self respect; besides he is rendering some service and remains among his friends. When he becomes too old or infirm to perform any kind of work, we supply whatever money is necessary to keep him in comfortable circumstances. We have never ignored any old faithful employee." At the present the company has six on pension roll, payments varying from $100 per month to one person to $25 to another.

The same president of the company then continues to say that: "The Company does not bind itself to continue these pensions; in other words there is no contract with the employee but as stated above the Company has never abandoned an old faithful employee and has no intention of doing so in the future. We have to be extremely careful not to place a premium on lack of thrift. The thrifty men who are as a rule the best workmen do not require pensions; a number of our old employees have left us and become shop keepers. We realize fully that under the present arrangement a man who learns to take care of himself and provides for his old age receives no pension; on the other hand we feel obliged to assist those who are not unfortunate but are shiftless as regards their personal affairs."

One of the largest plants in the State reports that: "We consider each case individually, giving due weight to such factors as length of service, loyalty of service, character of work employe was engaged in, number of dependents, present mode of living, age and general physical conditions at the time of application. The Company has on its pension roll at present about forty persons, payments varying from $15 to $40 per month with one or two exceptions where higher rates are paid." The Company has also a beneficial association which embodies no pension feature.

"At the Johnstown plant of the Cambria Steel Company," reads another report, "the Cambria Benefit Association, an organization composed of our employes and operated and governed by its own directors, embodies a pension fund into which 35 cents per month is paid by the members. Cambria Steel Company contributes to the same fund at the rate of 10 cents per month per member equal to about $20,000 per annum. The Company also contributes the cost of operation; i. e. salaries, expenses, office supplies, etc., of the C. M. B. A. officers and clerks. This amounts to about $14,000 so that the aggregate contribution by the Company is about $34,000 per annum. Last year's report of the 1917 pension fund, shows the following:

Total number on pension list Dec. 31, 1917	145
Total amount paid in pensions for year	$33,168
Average pension paid per month from $20 to $30."

Many reasons are given by the various concerns in explaining the absence of definite provisions for old age pensions. From the replies made, it is apparent that a great majority of large concerns in the State are not only aware of the value of such a system but have also given a great deal of thought to the subject. Numerous concerns report of being not only "heartily in favor of establishing such a system" or "of the good work of the Commission" but many corporations have actually had committees studying the subject for months and even for years in a few instances. Where no regular systems have been established, it is generally because it is believed by these corporations that it is more advantageous to them to deal with the individual as "such arrangement is a much better plan than any legal system because it gives the opportunity to reward real merit," to quote the president of one concern in Philadelphia. This Company further assures us that "we always confer such benefits where we are assured that they are deserved by long services and fidelity," or as is stated in another letter "it is not established," because, "the number of our employes and the closeness with which the officers of our concern come in contact with them does not make a system advisable in our opinion at the present time."

This method of dealing with the individual employe, used by so many of the large corporations which undoubtedly could afford the establishment of a regular scheme is seriously objected to even by many advanced thinkers among the employers. The principal objection is best stated by L. W. Squire when he warns us of "the suspicion among employes that favoritism and partiality may determine the fact and amount of pension, which suspicion seriously affects the contentment, loyalty and industry of workmen growing old in the corporation's service."

However, besides the obvious difficulties which would be confronted by smaller concerns in establishing a formal pension system, there are many other reasons given which can be reduced in summing up to the following: (1) That the business has not been "running long enough to warrant adopting a plan of this kind." (2) That the working force is not stable enough and never stay long enough. This is particularly true of industries where many young women are employed who according to the reports, "either have a natural tendency to get married" or as stated by another concern of a similar industry that "being located in the heart of the coal region they marry when they reach maturity." This instability and greater labor turnover has apparently been increased by the war. Especially is this the case with the industries located near munition plants or ship building yards which cannot compete with the new establishments. One concern for instance reports that "As a matter of fact we are unable to keep them long enough that they would ever be entitled to a pension, owing to our proximity to Hog Island and other munition plants in this vicinity."

Another company reports, "At the present time our force is greatly depleted, by reason of our help leaving for employment in the ship-yards, draft, and so forth." But it adds: "It has been our practice to pay our employes for what they lose in sickness and otherwise." The following report may also be very interesting; it states: "With the wages we are now paying we think our employes well able to provide for themselves. Looks as though the bosses would have to be provided with old age pensions."

That only the concerns employing wage-earners on a large scale can afford to establish well defined systems of retirement, is clear from our analysis of the situation. A number of smaller concerns state that all the systems proposed were "too complicated to be practical for their purposes," "that it required an expenditure on the part of the company which it could not meet." Many different objections are given with regard to the establishment of pension systems. Some of the most interesting ones are the following: A large shoe manufacturing concern states: "From a casual observation we believe it is very hard to get a small concern to establish such a system. It would certainly require the co-operation from employes as well as assistance in some form from the State. It might be necessary for the State to make this compulsory that the employe co-operate with the employer to establish such a system. It occurs to us that this ought to be a State affair and not left to small corporations to take up and look after. Small corporations do not have the officers and equipment to devise and handle such a system as far as our information goes."

And not only is a state pension system advocated, but some go even further and advocate a national system. The president of a large glass company in the western part of the State says: "We believe in the pension system, but we think it should be a national movement, for the reason that any pension we would pay would necessarily come out of earnings. If the State undertakes to tax or otherwise enforce pension laws, it might work a hardship on manufacturers within the State, as the competition they would meet would probably be from factories located in other States where no such tax or expense was involved. If all States had the pension system, it would put all factories and mills on an equality."

On the other hand, one concern states that "The persons to whom we give pensions and the amounts given to them have always been considered a private matter between ourselves and our former employes and we therefore do not care to divulge this information."

About twenty-five of the large concerns in the State report that although they have no regular pension provisions they always take care of each case. The following statements illustrate the typical ways and means employed, and the general consideration given in providing for worn out, faithful employes.

One corporation states that it "has made it a practice for many years to provide for men who are retired by reason of old age or disability who have been many years in the service of the company, provided, they or their families are in need of financial assistance."

A number of companies state either that "we do consider individual cases when the circumstances are exceptional and we have a dozen or two such people on our pay roll," or again "we have in some instances pensioned superannuated employes. None on pay roll at the present in Pennsylvania"; and further "we are not a particularly large company. In some cases they are retired on full pay, others half pay, and in other cases we give nothing at all, depending on the financial conditions of the party concerned."

Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. reports that "Each case is taken up and decided upon its merits, depending upon the number of years employed and the fidelity and usefulness of the employe; some being retained upon the pay roll during their natural life and others being paid a certain per cent. of their earnings for life."

Similarly, a number of others report: "Each case stands for itself and pension is based on the length of service and fidelity of employe"; or that "We treat each case individually and consider this to be the best method." On the other hand, numerous concerns state that "While we have been endeavoring to take care of our old employees we heartily approve of the general idea of this character and would be pleased to hear if any general plan develops under governmental regulations." And still many more concerns write that they would be very glad to "have you post us to what is being done," "to co-operate in working out a plan which would be practical" or "to receive any literature and report your Commission is issuing."

One concern is guided in the granting of pensions to its employees by (1) number of years of service (2) number of years of continuous service (3) actual need of employee and (4) amount earned during previous ten years of employ. Another explains: "Where employee has been with us for many years, we handle the matter according to the merits of each individual case. Where they were unable to do work, a monthly remittance was made them sufficient to their needs, and at their death, in each instance, a substantial check was given ample to cover funeral expenses and incidental for a period thereafter." And further, another one reports that "The pensioning or retirement is based entirely upon a man's faithfulness in the service of the company. Have at the present time nine men, some dating as far back as January 19th, 1918, who receive half pay."

That each system must be adapted to the particular character of the concern may be evident from this letter which states: "We have been for some time working on a system which would fit into our case better than any system used by others."

About fifteen large concerns report that although they have neither a regular pension system nor definitely marked out principles by which they take care of their old employees, they still make an effort to keep their superannuated workers till the end of their days by providing easier work for them. Thus one company finding that an "employee cannot be utilized in one position," tries to find something that he could do, "so as to help him along" but always, only "when a man has been faithful and with the company for considerable length of time." The work given to such men is stated by another one to be such "as watchman, gateman, etc."

One company reports that it is their habit "to place our men in so called pension jobs rather than relieve them from all activity" and it adds, "There are a few such men at this plant who seem to be contented and happier when occupied."

The following are typical methods applied. One concern "arranges for a transfer to a lighter occupation or retirement with a satisfactory bonus basis, optional to the employee." Another one "made it a rule for all those aged in the service to make their duties such as would be easy for them and in nearly all cases continue them at the same wages they received previously, till death."

The "oldest plant in western Pennsylvania," reports that on account of its location, "in a small town, most of our employees have been with us for a considerable period of time, the majority of them, however, leaving us at different times to take employment elsewhere and afterwards returning to us." This company takes care "of old employees incapacitated for regular work by creating jobs for them around the plant, paying them $40 per month whether they work or not, unless absence is caused by drunkenness, or voluntary absence. Most of these men are away about thirty per cent. of the time under pay. Where they cannot do even this they are retired at $15 per month."

It is evident from our preceding summary that for the great majority of large concerns in Pennsylvania, the problem of what to do with worn out wage earners, has been, and still is a real one. Numerous concerns have committees working on this subject at the present time. In a number of establishments where a regular system was deemed impracticable or could not be afforded, different measures such as a transfer to lighter and easier work or some definite plan for the care of superannuated employees were resorted to.

It is also obvious, however, that in spite of the admitted significance of the problem by many of the far-sighted corporations, it can hardly be expected that the industries themselves will solve it. Although generally considered of paramount industrial importance, we still find somewhat more than seventy large concerns in the State, to whom our letters were addressed, replying that not only have they no regular system of relief for their old workers but that they have never considered such plans; and, judging from the meagerness of their replies, are apparently not interested in the problem of assisting and providing for their faithful but old employees.

It may not be amiss in this connection, to give an idea of some of the other forms of relief and benefit associations which may or may not include old age provisions, established by many large industrial concerns in the State. The following few may be selected as typical: A well known cigar company reports of this plan: "We encourage the purchasing of stock in this Company, as a means of providing for old age. This stock, while valued at considerable above par, is offered at par and payments are arranged for, according to the earning capacity of the employee. All employees who have been on our pay-roll more than two years are paid their full salary during any period of incapacity due to illness. In the event of permanent incapacity a special arrangement is made. Two cases of this kind were adjusted and in each case an arrangement of half salary was made. All married men are insured at Company's expense, for one, two or three thousand dollars based on length of service." Another concern reports: "In 1912 we distributed some $50,000 among certain mill employees of the Company for faithful and long continued service, who had been with us fifteen years and upward. The method used was based on length of service and the amounts varied from $2,000 to $500 each. While this did not establish a precedent, it is just possible that at some future time a similar distribution may be made."

A number of concerns have either "an aid association whereby the men contribute monthly a certain sum and their estate receives an amount should they be injured or die"; or as is reported by one, "There are two institutions here which operate for the benefit of injured employees and those who die during service. These are organizations with voluntary membership and are conducted by the employees themselves with our assistance." And again another states, "We have three employees who served us faithfully for many years. We pay two of these at the rate of $1 per working day and $1.50 to one. We have given the matter a little thought but reached no definite conclusion, decided these simply as a means of expressing our appreciation of the service the men had rendered to us."

(2) RAILROAD PENSION SYSTEMS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The railroads were the first in this country to establish retirement systems for their employees. This is, doubtless, explained by the fact that railroad employees are very often required to be under the most prolonged tension of both mind and body. Men in modern transportation systems are subject to greater hazards and wear out more rapidly than in many other branches of industry. With the rapid and unprecedented development of the American railroads, the problem of what to do with the superannuated worker loomed up earlier in this industry than in any other. Railroads in this country have therefore begun to establish private retirement systems at the same time when European governments have been engaged in instituting systems of public pensions and insurance.

RAILROAD PENSION SYSTEMS IN PENNSYLVANIA.—Continued.

No.	Name of Railroad.	Number of Pensioners in Pennsylvania.	Total Expended on These.	Additional Remarks.
1	Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.	109	$2,637.55 Total per month.	Company has also relief department.
2	Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railroad Company.	17 April, 1918.	Average pension $31.10 per month.	Company reserves right to terminate pensions. "Pension allowance to be paid monthly until death of the beneficiary, provided that company may withhold its stipends in all cases for gross misconduct." No person over 35 years of age who is inexperienced in railway work and no experienced person over 45 years of age shall be taken into the service.
3	The Delaware & Hudson Railroad Company.	34 April 4, 1918.	$1,061.95 per month.	No person over 40 years of age is taken into the service. "Absence from work on leave of absence, temporary disablement, suspension, or temporary lay-off is not to be considered a break in the continuity of service." "Employees who are dismissed from, or voluntarily leave the service of the Company for any cause relinquish all claims to consideration or pension allowance. The eligibility of retiring employees on pension allowance shall be determined by the regulations of that branch of the service in which they were last.
4	Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company.	186.	$154,009.41 (total sum spent on pensions).	"Employees forfeit claims to pensions when leaving service under strike order." Only those giving their entire time to company may be pensioned. Leave of absence, suspension, dismissal followed by reinstatement within one year is not to be considered a break in the continuity of service. Company may withhold its stipends in all cases of gross misconduct. "No rights given to claim pensions."
5	New* York Central Railroad Company.	60 in class A. 54 in class B. March, 1918.	$4,519.04 per month.	Company divides pensioners into two classes; Class A, those who retired because of the age limit, 70 years, or Class B, because of disability at any age after 20 years of service. "Company reserves right to terminate pension for gross misconduct."
6	New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company (Nickel Plate.)	4	$56.85 per month.	Board of directors reserve the right to establish a new and lower basis of pension allowance if the basis adopted shall create demands in excess of the sums fixed by the board of directors. Company reserves right to terminate pensions for gross misconduct.
7	Pennsylvania Railroad Company.	184 For lines west of Pittsburgh. Total for lines east and associated companies, 3,804, Dec., 1917.	Average for west of Pittsburgh, $32.77 per month. Total expended on lines east in 1917, $1,473,605.06.	This company includes several other railroads. Has also a relief fund. "When basis of pension allowance shall create demands in excess of the sum fixed, a new basis ratably reducing the pension allowance may be established."
8	Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company.	380 December 31, 1917.	$156,089.77 per year.	"Leave of absence, suspension or dismissal followed by reinstatement within one year or temporary lay-off is not to be considered a break in continuity of service." No allowance to be paid to any person during period in which he may be receiving accident or sickness benefits. Company has also relief and accident benefits. Company reserves right to terminate pension for gross misconduct. "Company may discharge any employee without liability to pension." "No person shall be taken into the service who is over 35 years of age," with certain exceptions.
9	Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad Company.	42	$12,000 per year.	May reduce basis, if the basis adopted creates demands in excess of the appropriated amount. Leave of absence, suspension, temporary lay-off are not considered a break in the continuity of service. Company reserves right and privilege to discharge from service at any time, any employee without liability for pension.
10	Western Maryland Railroad Company.	4	$170.74 per month.	Company has also elaborate relief department. Employees may be pensioned irrespective of age, if in continuous service for 45 years. Every member of voluntary relief department entitled to a superannuation allowance from relief department, in addition to pension allowance from railroad company. Members leaving service and not reinstated within 12 months on reaching the age of 68 years and continuing in the service for 45 years but not in good standing in relief department relinquish all claims to benefits of superannuation allowance. "No member shall be entitled to wages from the company and to a superannuation allowance at the same time or to benefits from relief department and to superannuation allowance at the same time. Executive committee "has right to reduce or cancel superannuation allowances in case of gross misconduct." Same is true of company with its pension. Pension allowance is given by company and is an addition to relief feature allowance.

The number of companies and the extent of pensions established by railroads in Pennsylvania are found in table 68. This table as ascertained from more than one hundred letters of inquiry—similar to the ones sent to the large industrial concerns—addressed to all railroads operating wholly or partly within the boundaries of this Commonwealth. Of these, 85 per cent. responded.

It will be observed from table No. 68 that the main development in railroad pensions did not begin until the early days of the present century. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has, according to all the evidence, the distinction of introducing the industrial private pension system in this country. It established its pension fund in 1889—the same year when the government pension scheme was adopted in Germany. More than a decade passed before the next railroad—The Pennsylvania—in this State, saw the necessity of following the example. The great majority of the railroads operating wholly or partly in this State have established a regular system of pensioning, only within the last ten years.

What is true of the industrial concerns is evidently true of all the railroads, namely; the administration of these funds is either under the direct control of the board of directors of the various companies, or by a board appointed by them, or by the president of the railroad. The only exception to this is the Baltimore and Ohio Fund—which requires four years membership in the Relief Fund—and which is controlled by the same executive committee as the latter department. Such absolute control is readily explained by the fact that in no case do employees make any contributions to these funds, with the exception, of course, of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The payments are entirely gratuitous, on the part of the company, for faithful services rendered, and the funds are therefore controlled by them.

As is the case with the industrial concerns, a compulsory and voluntary age of retirement is provided also in the railroad systems. With but two exceptions the former is seventy years. The period of service required before an employee can retire on a pension is varied. It ranges from ten years with a number of railroads, to thirty years required by the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad. Where the shorter period of service is specified it is generally provided that no person is eligible to a pension who enters the service after 40 or 45 years of age. In a few cases the age of eligibility to service is as low as 35 years of age. The larger period of service before a pension can actually be secured is obviously the prevailing one.

It may be interesting to note here, the differences in the term of service required by the industrial concerns and the various railroads in the State. Twenty-five years of service is the maximum set by the different industrial establishments. Many require twenty or fifteen years of service and at least two companies require only ten years of service. This is to be contrasted with twenty-five and thirty years of service generally specified or implied by the railroads. The explanation of this may lie not only in the fact that the labor turnover is much greater with the former, but also because railroad lines are more anxious and adapted to retain in the service, as long as possible, their experienced and well trained employees.

With the exception of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, practically all the railroads have an identical method of computing the annuities awarded. Most of the railroads provide for 1 per cent. of the average monthly wages earned for the ten years next preceding retirement, multiplied by the number of years of service. Only the Buffalo Rochester and Pittsburgh Railroad Company awards a regular pension equal to 2 per cent. of the average monthly wages computed in the same way. With the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, where membership in the Relief Fund is required, it is provided that "each pensioner shall receive a daily allowance, excluding Sundays, equal to one-half the benefits provided to be paid for sickness, under the Regulations of the Relief Feature, to a member of the class to which the pensioner would, while in the service, have been assigned under said Regulations, had he been required to become a full member of said Feature. In the case of a pensioner who has been continuously a member of the Relief Feature of the Baltimore and Ohio Employees' Relief Association fifteen years, this allowance will be increased by the addition of five per cent. thereof; and a like addition will be made for each additional term of five consecutive years of such membership."

The following table shows in brief the amount of allowance to pensioners:

	Ten years' membership and under, one-half sick rate.	Fifteen years' membership, 5 per cent. additional.	Twenty years' membership, 10 per cent. additional.
Those contributing under relief feature to class A	$0.25	$0.26 1/4	$0.27 1/2
Those contributing under relief feature to class B50	.52 1/2	.55
Those contributing under relief feature to class C75	.78 3/4	.82 1/2
Those contributing under relief feature to class D	1.00	1.05	1.10
Those contributing under relief feature to class E	1.25	1.31 1/4	1.37 1/4

Although a great number of establishments do not provide for either maximum or minimum pensions, two hundred and fifty dollars per month seems to be the limit set for the former while five dollars per month is that set for the latter.

With the majority of railroad pension establishments, the difference between the age when one is compelled to retire and the period when one may retire voluntarily on account of physical incapacity, is only a question of the last five years. Seventy being the age of compulsory retirement, it is usually provided that an employee may retire on account of physical incapacity between the ages of 65 and 69. The Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh, and the Delaware and Lackawanna Railroads provide for the latter retirement from 60 on. A few companies, however, provide no age or service, and leave it to the discretion of the Board of Directors to decide upon the merits of the individual case. Only the Western Maryland Railroad Company requires no definite period of service in retiring an employee on account of unfitness for duty. With most of the concerns, a period of twenty to thirty years of service is required before an employee is entitled to a Company annuity. Excepting one establishment, the method of computing the annuity on account of physical incapacity follows the same manner as the regular one, i. e. by multiplying the percentage of the monthly wages by the number of years of service.

Only three of four railroads make provisions, by means of pensions, for employees who have been injured and have become totally disabled while performing their duties. These few concerns state that an employee, in case of injury or total disability, may be pensioned regardless of his age or length of service. The majority of companies, however, make no provisions for such employees before they have completed the required period of service.

The railroad companies as well as the industrial concerns, generally state that the granting of a pension does not debar an employee from engaging in any other business but further specify that he cannot re-enter the service of the company.

The pension funds of the great majority of railroads are fixed at a certain amount. It is also provided by practically all of these that "when basis of pension allowance shall create demands in excess of the sums fixed, a new basis, ratably reducing the pension allowances, may be established."

Some of the additional characteristics generally typical of these pension systems may be summarized as follows: In computing the length of service it is usually specified that "leave of absence, suspension or dismissal followed by re-instatement within one year or temporary lay-off is not to be considered a break in the continuity of service." Practically all companies "reserve the right to terminate pensions for gross misconduct" and "reserve right and privilege to discharge from service at any time any employee without liability to pension." Some state that "employees who are dismissed from or voluntarily leave the service of the company for any cause whatsoever relinquish all claims to consideration or pension allowances." One states that "employees forfeit claims to pensions when leaving service under strike orders."

The number of former employees on the pension rolls of the different railroads in Pennsylvania is given in table No. 68. These were the figures prevailing during the Spring of 1918. The number of pensioners on the rolls of the Pennsylvania Railroad East of Pittsburgh cannot be definitely obtained. However, associated in the administration of the Pension Feature, besides the Pennsylvania Railroad's Eastern Lines are: the West Jersey and Sea Shore Railroad Company; Philadelphia and Camden Ferry Company and the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Companies. These employees are operating within the States of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. At the end of December 1917, the total number of employees on the pension roll in all these States numbered 3,804. Assuming that most of these pensioners are residing in the State of Pennsylvania, it is obvious that the total number of aged employees provided with railroad service pensions in this State hardly exceeds 4,000 men.*

In addition to the railroads listed in the preceding table, the following companies are subsidiaries of the U. S. Steel Corporation. The employees here participate in the benefits provided by the U. S. Steel and Carnegie Pension Fund. These companies are the Bessemer and Lake Erie Railroad Company, Etna and Montrose Railroad Company, Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley Railroad Company, Monongahela Southern Railroad Company, Donora Southern Railroad Company, and Pencoed and Philadelphia Railroad Company.

The Waynesboro and Washington Railroad Company is governed by the rules and regulations of the Pennsylvania Lines West of Pittsburgh in its pension matters. The Chestnut Ridge Railroad Company operates under the system of the New Jersey Zinc Company, an analysis of which appears in the industrial table.

Fifty-five of the answers received from the roads having charters in Pennsylvania, state that they have no provisions for pensioning their employees whatsoever. This, however, is the case only with the very small or young railroads. To quote one general manager who is "personally very much in sympathy" with the plan, "this is a small railroad and thus far without sufficient earnings to admit of this plan." Another general superintendent writes, that "the idea is an excellent one and provides an outlet for superannuated employees that cause a great deal of worry to those in charge of organizations where men settle down more than they do with us." Reassuring us of his hearty co-operation in the matter he states the reasons for not adopting any definite system of pensioning. "Railroad organizations like ours have a heavy turnover of employees annually; as railway switchmen are quite migratory in character and disposition and seldom stay long with strictly switching roads." Another letter states frankly: "Our net earnings for the year 1917, after payment of all expenses amounted to the small sum of fifty dollars."

On the other hand, a number of even smaller railroads, although not having regular established systems of pensioning, report of individual schemes adopted or generally followed in taking care of their aged workers. Thus one railroad in the eastern part of the State while reporting that "the question of pensioning an employee is simply a matter for the consideration and decision of the officers of the company," further advises that "at the present time this company has forty-seven pensioned employees in the State of Pennsylvania who receive an aggregate of $884.29 per month.

Another railroad with only one pensioner in Pennsylvania reports that "our pension system is discretionary and each case must be authorized by the board of directors." The letter further informs us that "generally speaking we grant pensions to employees who have reached the age of 70 years, and who have been in our service for 25 years. The usual basis for pension is determined by allowing the employee 1 per cent. per year for each year of service on his average annual wages for the last ten years."

The Central Railroad of New Jersey, which reports of 45 pensioners in Pennsylvania, states that in their system "any employee who has been in the service thirty continuous years and has reached the age of seventy shall be pensioned. Employees between 65 and 69 years of age, inclusive, who have been continuously for thirty or more years in service and who have become incapacitated may be retired and pensioned. And any faithful employee, irrespective of age or length of service, who shall have received injuries in the performances of his duty which wholly incapacitated him for regular or other vocation or who shall through sickness so contracted become so incapacitated, may be awarded such sum as a pension for such length of time as may be determined."

Two or three concerns who follow no definite principle in their pensioning of aged employees report either that "this matter has been decided upon the merits of each individual case" or while stating that they have "no regular pension system" assure us that "we do care for our old employees and those who may be incapacitated from continuing in regular work by providing such other employment as is best suited to each individual case."

The small total number of railroad pensioners in this State, actually provided for in their old age, when compared with the number of workers engaged in the transportation systems in Pennsylvania is even more significant when it is apparent from our preceding examination, that practically all the leading railroads, operating partly or wholly within the boundaries of this State, and a great many of the smaller roads, have some form or another of provision for their aged employees. The fact that only such a negligible number take advantage of these provisions can only be explained by the fact that before a service pension is actually awarded, one must have lived up to the most stringent requirements and provisions

(3) TEACHERS' RETIREMENT FUNDS IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The two primary functions of old age retirement systems are: (1) The protection of the individuals and their dependents against the contingencies of old age and disability. (2) It provides a means of improving the efficiency and raising the standard of the services rendered, by eliminating from the service, the superannuated and disabled, who are no longer efficient, and by attracting better ability into the particular service. It is hardly necessary to point out, that nowhere are these functions of greater significance than in our educational system. It is of paramount importance that the best available talent and ability, and that men and women of superior kind should be attracted to our schools for the development of the moral character and ideals of our children. Similarly, no one, to be sure, will question the justice of providing our teachers—the moulders of the future generations—against the day when they are no longer able to provide for themselves.

The problem of relief from superannuation is even more aggravated in the case of teachers. It is an admitted fact that our teachers are not adequately remunerated. In many instances, although their wages are on par with the lowest
